MEAT TRUST BEFORE GRAND JURY HERE

Federal Investigation Under Way and Chicago Packers Can Be Reached If Indicted.

JERSEY FAILED TO GET THEM

The Same Companies and Same Men Being Considered Who Were Wanted for Trial in Hudson County.

It was learned yesterday on authority that the Federal Grand Jury for the Southern District of New York had entered upon an exhaustive investigation of the so-called Meat Trust.

When United States District Attorney Henry A. Wise was asked about the report he refused to discuss it, saying it was an inviolable rule with him not to speak of things which he had brought to the attention of the Grand Jury. He would not deny, however, that such an investigation of the meat packing houses, many of whose officers and Directors are already under indictment in the Federal court of Northern Illinois, was under way. His reticence was regarded as significant.

It is understood that District Attorney Wise is laying before the Federal investigators whatever facts he has been able to obtain regarding the alleged connection between the National Packing Company, Morris & Co., Swift & Co., Armour & Co., and the Hammond Packing Company, all big Western concerns doing a large business in this city and State.

Some of the individuals supposed to be concerned in the investigation are J. Ogden Armour, A. Watson Armour, Arthur Meeker, Edward Morris, Louis F. Swift, Edward F. Swift, Edward Tilden, L. A. Carton, Thomas E. Wilson, Thomas J. Connors, F. A. Fowler, Charles H. Swift, L. H. Heyman, James E. Bathgate, Jr., George H. Edwards, F. V. Cooper, D. E. Hartwell, Henry P. Darlington, Lemuel B. Patterson, and A. A. Fuller.

All these men and the packing companies named were indicted about a year ago by the Grand Jury of Hudson County, N. J., but have not been arrested and brought to trial, because Prosecutor Pierre P. Garven of Hudson County has been unable to get them in the jurisdiction of the New Jersey court.

Lawyers were saying yesterday that an investigation by a Federal Grand Jury of this district was a far more serious thing for the meat packers than the inquiry a year ago in Jersey City. District Attorney Wise can get the men the Federal Grand Jury indicts anywhere in the United States, while Prosecutor Garven must wait for them to come into his State.

Some idea of how the packing companies themselves regard the situation is in evidence from the fact that several of the leading firms involved have already sent leading lawyers from Chicago and Middle West packing centres to this city to watch the investigation.

So far much secrecy has been maintained about the Federal Building regarding the work of the Grand Jury in this particular. Lawyers who looked as if they knew a great deal more than they would admit, shook their heads and would say nothing. But some of the officers of the packing companies were more communicative.

The New Jersey Grand Jury accused the National, the Morris, Swift, and Armour Companies with being closely allied, tracing the connection through the identity of their several Boards of Directors. These companies were also accused of trying to corner the market in meat in Jersey City on March 1, 1908, so as to produce an artificial scarcity and thus raise the price, cold storage warehouses being used, it was declared, for that purpose.

Prosecutor Garven of Hudson County said last night that he, too, had heard of the investigation on this side of the river, but had not been in direct communication with District Attorney Wise. He did not know what progress was being made, but was sure that an indictment by the Federal Grand Jury here would have a far-reaching effect.

WICKERSHAM AFTER THE TRUST

Hopes to Get Packers in New York if They Gain Immunity in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Grand Jury investigation of the meat packers in New York is a part of the general plan of the Department of Justice to bring the Beef Trust people to trial, if possible.

Ever since Mr. Wickersham became Attorney General he has been watching the operations of the packers. It will be recalled that he found on the docket a proceeding against the packers in Chicago, which he dismissed soon after he came into the department. At that time he wrote a letter to Edward Morris warning the packers if their further procedure warranted prosecution it would be undertaken.

It was about a year after that letter that the first open move by Mr. Wickersham was made. He had had his agents watching the packers closely in the meantime, and had evidence on which criminal indictments of packers in Chicago were procured.

At the same time a proceeding in equity was begun for an injunction to dissolve the National Packing Company, which is accused of being the active agent of the alleged combination in restraint of trade. The packers resisted the trial of this equity proceeding until recently, when Mr. Wickersham ordered it dismissed, and declared openly that he would use every effort to force the indicted men to trial on the criminal charge. Since then the packers have been doing their utmost to avoid trial, and have been pleading that the old immunity bath obtained from Judge Humphrey five years ago still holds good. That immunity was given them on the ground that in the investigation of the meat combine by James R. Garfield, then Chief of the Bureau of Corporations, they had given testimony which exempted them from prosecution.

It is known that the Department of Justice has some fear now that this plea of the packers may save them, and it is understood that the New York Grand Jury proceedings are part of an investigation that may lead to new indictments in case the prosecution of those obtained in Chicago is barred. The department hopes to get the Chicago cases to trial about April 1.

TRAIN HOLD-UP IN ST. LOUIS.

Bandits Bind and Rob Express Messenger in Business District.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 28.—Two masked bandits held up the incoming Iron Mountain train from Hot Springs and Texarkana, Ark., and other Southwestern points at 8 o'clock to-night in the heart of the business district of South St. Louis, and rode through the city, hopping off the train near the Tower Grove station in West St. Louis, a distance of three miles from the scene where the invaders first covered the express messenger with their six-shooters.

It was one of the most spectacular and daring of the train hold-ups in St. Louis and suburbs, of which there have been three others in practically a year—two in St. Louis City and two in St. Louis County.

The bandits boarded the train at the Broadway station and walked through the passenger coaches to the express car. Just before entering the express car they donned their masks, and hurling open the door cried, "Hands up!" to Express Messenger McRoberts of 4,109 Page Boulevard, St. Louis.

"Open that box," the men demanded of McRoberts, meaning the tin box in which shipments of currency and documents are placed for way stations. McRoberts complied and the men took the cash, but threw aside express orders and other papers. They demanded, with threats of death, that McRoberts open the safe in which shipments of currency and other valuables are consigned to long-distance points. The express messenger succeeded in convincing the men that the safe could not be opened until the station was reached where the first package was to be delivered.

McRoberts estimates that the bandits got only $2,000, but officials of the Pacific Express Company refuse to estimate the loss. The police are inclined to believe that the loss was much greater.

Pocketing the money, one of the desperadoes, who addressed his companion as "Nebraska," said:

"Well, we better bind him." He drew a stout cord from his coat pocket and tied the messenger's hands and feet.

"Now, let us sing," said the leader. He started off with a rag-time air and the other bandits joined in the chorus, humming softly. They continued their singing until the train reached a crossing near the Tower Grove Station, where the men opened the side door of the express car and hopped off, the train having slackened its speed as it approached the station. Shortly after the train passed the Tower Grove Station the express messenger freed himself and notified Conductor Gregg, who stopped the train and telephoned to the police.

Detectives have so far found no clue to the identity of the bandits.

NEW ENGINE MAKES A RECORD

Covers 235 Miles on the Pennsylvania in 209 Minutes.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Speed records on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad were lowered to-day by General Supt. G. W. Creighton of the Eastern Grand Division, who made the run from Altoona to this city, 235 miles, in 209 minutes.

The local officials of the Pennsylvania had been invited to a dinner in honor of Vice President Pugh's retirement, and Superintendent of Motive Power R. N. Durborow suggested to Creighton that it would be a good opportunity to see what the new E 6 locomotive, No. 5,075, recently turned out of the Juniata shops, could do.

The engine has only two driving wheels on each side and otherwise differs from other locomotives. No. 5,075 was coupled to two coaches, and Creighton's private car, occupied by Creighton, Durborow, A. W. Gibbs, General Superintendent of Motive Power; C. A. Preston, Superintendent of the Middle Division, and others. At exactly 8 o'clock Engineer A. Shull opened the throttle and the train started. Harrisburg, 131.1 miles, was reached in 113 minutes. A stop of three minutes was made at Harrisburg to change crews, but the same locomotive hauled the train over the Philadelphia Division. At 9:56 the train left Harrisburg with Engineer J. H. Shenk at the throttle, and reached Broad Street station at 11:32, the 104 miles having been covered in 96 minutes.

This table shows the train's record for the run:

| | |
|---|---|
| Altoona to Harrisburg | 131.1 miles |
| Running time | 113 minutes |
| Average speed per hour | 69.6 miles |
| Harrisburg to Philadelphia | 104 miles |
| Running time | 96 minutes |
| Average speed per hour | 64.8 miles |
| Altoona to Philadelphia | 235.1 miles |
| Running time, entire trip | 209 minutes |
| Av'ge speed, entire trip, per hour | 67.2 miles |

Allowance for reduced speed in running from the city limits of Philadelphia to the Broad Street Station is to be made, so that the train must have made much over the average speed at times on the run.

The runs between Altoona and Harrisburg, between Harrisburg and Philadelphia, and between Altoona and Philadelphia were made in record time. The 18-hour flyer has a schedule of 145 minutes over the Middle Division, and 119 minutes over the Philadelphia Division.

Warner Owes Lewis Estate He Administered $11,800, Winsted Court Decides.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Feb. 28.—Ex-Judge Arthur D. Warner of Woodbury, was criticised in a decision of Judge William S. Case of the Superior Court, given out here this afternoon.

Ex-Judge Warner is held to account by the court for $11,871 belonging to the $100,000 estate of George B. Lewis of Woodbury, of which he was the administrator. The present location of Warner is unknown here. When last heard of he was in Northern Massachusetts. Whether criminal action will be brought against him could not be learned to-night.

Warner was charged by the estate with having presented a false inventory and accountings with intent to defraud the beneficiaries of the estate. The case was tried here almost a year ago after being in the courts since June, 1904. It attracted wide attention in the State. There were 35 counts in the complaint.

The suit was brought by consent of the Woodbury Probate Court for the benefit of Betsy A. Lewis of New Haven, one of the legal heirs under the will of George B. Lewis, and for Charles G. Lewis of Southbury, and A. W. Mitchell of Woodbury, as executors of the estate of Charlotte L. Lewis of Woodbury, and also George L. Booth, Mary E. Booth, Emma Capeb, and Ella N. Jolly of Fayette, N. Y., children of Jerusha Booth, sister of George B. Lewis, and Betsy A. Lewis, as assignee of Charles L. Booth. Damages of $20,000 were asked.

HARRISON CHOSEN AT CHICAGO PRIMARY

Democrats Name Him as Candidate for Mayor—Merriam Wins for Republicans.

SUFFRAGISTS TAKE A HAND

Miss Van Slangerland of New York Is Roughly Ejected from a Polling Booth—A Voter Shot Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 28.—Charles E. Merriam, an Alderman and a professor at Chicago University, was chosen as the Republican candidate for Mayor at the primaries to-day, and Carter H. Harrison, formerly Democratic Mayor for four terms, received the Democratic nomination.

The most bitter struggle was between Harrison and Graham. Harrison was backed by the "Hinky-Dink" and "Bathhouse John" organization of the Red Light district, by the "gray wolves" of the Board of Aldermen, and by the Hearst papers on the cheap gas and anti-corporation issues. Graham was supported by Roger Sullivan, member of the National Democratic Committee. The corporation cry set the voters against him, and Harrison leads by at least 2,000 plurality. Merriam leads his Republican opponents by 25,000.

The election will take place April 4. The Municipal Voters' League and nearly all the daily papers urged the defeat of the five Aldermen known as the gray wolves of the board—Daily, Egan, Cullerton, Kunz, and McYerny, but they were all renominated.

Riotous scenes attended a visit of suffragists to a polling place at 475 State Street this afternoon. Nellie B. Van Slangerland of New York, who is associated with Lady Tennessee Claflin Cook, accompanied by two Chicago champions of the cause, was mobbed, and her hat was torn from her head while being ejected from the polling place whither she had gone to investigate.

The Chicago companions of Miss Van Slangerland were Mrs. Minoa S. Jones and Miss Frances Shaw. They, too, were roughly handled by the men at the booth in protecting Miss Van Slangerland.

Upon entering the polling place Miss Van Slangerland walked directly to one of the election clerks, Tony Green, and began to talk on the subject of woman suffrage.

"Get out of here!" Green shouted. "We haven't time to talk with women," and he began to push her toward the door.

"No you don't. No you don't," she protested. "You can't put me out of here like that."

The other women screamed, but came to their companion's assistance. Breaking from the grasp of several men who had joined in the fray, Miss Van Slangerland jumped to the top of a dry goods box and began to speak in excited tones.

"Woman suffrage!" she cried, "Woman suffrage!"

From out of the crowd an arm reached and grasped her skirt. She gave a frightened cry, toppled from her improvised platform, and dropped in a heap on the floor. Her hat was torn from her head, her skirt was ripped, and her hair was disheveled and fell over her face. Her two friends seized her and lifted her to her feet. At this juncture a squad of police rushed into the building and restored order.

On the north side Arthur Quinn, son of James A. Quinn, former city sealer under Harrison, killed a voter with whom he had quarreled while the man was under arrest. The victim was a hod carrier. There was a general fight at 701 North Clark Street, in which Quinn and the voter, whose name is Richard Clark, with several other men, took part. In the mêlée Quinn was shot in the leg. The crowd scattered and Clark was caught by a detective. Quinn followed and fired at Clark while the latter was in the grasp of the officer. The victim died on the way to the hospital.

University professors and several students were watchers at the polls in the Red Light district. Dr. Ferdinand Schevill, Professor of History, thought the district had been maligned. He said the only objection to the primary was the tremendous expense of manning the polls. Ike Blum, manager of Frieberg's dance hall, which helps to transform the district at night, was the professor's companion watcher. Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, Supervisor of Physical Education, and Prof. J. H. Tufts were also Red Light district watchers, but they all went home before the lights were turned on.

When the results were known, the faithful followers of "Hinky Dink" Kenna and "Bathhouse" John Coughlin began to celebrate and by midnight the district was itself again. Harrison got every vote that Kenna and Coughlin could deliver.

EARL TRAMPS 111 MILES.

Attache of Earl Grey, Walking from Montreal to Ottawa on Wager, Wins.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Feb. 28.—After tramping all the way from Montreal on the tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railway to win a wager, Earl Percy, eldest son of the Duke of Northumberland and an attaché to Earl Grey, arrived in the city at 7:30 o'clock this evening, tired but triumphant.

Earl Percy started from Montreal before 7 o'clock on Sunday morning, and therefore walked the 111½ miles, which is the distance from Montreal to Ottawa, in three days, or at the rate of more than 37 miles a day.

The endurance and pluck revealed by the feat will be evident to all who have ever had occasion to tramp along an exposed stretch of railway track on such cold blustering days as were Sunday and yesterday. The Earl was lightly attired, scorning to wear an overcoat, and trusting to the brisk physical exercise for warmth.

To add to his difficulties there arose a rather interesting complication at Plantagenet, one of the places where warm clothing and fresh boots had been left for him in the event he should need them. The man in whose charge the articles had been placed would not believe that the individual who applied for his new clothing was a real Earl and absolutely refused to give up the goods in his charge. Undaunted by this predicament, the nobleman shrugged his shoulders and once more "hit the ties," but this morning the staff at Government House were busy over the wires trying to locate the "Doubting Thomas" at Plantagenet to get back the property of the Earl.

The motive prompting Earl Percy to undertake his very difficult and uncomfortable feat is known to have been a wager made very recently. The identity of the other party to the wager is not known, but it is known that it was a sporting wager, and Earl Percy wins.

Under the conditions he was to walk from Montreal to Ottawa over the tracks of any railway, to arrive in time for the Paardeburg dinner, which took place at Rideau Hall to-night, and when the guests sat down the Earl was among them. He suffered no ill effects from his long tramp.

Earl Percy is well known in New York, his most recent visit there being to attend the Decies-Gould wedding, at which he was one of the ushers.

NIGHT IN QUARANTINE FOR LINER CARONIA

Illness of the Third Officer, at First Supposed to be Typhoid, Detains Whole Shipful.

SHIP FROM MEDITERRANEAN

She Touched at Naples, so Utmost Care in Diagnosis Is Being Taken Before Releasing Her 1,375 Passengers.

The Cunarder Caronia, which arrived in Quarantine from Naples and other Mediterranean ports at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, was still held there this morning as the result of a suspicious case of sickness that developed on the voyage. At 10 o'clock last night the bacteriologists who are investigating the case were still at work, but they had gone far enough to warrant Dr. Doty, the Port Health Officer, in stating that the chances were good for the vessel's release from Quarantine this morning.

Third Officer Robert Alexander of the Caronia is the person who is ill. He was removed from the ship to Hoffman Island soon after the liner arrived in Quarantine and the work of diagnosing his illness was begun. Mr. Alexander became ill the latter part of the voyage and Dr. J. F. McDermott, the Caronia's surgeon, wirelessed to New York that the case appeared to be typhoid fever.

As soon as the Caronia anchored off the Quarantine Station, doctors from Dr. Doty's staff boarded her and went to the ship's hospital, where Mr. Armstrong was. A preliminary examination soon convinced them that it was not a case of typhoid fever, and they so reported to Dr. Doty, who then ordered Mr. Alexander removed to the Reception Hospital on Hoffman Island and the Caronia detained in Quarantine until the bacteriologists had determined the nature of his illness.

Besides her crew of about 450 officers and men, the Caronia has on board 1,375 passengers, of whom 351 are in the [illegible] The news that Alexander had been removed from the ship and that the liner would be held until the Port doctors knew the nature of his sickness spread quickly to all parts of the ship, and all sorts of rumors as to what ailed the officer spread throughout the ship quickly. Many of the passengers showed signs of nervousness despite the reassurance of the doctors that the ship was held purely as a matter of precaution and that the chances were that Mr. Alexander was not suffering from any contagious disease.

The Caronia on her voyage here touched at Naples, where cholera was epidemic last Summer, but is understood to have been eliminated since. Neither Dr. Doty or any of his assistants would say last night that they had any reason to suspect that Alexander was ill of cholera, and late yesterday afternoon Dr. Doty said that the indications were that the illness was not serious. At 10 o'clock last night it was stated at Quarantine that all the evidence pointed to a clean bill of health for the Caronia, and that there was every reason to believe that she would be allowed to proceed to her pier the first thing this morning. Dr. Doty said he would make a final examination at 6 o'clock this morning as a matter of precaution. He seemed to have little doubt that the examination would confirm the view of the case given out last night.

No visitors were permitted to board the Caronia yesterday, and early in the afternoon the revenue cutter with the customs officers on board was sent back to the Battery with instructions that they would not be needed before this morning at the earliest. The return of the cutter with this information caused a lot of speculation along the water front, and many inquiries were made at the Cunard offices by relatives and friends of passengers who had waited at the Cunard pier for several hours expecting to hear that the liner had left Quarantine. It was not until after 4 o'clock in the afternoon that they received information that the vessel would be held over night.

"We have every reason to believe now," Dr. Doty said last night, "that Mr. Alexander's illness is not serious, and that the Caronia will be released in the morning. Purely as a matter of precaution I shall take another look at the cultures made by the bacteriologists early to-morrow morning, and will then decide what to do. There is little reason to doubt that the decision will be a clean bill of health for the Caronia and her immediate release from Quarantine."

Among the cabin passengers on the Caronia are Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Arensburg, Charles J. Baker, Mrs. M. R. Ball, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Bremer, E. A. Balyeat, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Colwell, E. W. Cottrell, Mr. and Mrs. A. D'Amico, F. E. Driggs, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Frost, William Fordyce, J. H. Gregory, Miss C. Grosvenor, J. L. Gilkey, Miss Gilkey, Mrs. H. E. Godshalk, Mrs. M. ## ONLY 4-PAGE PAPERS IN CHICAGO TO-DAY

Printers' Strike in Hearst's Office Prompts Others to Reduce Their Size to His Capacity.

TO PRINT LITTLE NEWS

Papers to be Sold, but to Contain No Advertisements—Printers Refused Order to Return to Work.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Union printers employed by The Chicago Examiner and The Chicago American, William R. Hearst's morning and afternoon newspapers here, went out on a strike at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and remain out in spite of the order of President Lynch of the International Typographical Union, that they return to work.

This telegram was received to-night by the Chicago Publishers' Association:

> Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 28.
>
> Strike unauthorized, illegal, and without warrant. You are authorized to publish this dispatch. JAMES M. LYNCH,
>
> President International Typographical Union.

The result is that no morning paper to-morrow will contain more than four pages, the other morning papers declining to publish larger papers than the Examiner, thus handicapped, is able to print. None of the papers will carry advertising, and the Examiner was forced to etch its first page in order to publish.

At first it was planned to print a few hundred papers only and permit the Inter-Ocean to deliver its edition containing its legal advertising in the section of the city known as the "loop" district. But each paper was to sell only 100 copies over the counter and not go on the street or deliver anywhere in the city. It was finally decided to print four pages without any advertising in any paper. All will be free to deliver and sell the four-page papers as usual.

The differences between The Examiner and The American and their printers grew out of the contention of the printers that they are not receiving the union scale of wages. The columns of the Hearst papers are 13 ems pica wide, those of the other papers 13½ ems, and payment is on the basis of a minimum production of 5,000 ems per hour. The Hearst compositors contend that their 13-em columns should be measured as 13½ ems, maintaining that it takes as much time to set the narrower width as the larger.

Conferences between representatives of the printers and the publishers of the city have been continued throughout the afternoon and evening, with the announced result that so far the publishers are standing by the managers of the two Hearst newspapers, declaring that they are abiding by the agreement made with their printers. They further state that an offer of arbitration was made to the dissatisfied printers and that this offer was entirely ignored, the by-laws of the union being broken in doing so.

In connection with their difficulties with the Typographical Union the Chicago Publishers' Association gave out to-night this statement for the morning papers of March 1:

"On Feb. 3, 1911, James M. Lynch, President of International Typographical Union; J. W. Hayes, Vice President International Typographical Union; Hugo Miller, Vice President International Typographical Union, together with H. N. Kellogg, Labor Commissioner of American Newspaper Publishers' Association; Herman Ridder, President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and George C. Hitt, publisher of The Indianapolis Star, the six constituting the International Board of Arbitration to adjust the scale of wages for printers employed in the offices of the daily newspapers in Chicago, met in this city and made an award, establishing a scale of wages for members of the Chicago Typographical Union 16 employed on the daily newspapers of Chicago.

"The award went into effect at once at all the offices. After it became effective a question was raised by printers employed in the office of The Chicago American and The Chicago Examiner, the printers claiming that they were entitled to be paid on the basis of 13½ ems per line, whereas the actual type set measured less than 13 ems per line. The columns of The Chicago Examiner and The Chicago American are slightly narrower than the columns of all the other Chicago newspapers. Therefore, in demanding compensation for type set on base of wider columns the President of the union insisted that the printers should be paid for work which they did not do.

"The management of these two papers, in compliance with the contract with the printers' union, agreed to submit the disputed question for settlement to the joint standing committee, a body authorized under the contract between the typographical union and the newspapers to settle all differences of opinion. This offer of settlement was made in the communication by Victor F. Lawson, President of the Chicago local American Newspaper Publishers' Association, in a letter dated Feb. 18. It was renewed in a letter dated Feb. 28. In spite of these requests and also in spite of an offer made by the management of The Chicago American and The Chicago Examiner to deposit the small difference in wages with the President of the Chicago Typographical Union, No. 16, to be held by him until the final award was made, a strike was called at 3 P. M. to-day in the offices of the two newspapers mentioned. This strike was ordered in violation of the most binding contract and agreement to refer any and all matters in dispute to the standing committee for settlement. In taking that action the union violated its own by-laws as well as its contract and arbitration agreement.

"In consequence of the unwarranted strike of the Typographical Union, all of the Chicago morning papers will print only four pages to-morrow.

"On the 4th of February The Chicago Examiner and The Chicago American accepted with the other newspapers of Chicago the scale of wages for printers agreed upon by the International Board of Arbitration, consisting of James M. Lynch, President of the International Typographical Union; J. W. Hays, Vice President of the International Typographical Union; Hugo Miller, Vice President of the International Typographical Union, and Herman Ridder, President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association; George C. Hitt, publisher of The Indianapolis Star, and H. N. Kellogg, Labor Commissioner of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

"The local typographical union had nine months' notice that the Examiner and

FIRE PANIC IN PICTURE SHOW.

Spreads to Second Floor, Where Women Foresters Get Out by Fire Escapes

Some 300 persons, most of them women and children, were thrown into a panic when a roll of film caught fire and blew up in the moving picture theatre on the ground floor of Mount Morris Auditorium, 1,364 Fifth Avenue, at 10 o'clock last night. The flames spread rapidly and the audience made a dash for the exits, many being knocked down and some of them trampled upon.

Tillie Singerman of 1,327 Fifth Avenue, the pianist, who tried to quiet the crowd by playing popular tunes, was dragged from her seat by an excited rescuer. She was pulled away from him in the rush and was bruised and only barely conscious when she finally was carried into the street by a policeman.

The fire went up through the building, spreading on the third floor, which was not being used, but doing only slight damage on the second floor. There forty-five women were attending a meeting of the Lady Foresters of America, and there was intense excitement among them. They reached the street safely by way of the fire escapes in the front and rear.

Firemen put the blaze out after half an hour's work at a loss of about $1,000.

FUNERAL, THEN A WEDDING.

Mother Buried in the Afternoon and Son Married in the Evening.

The Rev. Dr. Andrew C. Wilson, Rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church in Brooklyn, preached the sermon at the funeral service of Mrs. James A. Babcock yesterday afternoon, and in the evening married her son, Gates Babcock, to Miss Addie V. Murr of 985 Bedford Avenue.

The wedding had been set for last evening long before Mrs. Babcock fell ill, and although all the invitations were recalled, as her illness grew serious, one of the dying woman's last requests was that her son's wedding should not be delayed. This wish was respected and the wedding was held last night at the bride's home. Only the immediate family witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Babcock died on Monday at her home, 153 Lafayette Avenue, and the funeral services were held there. Gates Babcock is a graduate of Adelphi College and a member of the Cranford Golf Club and the Crescent Athletic Club. Miss Murr, who is the daughter of Jacob Murr, is a member of the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club.

BIG DOG ATTACKS POLICEMAN.

St. Bernard Seizes His Leg and Tears It from Knee to Ankle.

As Policeman John E. Durkin of the Stapleton Station, Staten Island, was walking along Bay Street yesterday morning he noticed approaching him a St. Bernard dog belonging to Robert Milton, and so large that he is a familiar figure in the neighborhood. Durkin had often seen him, and their relations had always been entirely cordial. But yesterday the dog walked up to the policeman and gripped his leg with such ferocity that it was torn from the knee to the ankle.

Durkin found his club useless against the animal's bulk, and it was Policeman Ross, running to the rescue, who knocked the dog into insensibility. Durkin's wounds were cauterized and he is now laid up at his home, while the dog is under a ten-day inspection of the Board of Health. Milton had never known the animal to be anything but gentle.

MOTOR CAR FACTORY BURNED

Plant of Hayes Automobile Company at Kokomo, Ind., Destroyed.

KOKOMO, Ind., Feb. 28.—Fire that started from an explosion from a quart of gasoline with which a workman was cleaning a new automobile to-day destroyed the plant of the Hayes Automobile Company, causing $750,000 damage. It is believed that a workman, George Bauer, lost his life in the flames. All the other 500 men and women employed in the factory were accounted for to-night.

Short circuiting of an electric wire caused the explosion, in the assembly room of the factory. The flames ran through the building and to a second building. Many of the employes had to run for their lives.

One hundred completed automobiles were destroyed. The insurance carried by the company is $250,000.

A HARVARD RUNAWAY MATCH.

Graham Glass, Former Guardian of Gammons, Weds Miss Helen Roche.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 28.—Following the example of his one-time ward, Nelson Gammons, who married the divorced wife of Rufus Gaynor, Graham Glass, a senior at Harvard, has run away with Miss Helen Roche of Roxbury, to Nashua, N. H., where they were married. Glass is the son of Spencer Glass of Portland, Ore., and was at one time the student guardian of young Gammons. He is 22 years old.

The couple were accompanied to Nashua by Miss Peggy Walton of Rosalindale and Alden Chase, a senior at Harvard, who acted as bridesmaid and best man, respectively.

GIRL THREE WEEKS IN COMA.

Found Senseless in School Laboratory—Condition Due to a Dream.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 28.—Elizabeth Hamilton, a 15-year-old junior in Elyria High School, is lying in a state of coma to-day, through the influence of a dream which she had three weeks ago. Dr. Edward Sheffield so far has failed to arouse her, and says she is a victim of something like self-hypnotism. The girl, who has been trying to complete the four-year course in three years and has been reading psychology and studied the chapters on suggestion and auto-suggestion, told R. P. Vaughan, the chemistry instructor at the high school, about her dream.

"I saw myself locked in a laboratory at school," she said. "I couldn't get out. Fumes from the chemicals overpowered me. I died."

She asked Vaughan yesterday to allow her to do some experimenting in the laboratory. At noon he found the door open, and, without looking in, locked it. Returning in the afternoon, he found the girl senseless.

"I think that when she found the door locked she believed her dream had come true," says Dr. Sheffield. "She was suffering from overstudy. Rest will probably effect a cure."

SHEEHAN IS FOR A NEW CAUCUS

Says He'll Accept New Candidate If Majority Names One—Insurgents Won't Consent.

INTIMATE THAT IT'S A TRICK

Murphy's Nominee in Open Letter Declares He'll Stick Unless Majority Demands Otherwise.

ADMITS THE "VOTING TRUST"

But Can't Help It and Says Shepard Also Invoked It by Appealing to McCooey—Shepard Answers Murphy.

The possibility of a new caucus of the Democratic members of the Legislature on the Senatorship developed last night, when William F. Sheehan made public here a long open letter to the party Assemblymen and Senators, in which he said he would agree to another caucus if it was called by a majority of their number, and would give whole-hearted support to another candidate, if one were chosen.

When this announcement by Mr. Sheehan reached Albany the Democratic insurgents immediately went into conference, after which Senator Roosevelt, their leader, announced that Mr. Sheehan's statement would not change their position at all and that they would absolutely refuse to go into a new caucus at this time. He and others of the insurgents insinuated that Mr. Sheehan's declaration was nothing more nor less than a clever move on the part of Tammany to bring about a reaffirmation of Mr. Sheehan's choice.

It could not be learned whether or not Charles F. Murphy would direct that a new caucus be called. He could not be reached last night. One of his closest advisers said to THE TIMES:

"Mr. Sheehan's letter seems able to speak for itself. It is impossible to say what will happen. Our position still is that he is now the candidate of the party caucus."

No sympathizer with the insurgent movement of importance here could be found to discuss the announcement made in Albany yesterday by Maurice Minton that he is backing the opposition to Mr. Sheehan, and that he has a fund of $200,000, which he and his lieutenants will shortly proceed to spend in a campaign to oust Mr. Murphy from the leadership of Tammany Hall and John H. McCooey from the Democratic leadership in Brooklyn.

The statement was received with a good deal of interest by local politicians of both parties, who readily recall Mr. Minton's activity before the National campaign of 1904 to obtain for Alton B. Parker the Democratic nomination for President. Judge Parker is still Mr. Sheehan's law partner and close personal friend. It was also recalled that Mr. Minton was behind the organization of the chain of up-State Gaynor Clubs before the Democratic State Convention last Fall, despite the fact that he was repudiated by the Mayor. The insurgent leaders in Albany also repudiated all connection with Mr. Minton last night.

Doesn't Mean to Withdraw.

Mr. Sheehan asserts emphatically in his letter that he has no intention of withdrawing unless such a majority caucus is called. He lays emphasis upon his present position as the candidate of the party and upon the inviolability of majority rule.

"When the majority of all the Democratic representatives made their decision," he says, "I ceased to be an individual candidate. When the decree of the majority of our party's representatives was registered I became the embodiment of a great principle, sacred to all thoughtful men regardless of political opinion."

Mr. Sheehan takes up the "voters' trust" statements made by Mr. Shepard's letter of withdrawal, and seems to agree impersonally with them. "This leadership may not represent, in fact, seldom does represent, the entire sentiment of the party," says Mr. Sheehan. "But it cannot be denied that the men who have no direct relation, as officials, to public life exercise, or attempt to exercise, influence upon elective officials. That some of us might desire a different condition of affairs does not alter the existing fact."

Mr. Sheehan's letter raises a direct question of veracity between him and Mr. Shepard on the assertion by Mr. Murphy that Mr. Sheehan offered to withdraw from the field before the caucus if Mr. Shepard would do likewise. Mr. Murphy reiterated this assertion in his statement of Monday. "It has not and cannot be truthfully denied," says Mr. Sheehan, "that I offered to retire as a candidate for Senator if party peace could be preserved thereby, provided Mr. Shepard did likewise." Mr. Shepard, he says, "well knows, and every intelligent man in the State knows," that this is true.

Mr. Shepard issued a statement yesterday, after reading what Mr. Murphy had to say, in which he personally denied that any such proposition was made to him or to any of his followers, so far as he knows. Montgomery Hare, who managed Mr. Shepard's campaign, denied this assertion by Mr. Murphy, on Mr. Shepard's behalf, when it was first made.

Mr. Shepard could not be reached last night after Mr. Sheehan's letter was made public. It was given out late in the evening at his law office.

Mr. Sheehan's Letter.

Mr. Sheehan's letter reads:

"To the Democratic Members of the Legislature of the State of New York:

"In accordance with time-honored custom, and in the usual and regular way, a joint caucus of Democratic Senators and Assemblymen was called to meet at the Capitol on the 16th day of January last for the purpose of determining, by majority vote, who should be the candidate of the Democratic Party for United States Senator. Twenty-five Democratic Senators out of 29 and 66 Democratic Assemblymen out of 86 attended this joint caucus. Four Senators and 20 Members of Assembly did not participate in the caucus.

"The aggregate plurality at the last election of the 25 Democratic Senators entering the caucus was 87,555, and the aggregate plurality of the 4 who declined to participate was 2,096. The aggregate plurality of the 66 Democratic Assemblymen who participated in the caucus was 97,064, and the aggregate plurality of the 20 Assemblymen who were absent amounted to 5,055.

"The names of Mr. Shepard, Judge Herrick, and myself were formally presented to the caucus. After the merits of the various candidates had been fully discussed, the roll was called, and resulted in 22 votes for Mr. Shepard, 7 for Judge Herrick, and 62 for me. Having thus received the votes of a clear majority of all the elected Democratic members of the Legislature, I was declared the candidate of the Democratic Party for United States Senator.

"Prior to adjournment sine die the nomination was made unanimous, and this was evidenced by the fact that every one of the 91 men participating in the caucus cast their ballots for me the next day when the Senate and Assembly balloted separately, and on the following day when the votes were cast in joint session.

All Bound, He Insists.

"The effect of the caucus action, from a party point of view, was that all who participated therein, and all those who submitted or permitted their names to be submitted for consideration therein, were bound by the rule of the majority. When the majority of all the Democratic representatives made their decision, I ceased to be an individual candidate for this office.

"Up to that moment I had control of my own action, I simply represented the hope, the desire or the ambition of an individual; but when the decree of the majority of our party's representatives was registered, I became the embodiment of a great principle sacred to all thoughtful men regardless of political opinion.

"In this State and throughout the country it is recognized that this is a Government of and by the people through party rule and party responsibility. When the majority ceases to rule in a republic founded as ours has been upon party rule, there will be substituted for the representative Government under which we have developed into one of the greatest Nations of the world a Government by caprice, by prejudice and by emotion.

"There can be no middle ground in this question. Either we are to remain a country in which parties and principles shall govern or we must come to the point where men and not parties are to control. One of the most dangerous tendencies of the present day is to ignore parties and party obligations and to be swayed by the sense of devotion to some man or men who for the moment occupy the centre of the stage to the exclusion of the ideas or principles by which former generations of our countrymen were controlled. This destroys party government, and substitutes personal government, and should we reach the point where such action would be general and men gave their allegiance to individuals rather than to parties the republic could not last much longer.

Majority Rule a National Principle.

"The Democratic National Convention of 1904, in stating the fundamental principles of the party, declared for the 'absolute acquiescence in the will of the majority, the vital principle of republics,' and further declared that this was 'a doctrine which Democracy had established as a proverb of the Nation, and that it should be constantly invoked, preached, resorted to and enforced.' I quote the following editorial of The New York World of date June 29, 1904:

> Whoever may be nominated for President at St. Louis, it is certain that he will be a representative of safe and sane Democracy if the majority shall exercise its undoubted and rightful power. The votes pledged to Judge Parker represent only a part of the conservative strength of the convention. * * * Nearly all the uninstructed delegates are in favor of a campaign of sanity and good hope. When these elements unite, they can name Judge Parker or a Democrat of his type, if not under the two-thirds rule, then by the adoption of a Democratic majority rule. When conspirators combine to enforce minority rule, either as to committees, platform, or nominations, it will be the duty of those representing the majority to unite to give effect to the dominant Democratic sentiment of the country. The question as to the convention has narrowed itself to this: SHALL THE MAJORITY OR THE MINORITY RULE?

"Mr. Shepard in his recent letter says, in effect, that the minority who have refused to be bound by majority rule, and who are opposing my election, are performing a patriotic duty; that a great principle is involved in their stand because Mr. Murphy, the Democratic leader of Manhattan and the Bronx, has supported my candidacy, and that as to the members of the Legislature from that territory, he exercises a 'voting trust relationship'; in other words, that under the practice that has grown up the legislative representatives are not free agents, but that their powers are delegated to, or seized by, the head of the organization.

"Leaders" Always Have a Say.

"It is a matter of general knowledge that political organizations exist in every county of the State, and it will not be disputed that in every county and in every political subdivision throughout the country from which a representative to any legislative body, National, State, or local, is chosen, the leaders of a political party are looked to as men whose opinion will have weight and influence with the representative of such district.

"This is true not only of our country, but obtains in every country in which representative government exists. This leadership may not represent—in fact, seldom does represent—the entire sentiment of the party, but it cannot be denied that men who have no direct relation, as officials, to public life, exercise or attempt to exercise, in each of these counties, influence upon elective officials.

"That some of us might desire a different condition of affairs does not alter the existing fact. For instance, Mr. McCooey succeeded the late Senator McCarren as the Democratic leader of the County of Kings, where Mr. Shepard resides. The total number of Democratic representatives in the Legislature from the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx is 39, and from the County of Kings 23.

"It is an undisputed fact that in the month of December last Mr. Shepard's friends endeavored to have a caucus of the Democratic representatives from the County of Kings for the purpose of having them declare in favor of voting as a unit for Mr. Shepard in the party caucus. It is a matter of common knowledge that Mr. Shepard personally solicited the influence and assistance of Mr. McCooey, the Democratic leader of Kings County, in behalf of his candidacy for United States Senator. Mr. Shepard says in his letter, and I quote his language:

"'I did not ask any of the minority to vote for me, and none of them has given me a promise that he would vote for me.'

"I do not question the accuracy of this statement. It is doubtless true that Mr. Shepard did not personally ask any of the members of the Legislature to vote for him. Instead of this he appealed for aid and assistance to the head of what he now for the first time in his long political career chooses to term the Democratic 'Voting Trust' in Kings County, where there were twenty-three votes presumably subject to the same kind of dictation that Mr. Shepard complains was exercised by the leader of the New York County Democracy on the legislative representatives of that county.

Appeal to "Voting Trust" Not Vain.

"It cannot be said that Mr. Shepard's appeal to the head of the Kings County Democracy was ineffective, for of the twenty-two votes cast for him in the Democratic caucus, fifteen of them came from the County of Kings. My admiration for Mr. Shepard as a man, as a lawyer and as a scholar does not, I hope, preclude me from insisting that in this matter he shall be subjected to the same calm, fair, and dispassionate judgment which he invokes against me.

"Mr. Shepard makes the formal declaration that he is no longer a candidate for the Democratic Senatorship, and he suggests that I, too, should retire. The time was when I was willing to do this, as Mr. Shepard well knows, and as every intelligent man in the State knows. It has not and cannot truthfully be denied that on the 13th, 14th, and 15th of January, prior to the day of the holding of the Democratic caucus on Jan. 16, I offered to retire as a candidate for Senator, if party peace could be preserved thereby, provided Mr. Shepard did likewise. This condition was imposed in no spirit of personal hostility to Mr. Shepard or his candidacy. If party peace were to be preserved, it could necessarily be accomplished only by the withdrawal of both candidates.

"From the moment I became the choice of my party the situation, so far as I was concerned, necessarily changed. I was called upon by my party for exalted public service, and I was expected, and am expected, to be loyal and true to every principle involved in the call.

"I could not, if I would, now withdraw as my party's candidate for United States Senator, without justifying the position of Mr. Shepard and his political friends that the minority, and not the majority, should rule. It is true that the political records of many of his supporters who are old enough to have such records demonstrate that all their lives they have been in favor of minority rule, except when the majority rule was exercised in their behalf, and when not so exercised, the rule of the minority with them becomes a patriotic and paramount principle.

Shall the Minority Rule? He Asks.

"I submit that it is far more important for this country, and for the Democratic Party and its organizations in every State in the Union, that this assault upon majority rule shall be frustrated than that there should be a Democratic Senator from our State in Washington. While it is desirable and important that some worthy Democrat shall be chosen for this high office, that which is of transcendent importance is that the party's choice shall not represent the destruction of majority rule.

"Nor can excuse or justification be found in any statement that the objection of the minority, for the moment, is as to one candidate. Once the principle is established that the minority has the right to dictate who the majority shall not have, it is but a short step to the point where, through the process of elimination, every candidate must be rejected, except the choice of the minority.

"So far as I am concerned, the gentlemen of the minority—toward none of whom I have any personal antagonism, and, indeed, for some of whom I have much respect—will be compelled to seek justification and vindication of their course from the constituents who sent them to Albany in each case with the open or implied understanding that they would enter party caucuses and be bound in the selection of officers by majority decision.

"If, as Mr. Shepard and his friends are now loudly proclaiming, disaster shall in the near future overtake our party here and elsewhere, the gentlemen of the minority and the comparatively few who are behind them must be prepared to bare their backs to the condemnation that will follow their refusal to elect a Democratic Senator who was nominated in strict accord with party custom throughout the country.

"It is claimed by some of our most capable and experienced men that after a party has spoken in caucus or convention through a majority of its members there is no rule that permits or justifies a reversal of the decision so made, after final adjournment of the caucus or convention. It is claimed that the only way such a convention or caucus could be reassembled would be by the declination of the candidate. Personally, I believe in the strength and force of this argument. It is Democratic, and, I believe, unanswerable.

Can't Release His Adherents.

"Others claim that it is within the province of a majority of all the elected representatives, signified by writing, to reconvene a Democratic caucus prior to an election. Without expressing an opinion as to the soundness of this proposition it will, I think, be admitted that I cannot, as the representative of my party, release men elected as Democrats from an obligation which they owe to the party and not to me.

"I bear no contractual relations with those who are voting for me; if it be possible to release them the party must do so, not the party candidate. I shall remain as my party's candidate for United States Senator so long as the party desires me to do so, no matter what the personal consequences to me may be. Nor will I, by word or deed, do anything that will justify the minority in their efforts to frustrate the declared will of the majority.

"If, however, the majority of all the elected Democratic Senators and Assemblymen shall sign a call requesting that the Democratic caucus be reassembled, I shall loyally abide by the decision of that caucus, and if such caucus shall decide that another than myself shall be chosen to carry the party standard which I have been carrying since Jan. 16, 1911, I will give to such candidate my unqualified and whole-hearted support, but short of such action I shall not be a party to the destruction of the principle of majority rule. If another than myself should be chosen as the result of such majority action, I would in such event ask every Democrat in the Legislature to vote for the choice of the majority. Very truly yours,

"WILLIAM F. SHEEHAN.

"New York, Feb. 28, 1911."

Mr. Shepard's Denial.

Mr. Shepard's statement, which was given out by his secretary, reads:

"With respect to the statement made by Mr. Murphy, and which has been elsewhere made, that before the caucus a proposition was made that Mr. Sheehan would withdraw if Mr. Shepard would withdraw, Mr. Shepard said this morning that so far as he knew, or had heard, no such proposition was ever made.

"Very certainly no such proposition was at any time, either before the caucus or after it, brought to his attention or suggested to him, directly or indirectly, or, so far as he knows or has heard, to any of his friends or supporters."

Mr. Murphy did not go to Tammany Hall yesterday, and could not be found last night after Mr. Sheehan's letter was made public.

SAY NEW CAUCUS IS USELESS.

Insurgents Deride Sheehan's Suggestion—Plan to Expose His Backing.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—The statement made by William F. Sheehan to the effect that he would be willing to agree to a new caucus, and give his full support if another man was chosen, will not make any difference in the attitude of the insurgents who bolted the earlier caucus at which Mr. Sheehan was selected as the "party candidate" for United States Senator.

Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt, leader of the insurgents, said to-night after Mr. Sheehan's statement had reached the Capitol, that he would make no comment on it until he had read it in full. Senator Roosevelt and other members of the insurgent band made it plain, however, that they would not enter any new caucus, because they realized that, as was the case in the first caucus, it would be dominated by the Tammany contingent in conjunction with the Democratic representation from Brooklyn, which is as completely under Murphy's thumb as are the Senators and Assemblymen from his own political bailiwick.

Mr. Sheehan's expressed willingness to lend his support to any man whom the caucus might select was greeted here with derision. It was the general opinion among the insurgents, whom the declaration was designed to impress, that Mr. Sheehan's support would hinder rather than help any candidate who might take his place.

Following so closely upon Tammany Leader Murphy's belligerent statement, published this morning, this new move is regarded here as a trap set to lure the insurgents into a new caucus, and bind them to Mr. Murphy's candidate for Senator.

Dr. John Seeley, who represents one of the Steuben districts in the Assembly, and Assemblyman Lewis Patrie of Green, it was announced to-night, have made up their mind to desert Mr. Sheehan. Up to a late hour they had not decided whether they would change their votes at the joint session to-morrow or wait until others have been added to their number from the score or more of Assemblymen who are wearied of continuing useless support of a candidate who cannot be elected, and whose election their constituents do not desire.

A move will be made in the Legislature to-morrow with a view of bringing about a full investigation of the reports persistently circulated at the Capitol to the effect that Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy's support of William F. Sheehan for the United States Senate is part of a bargain in which a large campaign contribution, supplied either by Mr. Sheehan or the "interests" that are backing him, figured.

Assemblyman Andrew F. Murray, a Republican representing the Nineteenth Assembly District in New York, told THE TIMES correspondent to-night that he would take the initiative before the Assembly Judiciary Committee and urge that body to report favorably his concurrent resolution calling for an investigation of recent statements made by Assemblyman Harold J. Friedman to the effect that a municipal Judgeship was held out as a bait to him in return for deserting Edward M. Shepard and voting for Sheehan.

"The situation here has become such that if the dignity of this law-making body is to be preserved, and we are not to forfeit completely the respect of the people, there ought to be a thorough investigation of these rumors, which come with all the appearance of truth," said Mr. Murray. "With that end in view I shall ask the Judiciary Committee to draft a resolution of its own and put it to the Legislature, providing for an investigation of the reports that Mr. Sheehan raised a huge campaign fund for the use of the Democrats last Fall, and promises were made by Mr. Murphy that if the Legislature became Democratic he would be sent to the United States Senate. The dignity of the Legislature and the honor of the Democratic Party are alike at stake in this situation."

Mr. Murray, being a Republican and somewhat of an insurgent, if past performances go for anything, under ordinary circumstances would have small chance of getting any measure of this nature through a Legislature controlled by the Democrats. But it was pointed out to-night that in the step he contemplates he may count on the support of the insurgents, who have been numerically strong enough to prevent the election of Mr. Murphy's candidate, and would be strong enough, if uniting with the Republicans, to pass the proposed resolution.

The activities of Mr. Sheehan as a purveyor of a campaign fund last Fall are well known to a good many Democrats who are openly opposed to his candidacy. Not a few of the insurgent members had offers from Mr. Sheehan's friends expressing willingness to finance their campaigns. Some of the insurgents even admit that they benefited from this munificence, though there was involved at the time no pledge that they should support him for the United States Senate. But since the deadlock began, Mr. Sheehan, in his talks with insurgents, whom he was anxious to win over, has lost no opportunity to emphasize the lavish generosity with which he spent his money during the campaign for their benefit as a potent reason why he had claims on their gratitude and support in the fight he is making.

Paid Guerrillas, Sheehan Charges.

On the other hand, Mr. Sheehan's publicity bureau to-day turned loose a statement in which was made a charge that "thousands of dollars have been poured in here since the beginning of the Senatorial deadlock for the maintenance of a well-organized band of political guerrillas, who have been assiduously at work belittling the candidacy of the regular Democratic candidate for the United States Senate and at the same time discrediting the present Democratic administration and injuring the Democratic Party generally."

According to Mr. Sheehan's press agent Democratic legislators here have been gladdened with wine, lobsters, and smokes provided out of the munificent allowance of the aforesaid guerrillas, who, at the same time, "have kept up a running conversation, in which all of their well-trained abilities are directed in verbal assaults upon the regular Democratic candidate for the United States Senate." The statement is accompanied by a threat that the Democratic State Committee, when it meets to select a successor to Mr. Huppuch as Democratic State Chairman, will be ordered to investigate this phase of the Senatorship fight.

The statement made in Palm Beach by Richard Croker, the retired leader of Tammany Hall, has made a profound impression at the Capitol. Some of the Tammany members of the Legislature, who, however, were not willing to have their names used, gave vent to their bitterness at "the butting in of a man who was out of the game for good."

On the other hand, persons in a position to know declare that there is a good deal behind the statement of Mr. Croker, and that it was made by him only after he had talked to some influential leaders in Tammany Hall who had journeyed South for the express purpose of seeing him and getting his advice on the situation.

"I cannot be quoted," said one man closely affiliated with certain Tammany district leaders, "but Mr. Murphy's absence from the State capital is due partly to the fact that some district leaders who are dissatisfied with Mr. Murphy's leadership had gone down to Florida to see Croker. Murphy has made war on the men who were closest to Mr. Croker in the Tammany organization. He has subjected them to humiliation, and even to financial loss under the urging of his present advisers. This element in Tammany Hall is now up in arms against Murphy, and is only waiting for an opportunity to assert itself. This opportunity will soon be at hand."

Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt when asked to comment on Mr. Croker's statement that Mr. Sheehan should withdraw or be dropped said:

"It ought to help. When even a man who himself has been a boss says so it ought to have weight both with Mr. Sheehan and with Mr. Murphy."

A statement was made here to-day by Maurice Minton, the political promoter whom Mr. Sheehan's friends accuse of being behind the insurgent movement, to the effect that a fight would be commenced on Murphy in New York and on John McCooey, the Democratic leader of Kings. It was further stated that $200,000 were available for the purpose.

The little band of insurgents were somewhat aroused over the assertions made by Mr. Minton in his interview printed in THE TIMES this morning, in which he partly claimed credit for holding the insurgents together. The question of whether an answer should be made repudiating his assertions was discussed at their conference this evening. Finally it was determined not to dignify them by making any reply. It is a fact that Mr. Minton is not known personally or through his represetatives to any of the little group of insurgents who have been fighting Mr. Sheehan, and that the initiative in the anti-Sheehan movement did not come from him.

There was no break in the insurgent ranks, nor was there any breaking away from Mr. Sheehan by men who had been voting for him when the joint ballot was taken to-day. Here is the result:

Democrats: William F. Sheehan, 80; John D. Kernan, 11; Martin W. Littleton, 7; Morgan J. O'Brien, 2; William Sulzer, 2; John J. Hopper, 2; Alton B. Parker, 1; Martin H. Glynn, 1; John N. Carlisle, 1; J. Hampden Dougherty, 1; Edward M. Grout, 1.

Republicans: Chauncey M. Depew, 75.

Number of votes, 184; necessary to a choice, 93.

The only gain in the balloting to-day was made by Martin W. Littleton, but the insurgents said that no significance should be attached to the increase in his vote.

LITTLETON IS TAFT'S GUEST.

Barnes Also at the White House—No Letter from Murphy Yet.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Representative-elect Martin W. Littleton, Democratic candidate for United States Senator from New York, and William Barnes, Jr., Republican State leader of New York, were guests of President Taft at luncheon to-day at the White House. Mr. Littleton said there was no political significance to the occurrence.

Asked whether he had received a letter from Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, in answer to his request that W. F. Sheehan be prevailed upon to withdraw from the Senatorship contest, Mr. Littleton declared he had not, but presumed he would find it at his office in New York when he returned there to-morrow.

Benjamin A. Kelley, Water Register.

Water Commissioner Thompson has appointed Benjamin A. Kelley of Brooklyn Water Register for Manhattan, to succeed Clair Foster, resigned. Mr. Kelley is the son of Major J. D. Kelley of Brooklyn, a friend of Mayor Gaynor for many years. The young man is an athlete, belonging to several teams of the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn. He will receive the old salary of the office, $4,000. This was made $5,000 for Mr. Foster.

Baby of Eight Months and Its Father the Only Members of the Family Left.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Feb. 28.—While suffering mental derangement because of the death of her sister in the German Hospital, twelve hours before, Miss Jeanette Lewis, 26 years old, killed her mother, Mrs. Edward Lewis, and Edward Midlen, her nine-year-old nephew, this morning by giving them cyanide of potassium in a tonic prescribed for her parent. She then drained the contents of a glass containing the rest of the poisoned medicine herself. She died in fifteen minutes.

A long vigil at the bedside of her sister, Mrs. Edward Midlen, who died after being ill for months, is said to have unhinged Miss Lewis's mind. The tragedy occurred at the residence of her brother-in-law, Edward Midlen, 47 West Phil-Ellena Street, Pelham, one of the most fashionable sections of Germantown.

Miss Lewis and her sister were inseparable companions. The family came here from Baltimore three years ago and were well to do and cultured. During the sister's illness, Miss Lewis was devoted to her, and was prostrated by anxiety and worry. The younger Mrs. Midlen's death at the German Hospital following an operation performed in the hope of saving her life on Monday night; the triple tragedy at the Midlen home to-day, and the suicide of Mr. Midlen's brother, Walter, in the South last November have left the head of the household utterly prostrated and under the care of two physicians.

Miss Lewis was at her sister's bedside when she died. She returned to her brother-in-law's home with him, but could not sleep during the remainder of the night. She had two attacks of hysteria, but this morning at breakfast seemed more composed.

Every bit of evidence that the police and Frank Paul, the Coroner's detective, have been able to gather, seems to point to the fact that she determined to destroy the whole family at this time. Brooding upon the added responsibilities which she felt she would have to take up in assuming charge of the Midlen household and the care of the eight months' old baby of her married sister, which escaped her preparations for death, Miss Lewis carefully planned every step in the triple tragedy.

At 7:30 o'clock, when the first meal of the day was being cleared away by the servants, Miss Lewis sent Sarah Polhamus, the nurse maid, to the drug store of Dr. Clement Lowe, at Germantown Avenue and Philellena Street, for one ounce of cyanide of potasium. She told the maid that Miss Snyder, the trained nurse at the house, who had been attending Mrs. Midlen, wanted the poison and specified it should be in a blue bottle labeled poison.

"On the arrival of the nurse at my store," says Dr. Lowe, "and her request for the poison, I became suspicious; I thought she might wish to use the poison for herself. I therefore telephoned to Mr. Middlen's home. He answered the 'phone himself, and when I explained that the girl was waiting he said he would call the trained nurse to verify the order. Miss Lewis then came to the telephone and asked me to send the poison down at once, as it was all right. I understood that it was to be used for cleaning about the sickroom, and as so large a quantity was ordered I supposed it was quite right."

About 9 o'clock Mr. Midlen entered the drug store. He explained to Dr. Lowe that he wished to telephone to friends, as he did not wish his nine-year-old son to know his mother had died the night before. The lad was asleep in the house when he left. He finished several telephone conversations and returned to his home. Within ten minutes he again entered the durg store, this time hatless and out of breath.

"Come with me at once!" he cried to the doctor. "All of the family have fainted."

The druggist, who is a practicing physician, hurried down the street with him. He found Miss Lewis and her mother in the second-story front room and the boy Edward in the back room. All were still alive.

Dr. Albert Ferguson of 50 East Johnson Street, the family physician, and Dr. Alrich, a neighbor, soon arrived. The three physicians worked hard to save the women and the boy, but they died in a few minutes.

According to the doctors, Miss Lewis dissolved nearly all of the cyanide in a bottle of tonic, then, when her brother-in-law was downstairs and the trained nurse on the third floor, she gave her mother some of the mixture. She then went into the boy's bedroom and gave him some of the poison. After seeing the effects of the poison, she went into the front room with her mother and calmly drank what remained of the dose.

Mrs. Lewis managed to walk along the hall to the bathroom. There she fell and cut herself on the forehead and lips. Her grandson endeavored to reach the bathroom but fell to the floor of his room.

Sarah Polhamus, the maid, saw Mrs. Lewis and the boy fall, and her screams brough Mr. Midlen, who was downstairs, the trained nurse from the third floor, and the cook from the kitchen. Mrs. Lewis was lifted to her bed in the front room and her daughter was then discovered lying on the bed. The physicians were then summoned.

Dr. Midlen is the Philadelphia manager for the firm of Gorham & Co., silver merchants of Providence, R. I. He has an office at 925 Chestnut Street.

HOLD OFFICER FOR ASSAULT.

Citizen Charges He Was Beaten on Washington's Birthday.

Policeman William A. Walsh of the Westchester station was locked up in the Morrisania station last night charged with assault by Antonio Geunda of 1,955 Hunt Avenue, Bronx. He had been suspended earlier by Third Deputy Commissioner Walsh and will be arraigned in court to-day.

The complaint against Walsh was made yesterday afternoon although the alleged assault, according to Geunda, occurred on Washington's Birthday. Since then Geunda said, and in this he was supported by his daughter, who lives with him, he had been confined to his bed as a result of the beating which he charges Walsh administered to him.

Geunda and his daughter said that they had been passing a saloon a few doors from their home on Washington's Birthday when a stranger picked up a row with Geunda. Policeman Walsh was called by Geunda, and told them, father and daughter said, to go into their home. Mrs. Spitto, the daughter, obeyed, and was almost within her own door when, she says, she heard her father cry out, and turned to see Walsh beating him over the head with his club.

DANCE HALL LAW IN FORCE.

More Than 200 Closed Because Unable to Obtain Licenses.

The new law for the regulation of public dance halls by the city went into effect at midnight last night. The law was passed by the Legislature a year ago, but its going into effect was postponed to allow time for proprietors of the halls to conform with requirements.

Rigid investigations have been made by the Fire, Health, and Tenement House Departments, as a result of which about 200 of the halls will go out of business to-day. Under the law all have to obtain licenses.

"I will not issue a license to any place that does not conform absolutely to the law," said License Bureau Chief Oliver yesterday. "It is going to be a hard blow to many of the places which have not yet come up to the provisions of the act, but the law will be enforced.

"In the course of the various departmental investigations, defects were found in many places which condemned them. The owners had to cut new exits, provide better ventilation, and otherwise comply with the law. Where these things have been done licenses will be issued, but no other places will be allowed to open."

The most important provision of the new law is that restricting the sale of liquor in dance halls. It is:

> Dnacing shall not be permitted in any place in the City of New York licensed to sell liquors, except in a hotel having upwards of fifty bedrooms, unless such place shall also be licensed under Section 1,490. Violation of this provision shall be deemed a violation of the liquor tax law with respect to such premises. No liquors shall be sold, served, or given away, in any public dance hall in which dancing is advertised to be taught, or in which classes in dancing are advertised to be maintained, or in which instruction in dancing is given for hire; or in any room connected with such hall.

The law also has this section, to eliminate the "white slave" traffic in dance halls:

> The license of any public dance hall may be forfeited for habitual disorderly or immoral conduct permitted on the premises.

The passage of the law was obtained largely through the efforts of Mrs. Charles H. Israels, head of the Committee on Recreation for Working Girls.

KILLS MOVE TO ELECT SENATORS BY PEOPLE

Resolution Calling for Constitutional Amendment Defeated by the Aid of Democrats.

BORAH TO RENEW HIS FIGHT

Will Introduce His Plan Again at the Next Session—Southerners Against Federal Control of Elections.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—As was expected, the Constitutional amendment providing for the popular election of Senators was defeated in the Senate this morning by four votes. A two-thirds vote was required, and though the advocates of the measure polled the unexpected strength of 54 votes, the 33 negative voices were enough to kill the measure. The resolution was killed by a combination of Democrats and regular Republicans.

Twenty-one Democrats voted for the resolution, most of them coming from States where the negro question does not play an important part. This classification, however, is not inclusive, for Senators from Missouri, Maryland, South Carolina, Virginia, and Georgia were divided on the subject. The charge repeatedly made throughout the debate that the Sutherland amendment retaining for the Federal Government supervisory control of elections was offered only for the purpose of killing the resolution when amended was borne out by the result. Mr. Sutherland himself voted for the resolution, but the regulars, like Mr. Root and Mr. Depew, Mr. Lodge, and Mr. Hale, who had spoken for the amendment, voted against the amended resolution this morning.

The Democrats who voted for the resolution as amended were Messrs. Bailey, Chamberlain, Clarke, of Arkansas; Culberson, Davis, Gore, Martin Newlands, Overman, Owen, Paynter, Rayner, Shively, Simmons, Smith, of Maryland; Smith of South Carolina; Stone, Swanson, Taylor, Thornton, and Watson.

The Republicans who voted for it were Beveridge, Borah, Bourne, Bradley, Briggs, Bristow, Brown, Burkett, Burton, Carter, Clapp, Clark of Wyoming, Cullom, Cummins, Curtis, Dixon, Du Pont, Frye, Gamble, Gronna, Guggenheim, Jones, La Follette, McCumber, Nicholson, Nixon, Perkins, Piles, Smith of Michigan, Stephenson, and Sutherland.

The negative votes were: Republicans—Brandegee, Bulkeley, Burnham, Burrows, Crane, Depew, Dick, Dillingham, Flint, Gallinger, Hale, Heyburn, Kean Lodge, Lorimer, Oliver, Page, Penrose, Richardson, Root, Scott, Smoot, Warren, and Wetmore.

Democrats—Bacon, Bankhead, Fletcher, Foster, Johnston, Money, Percy, Taliaferro, and Tillman.

The absentees were Senators Aldrich, Crawford, Frazier, and Terrell of Georgia. It was announced that had they been present Mr. Frazier would have voted yea and Mr. Terrell nay. There was no announcement about Senator Aldrich.

Senator Crawford, entering after the roll call was complete, said he had been delayed by a stalled street car and would have voted yea.

In most of the Southern States practical popular elections result already from the primary system. The position of the States with a large negro population had been set forth last night by Mr. Percy. He described the conditions in Mississippi and said flatly that while his people favored popular elections, they did not think it worth the price of lost State control over elections.

Mr. Borah, who introduced the resolution, and has pushed it all this session, expects to reintroduce it at the next session. As ten of the Senators who opposed the measure will retire in March, he hopes to pass it without difficulty when the time comes.

LORIMER VOTE TO-DAY RECIPROCITY PUT OFF

Filibuster in the Senate Ends by Agreement After an All-Night Session.

EXTRA SESSION SEEMS SURE

Action on the Tariff Board and Appropriation Bills Expected to Take Up Rest of This Term.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—At 6:30 o'clock this evening the exhausting filibuster in the Senate came to an end with an agreement to vote on the Lorimer case at 1:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, and to make the House bill creating a permanent Tariff Board the unfinished business of the Senate. It took a roll call to carry out the latter part of this agreement, for most of the Democrats are against the bill, but it was taken up by the kind of a vote that has become a great rarity in the Senate of late years, with all the Republicans on the same side of the roll call, and all but three of the Democrats on the other side. The vote was 53 to 21 in favor of the motion.

Part of the agreement that ended the filibuster, but a part not sanctioned by official action in the Senate, is the promise of the old guard, most of whom had the idea of a Tariff Board, to stand by the insurgents for the rest of the session in the effort to force it to a final vote. The attempt is to be made to-morrow afternoon after some of the appropriation bills have been put through, and it is to be enforced by another all-night session, if necessary, at which the regulars are to remain on hand in order to vote for the bill if the opportunity occurs to obtain a roll call on it.

Senator Stone of Missouri seems to be about the only Democrat who is inclined to filibuster against a vote on the Tariff Board bill now, and the progressive Republicans are confident that they can wear him down by the early morning of Thursday, if not before. Senator Bailey, whose dogmatic announcement in the Senate last week that there would never be a vote on the Tariff Board bill started all the trouble, surrendered early this morning, and was ready to agree to fix a time for such a vote if only a time could be fixed also for a vote on the Lorimer case.

Throughout the night the filibuster was kept rolling steadily along. Senator Crawford of South Dakota had the task of keeping the floor, but he was greatly relieved by Senator Bristow, who kept interrupting to read long sections of the testimony in the Lorimer investigation. Once or twice some excitement was occasioned, especially when early this morning Vice President Sherman, who had resumed the chair a little after midnight, undertook to count a quorum. That evoked an outburst of criticism in which there were some unparliamentary cries from the floor, such as "Bully!" and "Coward!" But it was soon straightened out and the Crawford speech went on. Finally about 7 o'clock Mr. Bailey attempted to get a recess. There was some discussion of it when Mr. Crawford interrupted with:

"When am I to get an opportunity to conclude my remarks?"

That made Mr. Bailey so disgusted that he gave it up. He was pretty nearly desperate. He had surrendered completely on the Tariff Board proposal, although he knew he would be taunted for many a day because of the way in which he had declared himself about it on the Senate floor.

The only obstacle yet in the way of a Lorimer vote on the floor was Senator Stone. All kinds of threats were made to get him to yield. Ten or fifteen Senators of both parties talked with him one at a time and labored to get his consent. What they were trying for was a unanimous consent agreement in both cases. It was not until this afternoon when they realized that Mr. Stone could not be brought over that they fixed up the other kind of an agreement and got around the Missouri Senator by agreeing to carry the motion to make the Tariff Board bill the unfinished business and then to put it through.

The Canadian reciprocity agreement was dumped out of consideration at an early stage of the filibuster. If it had had any real friends in the Senate it might have been included. But none of the Senators who pose there as the especial friends of the President and the Administration would lift a hand to help put it into a general agreement. Senators Lodge, Crane, Penrose, Root, and Smoot were all approached on the proposal, and all refused to take it up. The President himself was consulted and declared that he could not do anything about it.

Meanwhile Mr. Stone saw the opportunity it would afford the Democrats if they took it up, and he began to insist that reciprocity must be included if there was to be any agreement about fixing times for votes. Here was a chance for the Democrats to force the reciprocity bill through and thus divide with the President the credit for securing whatever reduction of tariff rates it contains. But Mr. Stone soon found that he could not enlist any considerable Democratic support. It was absolutely essential, if he were to make the move and succeed at it, that he should demonstrate an ability to carry on the filibuster from the point where the insurgent Republicans should drop it.

The insurgents had obtained all they wanted in the vote on the Tariff Board bill, and most of them are against reciprocity. But a few of them were willing to help force action on reciprocity if the initiative came from the regular Republican friends of the President. It was not until well along in the afternoon that it became clear that nothing would be done to bring the reciprocity bill to a vote, and then the final details of the bargain between the two Republican factions were arranged.

Meantime there had been conferences all day long. The insurgents' headquarters was in Senator Clapp's room, where most of them remained during the day receiving the reports that came from their active agents on the floor or in consultation with the regulars.

Senators Penrose, Crane, and Smoot were handling affairs for the regulars. They went to the White House in the morning, a recess of the Senate from 8:10 to 11 o'clock having been agreed upon. The President greeted them cheerfully and began to consult them about the time for summoning the extra session. They wanted to know if he would consider that the Senate had acted on the reciprocity bill if it came up and were beaten. The President replied that it depended entirely on whether there was an honest vote or not.

He would not be satisfied if some of the men who have told him they would vote for the bill should now vote against it merely to claim that the Senate had acted, and so avoid an extra session. In such an event he would call the special session just the same. And what did they think about the date for it?

Thereupon even such an unbeliever in the extra session talk as Senator Smoot concluded that it was really imminent. They suggested that it would be wise not to wait until the first week in April, and the President said he would consider it. He is inclined to comply with the desires of the Republican leaders in this regard if he can.

Senators Crane, Penrose, and Smoot went back to the Capitol and had a meeting in Mr. Beveridge's room with him and Senator La Follette, and the final details of the Republican agreement were settled. Senator Hale had been worn out by the all-night session, and had been sleeping peacefully for a time on a sofa in a corner of the Senate Chamber, in full view of the galleries and of those on the floor. Other Senators were asleep in their committee rooms, but on the floor one after another rid himself of "some remarks."

Over at the White House the President was telling his callers that nothing had occurred during the night or day to alter his opinion or his attitude. He was standing pat on his extra session plan, and was satisfied with the outlook.

Finally it drew near the time for the attempt in the Senate to put the Republican agreement into effect. Senator Gronna of North Dakota was holding the floor with a speech on reciprocity, the Tariff Board, and some other irrelevant matters. At length, at 5:40 o'clock, he sat down. Immediately Senator Hale took the floor, and at once brought up the matter of procedure.

He said that a session like that of last night did nothing to forward the public business, and he did not intend to ask for a repetition of it. As he intended to call up the appropriation bills to-morrow, however, and press them for consideration, it would be necessary, he said, to hold night sessions of moderate length if the business was to be cleaned up before the end of the session.

To-morrow, he said, he would try to dispose of the minor appropriation bills, and leave the great annual budgets for the last three days of the session. He called attention to the fact that the Sundry Civil bill is 250 pages long and simply "bristling with items that will arouse controversy." The Naval bill, he said, will prove equally troublesome. He did not refer to his opposition to the two-battleship programme, but his reference was understood.

"Does the Senator mean," asked Mr. Bailey, "that the appropriation bills will fail unless the Senate addresses itself to their consideration immediately?"

"Undoubtedly," replied Mr. Hale; "we have a hard task before us even then."

Mr. Burrows then interrupted to ask for the Lorimer vote to-morrow at 1:30. Mr. Stone at once said that while he did not object to the vote, he would have to have it clearly understood that there should be no business transacted by the Senate to-night. He was evidently afraid that a vote would be reached on the Tariff Board bill, and Mr. Hale assured him that he intended as soon as the unanimous consent was granted to prevent further business by moving to adjourn. That raised the question of the speech Senator Owen was scheduled to deliver to-night on the Lorimer case. He at once got out of the way, however, by offering to speak to-morrow if the Senate would meet at 11 o'clock.

TRIED TO INFLUENCE GORE,

But Hamon Was Not McMurray's Agent, House Committee Finds.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The special committee of the House appointed last Summer to investigate Senator Gore's charges of attempted bribery in connection with J. W. McMurray's Indian attorney contracts in Oklahoma made its final report to the House to-night.

The majority of the committee finds that Jake L. Hamon actually did about May 6, 1910, make an improper proposal to Senator Gore respecting the McMurray contracts, and that about June 16, 1910, he also approached Representative Charles F. Creager. The committee finds no evidence, however, to show that Hamon was acting "by authority of or with the consent or knowledge of McMurray."

On this ground the committee exonerates McMurray of any connection with an attempt improperly to influence members of the House or Senate. It does find, however, that he used more than "undue influence" to obtain the support of Chief Green McCurtain and his son, D. C. McCurtain, in getting these contracts, by transferring a contingent interest of $25,000 in the contracts to D. C. McCurtain.

ONLY 4-PAGE PAPERS IN CHICAGO TO-DAY

American would accept the award when made. In the meantime these papers continued to pay a scale of wages existing under an unexpired contract, amounting to many thousand dollars in excess of the award. When the award was made the system known as the 'bonus scale,' as distinct from the 'flat scale,' whereby a man was paid according to his production on a linotype instead of a fixed daily wage, was in force.

"When The Examiner and The American accepted the scale the President of the local union, without notice to the publishers, ordered that the two offices which had been hitherto worked as one office be separated and conducted as two establishments. This was a matter the publishers believed should properly go to arbitration as provided in the contract, but to avoid a strike the demand of the President of the union was agreed to under protest.

"The foreman of the room during the confusion resigned and his resignation was accepted. The President of the union then made a claim that the foreman had been forced to resign and did so under pressure and demanded that he be re-employed or a strike would be ordered. Again the publishers yielded to avert a strike.

"On Feb. 21, the President of this union made a third demand in effect that the printers working should be paid between four and five per cent. more than they actually earned. He did this by placing his own construction on a certain paragraph of the award relating to what is technically known as '13 and 13½ ems.' The Examiner and American columns, it may be explained, are narrower than the columns of the other newspapers and to fill them the printers had to do less work. In the end they received about the same wages as paid by the other newspapers.

"Without notification to the publishers, the President of the local union had ordered the foreman, in the confusion of the week following the initiation of the new scale, to pass his payroll through at the higher rate. The publishers believed this to be an arbitrary and unfair payroll. When the matter was called to their attention several days after the money had been paid they ordered a correction of future payrolls, and on Feb. 21 paid for the exact amount of type set.

"To-day, Feb. 28, they paid on the same basis as the preceding week, and the President of the Typographical Union ordered a strike in those offices. He declined to arbitrate the question, and also refused to allow any committee to receive the money even under protest. Believing this to be arbitrary and unlawful, The Examiner and American declined to agree, and a strike was ordered arbitrarily.

The Hearst papers are members of the Chicago local of the American Publishers' Association, and the question at issue, being technical, was immediately brought before that body.

The printers say the narrow columns are more difficult to set on linotype machines, reducing the total product of a day's work. About 200 printers are affected. The local publishers held two meetings, the last session continuing far into the night.

It is generally understood that they will support the contention of the Hearst managers that the wages paid for the narrow columns are according to the union scale. The Examiner is handicapped in getting out its morning edition, and it is agreed that in case The Examiner is unable to set more than four pages, the other daily papers in Chicago will issue only four pages. The primaries having been held to-day, it was planned to issue papers varying from fourteen to twenty-four pages in size. Chicago papers were once before held up at a critical time by the unions. When the battle of Santiago was fought in 1898 Chicago heard of it only by bulletins posted in front of the newspaper offices, and for four days read the details in Milwaukee and New York papers. The papers on that occasion suspended publication rather than yield to union demands.

The publishers, shortly before midnight, telephoned to the managing editors of The Inter-Ocean, Record-Herald, Tribune, and Examiner these instructions:

"For the first editions it has been decided to issue four-page papers. This, however, is conditional on The Examiner's being able to issue a paper of like size. Should the Hearst people be unable to print such a paper, there will be no Chicago papers issued to-morrow. Negotiations are still on, but an agreement does not seem likely."

Union wages in Chicago newspaper offices are 55 cents per hour for 5,000 ems, minimum. Over 5,000 ems the wage is 60 cents, and for each 100 ems 1 1-10 cents per hour additional, making 61 1-10 cents per hour. The Examiner columns are 13 ems wide and the printers are paid for 13 ems, while on other morning papers the printers are paid 13½ ems, that being the width of columns in The Tribune, Record, Herald, and Inter-Ocean. The printers on The Examiner and The American assert they should be paid for 13½ ems, on the ground that it is just as much work to set 13 ems as it is to set 13½ ems. The publishers declare that the printers on the Hearst papers are paid for exactly the amount they set. The printers on those papers think they lose the half em which the union printers on other papers are paid for, and they say the union scale is based on the 13½ em measurement.

A strike can be called by a local chapel only for non-payment of wages, and the present strike is based on failure to receive payment for 13½ ems.

SIFTON DENOUNCES RECIPROCITY PLAN

Canadian ex-Minister Breaks with the Liberal Party—Condemns Agreement Throughout.

SEES PERIL OF ANNEXATION

Believes Taft Wants to Turn the Dominion Away from the Empire—Reply by Minister Fisher.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—"The best years of my life were given to the work of settling the Canadian Northwest, and I cannot express my feelings at the prospect of seeing that country made the back yard of the City of Chicago," declared Clifford Sifton, ex-Minister of the Interior in the Laurier Government, to-day, in condemning the reciprocity agreement and breaking away from the Liberal Party.

Because of the great interest in Mr. Sifton's speech the floor and galleries of the House were crowded. Mr. Sifton, who is Chairman of the Dominion Conservation Commission, condemned the agreement from beginning to end and the Government which made it.

"What is the reason being given by the representatives of the people of the United States?" asked Mr. Sifton, "for proffering us the terms they do? I decline to entertain for a second the suggestion that Champ Clark, leader of the Democratic Party, was not speaking seriously of annexation. If it had not been for Mr. Clark and the Democratic Party this reciprocity agreement never would have passed the House of Representatives. It was he who put it through. Let him speak for himself. He says he and his party are in favor of this proposal, because it leads to annexation. What did Mr. Taft, leader of the Republican Party say? Canada is a strong country; it has a great storehouse of natural resources. He says that it has been pursuing a strong and successful policy of development, but is now at the parting of the ways. 'Therefore,' he says, 'before Canada is irrevocably fixed in the policy leading to the consolidation and strengthening of the British Empire, we must turn her from her course.'"

Mr. Sifton in reopening the reciprocity debate uttered a comprehensive condemnation of the agreement. He said that heretofore Canada had been a burden and somewhat of a nuisance to the British Empire. It was just beginning to be of some use in the empire. Now the Government had gone in for an arrangement which would "turn Canada from the path which leads to the capital of the British Empire to the path which leads to Washington."

Among the undesirable consequences which Mr. Sifton foresaw was the destruction of the Canadian meat packing business by the American combine, against which, he remarked, Australia was now taking action. Every hoof in the Canadian west would be controlled from Chicago, he asserted. Instead of the price of Canadian wheat being raised to the American level, he said, the great Canadian surplus would lower the price of American wheat to the Canadian level. The immense business in foods which, after great effort, Canada had built up with Great Britain would be abandoned for the sake of getting the United States market, and this market might be taken away at any time. Then Canada would find that some other country had usurped control of the British market.

The pulp and paper provision in the agreement, Mr. Sifton affirmed, was an adroit bonus to the provinces to abandon the regulations they had made to prevent the exportation of pulp wood. Last Spring Canada was being menaced by the United States with a club. Now there was good feeling. What would be the relations a year hence? There could be no guarantee of continued good relations. At any moment some point of friction might occur which would make an attack on Canada a popular move for one of the American political parties to adopt.

Free trade in farm products, Mr. Sifton continued, was bound to lead to a demand by the farmers for free trade in the manufactured articles which they consumed, and that demand could not be resisted. The adoption of this agreement would be commercial union with the United States. When threatened with the imposition of the American surtax last Spring Canada should have stood firm. It had not done so, but the wrong path should be followed no further.

The defense of the Government was made by Sydney A. Fisher, Minister of Agriculture. He asserted that the outlook of Mr. Sifton and other critics, including some manufacturers, was necessarily constricted. The men who had the broad outlook, he said, were the men who had the specific information.

These men were Messrs Fielding and Patterson, who had negotiated the agreement with the United States after having heard every interest in Canada on the tariff. It was true, he said, that Canada had to make some small concessions to escape the maximum provisions of the Payne-Aldrich tariff, which would have meant entire exclusion from the American market. The Dominion Government thought it better to grasp the proffered hand of friendship than to have the "big stick" substituted for it.

Mr. Fisher declared that could Germany or France to-day make such a bargain with the United States they would do so without hesitation.

ATTACK ON BRYCE RENEWED.

Sir Edward Grey Defends Him as Warmly as Did Mr. Asquith.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Unionist attack on the part which Ambassador Bryce played in the United States-Canadian reciprocity negotiations was renewed in the House of Commons to-day. Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, to whom the critics directed their inquiries, gave to the Ambassador's course the same unequivocal support which it received recently from Premier Asquith.

The tariff reformers wished the Foreign Office to instruct the Ambassadors of Great Britain at other capitals not to assist similar negotiations.

This the Foreign Secretary flatly refused to promise. He said that the assistance given by British Ambassadors to the Canadian Ministers in recent years had been both useful and acceptable. In the reciprocity proceedings at Washington the action of Mr. Bryce had been, he believed, beneficial both to Canada and the United Kingdom, because in communicating with the Canadian representatives and the American officials he had kept British interests in view.

Sir Edward added that in recent years the Canadian Government had on frequent occasions expressed itself so grateful for the help that Mr. Bryce had given at the American capital that it had come to be regarded as a matter of course that when Ministers of the Dominion went to Washington they would receive the aid of the Ambassador.

SENDS RECIPROCITY FIGURES.

President Gives Senate Statistics Supplied by Tariff Board.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—President Taft sent a special message to Congress to-day transmitting information prepared by the Tariff Board relative to such articles and commodities named in the Canadian reciprocity agreement concerning which the board had available information. The report was called for in a resolution offered by Senator Cummins.

The statistics transmitted deal with pulp wood, pulp and news print paper, farm products, including live stock, and current relative prices in Canada and the United States of wheat, barley, and food products of the farm, including meats, poultry, eggs, dairy products, and vegetables.

Senator McCumber of North Dakota to-day had expunged from the Senate records opprobious allusions to James J. Hill. The allusions were contained in a letter on the subject of reciprocity, written by a constituent to Senator Gronna of North Dakota. Mr. McCumber paid a warm tribute to Mr. Hill's integrity, patriotism, and capacity, and said no man had done more for the upbuilding and welfare of the entire Northwest.

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL ON TRIAL.

Accused by Women Teachers and Boys' Parents—Opposed "Equal Pay."

Bernard Cronson, for four years Principal of Public School 8, at Grove and Hudson Streets, was up for a hearing before the Elementary Schools Committee of the Board of Education all yesterday afternoon and evening, and when proceedings adjourned at midnight Abraham Stern, Chairman of the committee, announced that it would take at least two more such sessions to complete the testimony that was being taken. Charges against Mr. Cronson have been filed by Miss Ella Froelich, Assistant Principal at the school.

None of those connected with the hearing have been permitted to discuss the exact nature of the charges preferred by Miss Froelich against the Principal, but it is generally understood that they include allegations by some of the women teachers under his jurisdiction, infliction of corporal punishment on boy pupils, and the use of profane and abusive language.

A "Parents' Association," formed among those whose children attend the school, started complaints against Mr. Cronson by telling about the $700 fund. Then several teachers, headed by the Assistant Principal, Miss Froelich, appeared to make statements about the Principal's manner of plucking at their gowns when they went into his office to interview him.

Charges were then drawn and served upon Principal Cronson yesterday morning just before he left his school to take charge of School 26 in West Thirtieth Street, to which he had been transferred.

To the hearing yesterday there came some twenty teachers and parents of pupils who wished to testify against the Principal, and two teachers who wished to testify for him. Four boys, who alleged that he had struck them with a scrubbing brush and other implements were on hand to tell about corporal punishment. With Miss Froelich came her pastor, the Rev. James H. Hoadley of the Greenwich Presbyterian Church, who wished to accompany her into the trial room, but was not permitted to do so. He then took a position outside the door and maintained it throughout the afternoon and evening until the adjournment at midnight.

"I came here," he said, "to lend this noble Christian woman my full moral support. I know nothing of the merits of her charges or their nature, but I honor her for having the courage to press charges which she believes are just."

The Rev. Dr. Hoadley's daughter called up on the telephone presently to know what was keeping the minister out so late. He replied that it was a bit of Christian service and he would be home before 1 A. M.

Cronson, who is 45 years old and married, although he is separated from his wife, remained in the trial room throughout the examination of witnesses, as did his chief accuser, Miss Froelich. When asked at midnight what he thought of the case against him, Cronson replied with a flourish of his hand: "Let them talk. They are talking too much, and their talking is all a help to me. It doesn't hurt."

Job E. Hedges, his lawyer, when asked about the exact nature of the charges, said that "the complainants kindly refrained from including arson, murder, and burglary, but included about everything else in the category." The trial, so far as he was concerned, he said, had hardly begun and would be fought to a finish. He mentioned that Mr. Cronson had warmly opposed "equal pay" for women and had appeared at Albany against the women teachers' bill.

HOLD GIRL FOR MURDER.

Coroner's Jury Unable to Decide if Miss Bacigalupo Shot Dr. Cassella.

Although the jury stood eight to four for acquittal, Coroner Holtzhauser held without bail for the Grand Jury yesterday Madeline Bacigalupo of 265 William Street, who is accused of shooting and killing Dr. Daniel E. Cassella of 811 East 176th Street.

On Jan. 30, Dr. Cassella, who owned a drug store at 63 Catharine Street, was killed in his office in the rear. The girl, who was in the room at the time, said the doctor committed suicide. Joseph Sellaro, a clerk in the store, said he heard the girl pleading with the doctor, then angry words, followed by two revolver shots. Sellaro ran into the room and found the doctor on the floor, the girl standing near him, while a revolver lay on the floor under his right arm.

Policemen Friese and Finnigan said they found the girl sitting in a chair crying. They arrested her, and later found a piece of paper with the name of a girl Dr. Cassella was to have married the next day concealed in her glove. Coroners' Physician Weston testified it was impossible for the doctor to have shot himself, as both bullets had penetrated the brain. Miss Bacigalupo refused to take the stand.

The jury, after an hour, reported it was impossible to agree.

SULLIVAN BARS BRIBE BILL.

Didn't Know His Name Was on It—Senate Kills It.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—Senator Sullivan seemed much relieved to-day when the Senate indorsed his position that if a member desires to repudiate a bill which bears his name he should be allowed to do so.

The Bowery Senator was frank in admitting that he had been "buncoed" when the Merritt Committee's Anti-Bribery bill was passed on to him with a number of insurance bills from the same committee for introduction as Chairman of the Senate Insurance Committee. It was not until the bribery bill was attacked ten days after its introduction that the Senator discovered his name on the bill.

"I may be for the measure with some other man's name on it," Senator Sullivan said in the Senate to-day, "but I am not good enough to have my name attached to such a bill. I want the Committee on Codes discharged from further consideration of the bill, so that I may have it stricken from the files."

Senator Wagner, who was a member of the Merritt Committee, said he was guilty of handing the bill to Senator Sullivan, but he believed the committee should have an opportunity to consider the bill before it was discharged. Senator Wagner yielded when Senators Brackett, Grady, and Newcomb came to the relief of Senator Sullivan.

The committee was discharged and the enacting clause of the measure was stricken out. It provided that an attempt to bribe a member of the Legislature must be reported immediately to the District Attorney.

RECTOR REFUSES CALL.

Rev. E. Floyd-Jones of Cold Spring Withdraws Acceptance of Curacy.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—The Rev. Elbert Floyd-Jones, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church at Cold Spring has notified the Rev. Dr. W. W. Battershall of St. Peter's Church of this city, withdrawing his acceptance of the appointment of curate of that church to succeed the Rev. Angus M. Porter.

The Rev. Mr. Floyd-Jones was to have begun his duties here to-morrow. He explained that owing to pressure brought to bear upon him from his own congregation, whose rector he has been for fifteen years, he has decided to remain at Cold Spring.

RAILROADS TO CONFER ON RATE DECISION

Assurances from Pennsylvania That It Has Not Committed Itself on the Subject.

ATTACK ON LAW PROPOSED

Heads of the Eastern Roads Are to Meet To-morrow to Decide on the Policy to be Followed.

A call has been issued for a general meeting to-morrow of the heads of the Eastern railroads to consider the decision of the Inter-State Commerce Commission refusing an increase in freight rates and to decide what course the railroads should follow in view of it. The question is whether or not an appeal should be taken from the commission's decision. There is a strong feeling among some of the principal officers of the Eastern roads that a test should be made of the constitutionality of the law under which the commission acted. Other officials are disposed to take no action, and considerable uncertainty existed yesterday regarding the outcome of the conference which will take place to-morrow.

Contrary to the understanding which had prevailed for several days, the Pennsylvania Railroad has not yet made known the position it will take, and it is not true, the Pennsylvania has said in reply to queries of other roads, that it has indicated to the Inter-State Commerce Commission that it is ready to accede to the suggestion of the commission that the proposed increases be withdrawn.

One reason why some officials are desirous of appealing to the courts is that the validity of the law under which the commission is acting should be determined once and for all. None suggests that the commission in the action taken was not well within the provisions of the law. The question is whether or not the law itself can stand.

A point on which much emphasis is laid is that the commission in these rate proceedings is practically prosecutor, jury, court, and marshal all in one. It undertakes investigation on its own motion, gathers its own evidence, and passes in judgment upon it. Some of the roads think that on this ground, among others, it might be held that the law under which the commission is acting is unconstitutional, and they are disposed to try the matter out.

On the other hand some of the Eastern roads think the contest not worth while. Some take this stand on the theory that it is wiser not to increase public opposition by attempting to have the action of the commission set aside while others believe that an appeal would take so long that the good of it could scarcely be measured.

It is admitted that the attitude of the Pennsylvania will have important influence upon the decision of other roads. Those in favor of an appeal were gratified, therefore, to learn yesterday that the Pennsylvania had not yet committed itself. The position of the New York Central has not been made known, but it is believed that President Brown would be pleased to have the railroads test the decision.

REDUCING RAILROAD FORCE.

Effect of the Freight Rate Decision, St. Paul's Officials Say.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 28.—The first move in retaliation against the Inter-State Commerce Commission decision refusing to allow the railroads to increase their freight rates was felt in Minneapolis to-day, when a message was received from Chicago ordering a reduction of 25 per cent. of the Twin City employes of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. The semi-monthly pay day measure pending in the Minnesota Legislature is also said to be partly responsible for the order.

In compliance with the order, the Iowa and Minnesota Division has taken off six crews, and the prospects are that a further reduction in trainmen will be made soon. The river division laid off eight crews, and is considering a further reduction if it can be made.

Car repairers in Minneapolis and St. Paul were laid off by tens and scores, and further reductions in that department are said to be probable. Operators, station men, trackmen, and switchmen all were affected by the order. Officials say that the total of men laid off may reach about 700 in the Twin Cities.

Inquiries at the office of the Minneapolis and St. Louis and Soo Railroads brought the announcements that neither of these systems contemplated any general curtailment. It is known that the Soo Line is proceeding with extensive construction projects.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 28.—At the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul's offices here it was stated to-day that the instructions were to lay off every man who could be spared.

"It is simply a matter of economy," said Vice President McKenna, "and the principal reason which makes retrenchment necessary at this time is the recent adverse ruling of the Inter-State Commerce Commission on the freight rate question."

PENNA. R. R. ECONOMIZING.

Laying Off Men, but Not Canceling Equipment Orders.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Feb. 28.—Before the freight rate decision was announced by the Inter-State Commerce Commission, the Pennsylvania Railroad decided to introduce economies all along the line. In explanation of its attitude the management said that the retrenchments to be made were those that are made every Spring. This year, however, the company began to economize three weeks earlier than usual.

Men have been laid off at various places on the system, but it is maintained that no orders for equipment have been canceled.

Theodore Voorhees, Vice President of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway, said the day the rate decision was announced: "We are retrenching now as much as we can."

RATE DECISION NOT FELT.

Rush Orders from Railroads Reach Pittsburg Steel Plants.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 28.—A canvass made among railroad supply houses, and in the big steel companies here does not show any cancellation of orders. In fact, rush orders for material and equipment are being sent in from the railroads, and additional orders have been placed since the decision of the Inter-State Commerce Commission. One large manufacturer to-night said:

"The railroads have been traveling so long on their marrow bones that they will now have to take on some flesh or they will soon wear out the bone and the marrow and leave nothing to travel on. The railroads discounted the action of the Inter-State Commerce Commission months ago."

DELAYED TELLING POLICE OF SUICIDE

Belated Coroners' Office Record Shows Emanuel Lanferty Hanged Himself.

DIED IN DAUGHTER'S FLAT

After Threatening to Kill Both of Them if Son-in-Law's Divorce Charges Were Not Withdrawn.

The suspicions which the obituary notice to the effect that Emanuel Laufferty of 548 Riverside Drive had died after a "brief illness" aroused in the mind of his son-in-law, David L. Herman, a motor dealer of Detroit, when he arrived here on Monday evening, were justified yesterday when investigation showed that Laufferty committed suicide by hanging himself in an apartment at 180 Claremont Avenue. He was found dead there by his daughter, Mrs. Florence Herman, on Wednesday morning, Feb. 22, and was buried on Monday without the manner of his death becoming public.

It was because of threats that Laufferty made to him in January, Herman said, that he was led to read between the lines of the obituary notice which gave him the first tidings of his father-in-law's death. Herman married Florence Laufferty last June, and when she began a suit for separation he retorted with an action on his own account and prepared to serve papers on his father-in-law in an alienation suit. On Jan. 17, he says, Mr. Laufferty called him up on the telephone, and threatened that if he did not withdraw his charges he, Laufferty, would kill himself and his daughter. The memory of that message set Herman thinking when he learned on Monday night on his return from Detroit that Laufferty had died in his absence.

Laufferty's suspicions and his effort to see if they were justified revealed yesterday a peculiar situation in regard to the official records of the death. Although Coroner Winterbottom and Coroner's Physician Lehane viewed the body last Wednesday at noon, and although it was immediately recognized as a case of suicide by hanging, it was not until yesterday that it was so identified on the book in the Coroner's office, and it was not until yesterday afternoon that the police of the West 125th Street Station were so notified and the record made upon the blotter there.

"Sudden death, cause unknown," was the characterization which Herman found on the book at the Coroner's office when he went there yesterday morning with his lawyer to report his suspicions and to ask for an investigation. The same entry was found by reporters. Other reporters coming later in the day, found the "strangulation" entry made in due form from the Coroner's Physician's report, which Dr. Lehane says he turned in on Friday. Dr. Lehane said it was customary for the Coroner's office to notify the police after a case had been reported to them by the Coroner's Physician as a suicide. It was not until the middle of yesterday afternoon that such notification was telephoned to the West 125th Street Station, with the request that an investigation be made, but that was after Herman had aired his suspicions. The police there thought it rather a strange time to make such a report. It was customary, the Lieutenant said, for the report to be made immediately.

Dr. Lehane said last night that he had fulfilled his part of the routine without any irregularity and that, as far as he knew, there was no irregularity. If the entries were belated, he attributed it to an accumulation of clerical work. As for Coroner Winterbottom, who knew as long ago as last Wednesday afternoon that Mr. Laufferty had hanged himself, he did not appear at the office yesterday, nor could inquiries at his place of business elicit information as to his whereabouts.

The reason why Mr. Herman, who is staying at the Hotel Astor, is unwilling to let the matter drop, he gives as his determination to press the present litigation to an end. He wants very much to know if any statement or other important evidence was found when Mr. Laufferty's body was discovered by his daughter. If the family will furnish him such information as he needs, he says, he will be content, but otherwise he will demand an inquest, to see if they will be more communicative on the witness stand.

"I may be thought cold blooded," he said yesterday, "but I am bound to see this thing through. I think that very likely Laufferty wrote a long explanatory letter before he died, and it would be helpful to my interests in the litigation if I could see it. He was just the sort of man to make his exit from this world in as theatrical a manner as possible."

Mr. Laufferty lived with his wife and his daughter, Mrs. Baum, at 548 Riverside Drive. He committed suicide at 180 Claremont Avenue, which Herman said was the address where Mrs. Herman was living, according to his last information.

Mrs. Herman's action for separation and the answer made to it first came to light a short time ago when Supreme Court Justice Goff denied her motion for alimony and counsel fees.

"Our marital troubles began within three days after the date of our marriage," Mrs. Herman said in her complaint.

The wedding was at the Hotel Endicott last June.

PERRY BELMONT SEES DIX.

Discusses Proposed Changes in Law Providing for Campaign Fund Publicity

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Perry Belmont called on Gov. Dix to-day to discuss proposed amendments to the corrupt practices law which will provide for the publication of campaign contributions before election, with statements by committees and others as how it is proposed to utilize funds on hand.

The Governor said he was in sympathy with Mr. Belmont's ideas. "Everybody knows," said the Governor, "that it takes money to conduct campaigns. Let us have a requirement for the publication of contributions before election with a statement also of purposes to which the money collected is to be applied by party committees or individuals."

ENDS AVENUE MONOPOLY.

Assembly Passes Bill Depriving Stage Company of Fifth Avenue Rights.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Assemblyman Hoey's bill depriving the Fifth Avenue Stage Company of New York, of the right to "monopolize a street by simply filing a map of the street with the city authorities," according to its introducer, passed the Assembly to-day. The measure puts the company under the jurisdiction of the Board of Estimate of the city.

Mr. Hoey declared that the law giving the stage company "monopolizing power" passed the Legislature in 1901, "accelerated by donations of stock," and that this condition of affairs was disclosed at the Allds trial.

M. MONIS IS CHOSEN AS FRENCH PREMIER

Regarded as Practically Certain That He Will Succeed in Forming Ministry.

A PORTFOLIO FOR DELCASSE

It Is Announced He Is to be Minister of Marine—Belief That Monis Will Harmonize the Majority.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—There is practically no doubt that Antoine Emmanuel Ernest Monis will be M. Briand's successor as Premier, although he has announced that he will give no formal answer until to-morrow to President Fallières's request that he form a Cabinet.

Before deciding to accept the responsibility, M. Monis informed the President he would consult his friends and the result of this consultation makes it almost certain that he will accept the difficult task.

M. Monis is regarded in political circles as peculiarly fitted to organize successfully a workable Ministry. He is acceptable to all sections of the Republican majority, while he is also assured of the support of the radical Socialist section, the defection of which was the principal cause of M. Briand's resignation. The fact that M. Monis is a Senator and consequently was not a party to the attack made on the Government in the Chamber of Deputies last Friday, serves to make him acceptable to the adherents of the ex-Premier.

M. Monis spent a busy evening consulting his supporters. He first paid a visit to M. Briand after which he was closeted with the Presidents of the Senate and Chamber and with M. Berteaux, ex-Minister of War, who is a Vice President of the Chamber, and M. Delcassé, ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs.

After a two hours' conference with M. Delcassé, M. Monis announced that he had accepted the portfolio of Marine and M. Berteaux that of War. These acceptances are considered to assure the success of the new combination.

In the course of his interview with M. Delcassé, M. Monis said that he had decided to offer the portfolio of Finance to M. Caillaux, the champion of the Income Tax bill now before the Senate, and that of Justice to M. Cruppi. He had originally intended to ask M. Pichon to retain his position as Minister of Foreign Affairs, but in view of the latter's expressed determination to retire he decided to ask M. Ribot to become head of the Foreign Office. Should M. Ribot decline, the Foreign portfolio will be offered to M. Poincaré. M. Monis will make a report to President Fallières at 10 o'clock to-morow morning.

M. Monis is a lawyer, 65 years old, and has sat in the Senate for Gironde since 1891. He took a prominent part in the overthrow of the Bourgeois Ministry in 1896. As Minister of Justice in the Cabinet of M. Waldeck-Rousseau he signed the decree convoking the High Court to try the Royalist plotters against the republic in 1899. He has many friends among politicians and occupies a position of great authority in the Senate, of which he has been a Vice President since 1900. In politics he is a radical Republican, moderately inclined toward the advanced Left section.

The profound interest in the situation following the resignation of the Briand Ministry is shown by the fact that though the Chamber of Deputies adjourned to March 6 the entire membership remained in Paris to-day discussing probabilities.

The Deputies found a spicy sensation in the resignation of M. Jonnart, Governor General of Algeria, who telegraphed to M. Briand that his sense of duty to the country would not permit him to remain in office after the abandonment of the policies which, he was convinced, were necessary to the welfare of France.

"Your programme of conciliation and national security," wired the Governor, "expresses the will of Republican France, and adherence thereto is imperative at a time when Parliament is trying to solve the gravest and most important financial, economic, and social problems."

The American Ambassador, Robert Bacon, called on M. Briand to-day to bid official farewell to the retiring Premier. He found M. Briand in good spirits and apparently delighted at the prospect of a rest from his labors.

MME. DE CHOISEUL TESTIFIES

A Witness Against Russian Accused of Trying to Blackmail Her.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Duchesse de Choiseul-Praslin, formerly Mrs. Charles Hamilton Paine of Boston, was a witness to-day at the hearing in the case of Alexandre Tscherniadieff, a Russian, who is accused of taking part in a conspiracy to blackmail the Duchess by demanding money for withholding the publication of letters asserted to have been written by her to "Count" d'Aulby de Gatigny.

X The Duchess retold the story which she related at the trial of "Count" d'Aulby at Tours—of how the "Count" had supplied her late husband and herself with alleged old masters, of his subsequent claim of $200,000, and of various alleged attempts by d'Aulby to obtain money from her for the return of her letters.

The Duchess declared that she had never been prepared to pay a cent to obtain the letters and that she had withdrawn from the case at Tours upon the advice of her lawyers on the condition that her letters be returned. Some of these, however, were still missing, and one of them, she believed, had been sent to Boston.

The witness said she had received a letter from Tscherniadieff relating to her correspondence with d'Aulby and that on receiving it she immediately instituted proceedings against the prisoner.

This closed the case for the prosecution and an adjournment for two weeks was taken.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 28.—Chuanlin-Tse, about fifty miles north of Harbin, is being ravaged by the plague. The deaths there are reported to number 2,000 daily.

The disease is raging at Kirin, at Hulan-Chen, (opposite Harbin,) and at Bodune, 100 miles southeast of the Manchurian capital.

Bread riots have occurred throughout the stricken district.

The foreign Consuls are preparing to depart. Troops have refused to march into the plague region. Martial law has been established.

The Chinese Emperor has reprimanded the Manchurian authorities for not having dealt more energetically with the situation.

The Fart Eastern press is filled with apprehensions of a recrudescence of boxerism.

MERRY BELLEVUE ALUMNI.

Dine When Ambulance Gong Sounds and Hear Justice Russell's Confession.

The ringing of an ambulance gong on the third floor of Delmonico's last night announced the beginning of an evening of fun for the Society of the Alumni of Bellevue Hospital, 250 of whose members, after participating in the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the organization, sat down to dine and listen to addresses. They started off the meal with cocktails served from test tubes labeled "poison," and beside each plate was a miniature ambulance of the ancient type, also a roll of surgeon's bandages and a tiny operating table of pasteboard.

But it was when the speechmaking began that the former members of Bellevue's staff really enjoyed themselves. They listened a while to droll stories by Henry Gaines Hawn, and then to a series of jocular anecdotes, reminiscences, and comments by Chief Justice Isaac Franklin Russell of the Court of Special Sessions. Justice Russell told them he had been addicted to the use of language for several years, and was glad to be able to serve some of it to the doctors.

Through the clouds of tobacco smoke he told them he was glad to see them rebuking the hypocrites who preached against smoking as a menace to health. Then the Justice told them he had a little confession to make. His one ambition in life, years ago when he was practicing law in Brooklyn, he said, was not to be Chief Justice of the Court of Special Sessions, but to be receiver for a brewery.

There was a time when the prize seemed within his grasp, but the receivership was finally given to a brother of the brewer.

"Most of the doctors who appear before me," he said, "are horse doctors, or those who are practicing without a license. And the jails are not big enough to hold the latter class."

The Justice said, too, that he would like to refer to the liars that come before him. They were legion, he added.

"There was one doctor who lied to me," went on the speaker. "I was a member of the Rod and Gun Club of Long Island at the time. This doctor won the prize for the biggest fish caught that year. And not long afterward a baby was born in his home. Of course, we all went out to congratulate him. And while there we weighed the baby on the doctor's scales. The little sucker weighed 48 pounds."

Justice Russell said he had decided there were three reasons why honest men lie.

"In the first place they are just mistaken," he said. "In the second they haven't the language to express themselves, and in the third they are overwhelmed with all kinds of bias. Then, of course, there is the regular liar."

The Justice said he must have a double, for some one had been making trouble for him by reporting him as being at various places around town after dark when he was in reality at the Bar Association.

Dr. Steven Smith, one of the oldest members of the society, who left the Bellevue staff in 1851, and is 88 years old, told of the early days at Bellevue, when the institution was little better than an almshouse and the New York Hospital was the only other institution of note in New York.

Other speakers were Dr. Charles F. Stokes, Surgeon General in the navy; Dr. William M. Polk, President of the Academy of Medicine; Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, who was President Cleveland's physician, and Dr. John W. Brannan. Dr. Floyd M. Crandall, President of the society, was toastmaster.

In the afternoon the members of the society inspected the hospital from cellar to roof. Many of the society members wore their old interne caps.

The oldest member of the alumni, Dr. Starling Loving of Columbus, Ohio, attended the gathering. He was an interne at Bellevue in 1849 and 1850. Dr. Loving and Dr. William Dibbons, who died recently, were the first paid internes there. They worked in the cholera epidemic and were presented with a set of resolutions by the Board of Aldermen.

At the dinner last night Dr. Crandall said that out of the nineteen founders of the alumni who are still alive, fourteen had answered "present" to the roll call.

GETS A VERDICT, IS ARRESTED

Benjamin Levine Awarded $6,500 Damages, Then Accused of Bribing Witness

A few minutes after Benjamin Levine, plaintiff in a $28,000 suit against the Foundation Company, had pleaded not guilty to bribing a witness before Justice Swann in the Court of General Sessions, a Supreme Court jury returned to Justice Goff a $6,500 verdict in Levine's favor.

Levine was arrested as he left Justice Goff's courtroom when the case had been given to the jury. Justice Swann held him in $3,000 bail for trial. The indictment charging Levine with attempting to bribe Charles H. Wallace, a witness in the previous trial of his suit before Justice Page, was kept secret until the second trial was completed.

Levine's suit was to recover for breach of contract. He was the successful bidder for demolishing the Bryant Building, at Liberty and Nassau Streets, on the site now occupied by the Liberty Tower. He was ejected after failing to begin work quickly enough to justify the expectation that he could complete the contract in the twenty-two days specified.

Manufacturers
Wholesalers

Perhaps you manufacture or deal in stoves, ranges, radiators, boilers, furnaces, or even crockery or kitchen utensils. In that case your insurance may be only 60 cents per hundred, but it is better to have it only 10 cents, isn't it, at the Bush Terminal? Besides, remember this, as your insurance rates go down your cartage bills go up. You have to truck your raw material or your rough parts from the railroad piers, and this costs you about $4,000 yearly, does it not? Well, you know, the Bush Terminal cuts off at one crack all the cost of these incoming rail shipments, because it brings the freight car to your door at the New York freight rate. It places you on the siding of every railroad entering New York and all their Western connections.

Well, we've saved you $4,000 yearly on a PART of your cartage bill as a starter. Now about your outgoing business. About 60 per cent. of your business is done outside of New York, isn't it? That costs you $2,400 yearly for cartage. The Bush Terminal saves you that, too, for the freight car is loaded at your door, with no cartage bills to pay. Not bad, what? A saving of $6,400 on cartage so far. Now about local deliveries right in New York City. We won't claim to save you a cent here because we don't know where you deliver, what your packages weigh, nor how bulky they are. We shall have to wait till you tell us before we can decide this question, even though we use motor trucks while you use horse trucks and even though we do it ourselves while you hire it done and pay some one a profit.

STREET SHOOTING STARTS ROOF CHASE

Three Policemen Fired On in Speedy Hunt Up One Tenement and Down Another.

FINALLY GET A PRISONER

Whom a Wounded Bartender, According to the Police, Identifies as Leader of a Saloon Hold-up Gang.

Policemen Carmody, Jones, and McElliget were walking from the Oak Street Station to their posts at 8 o'clock last night, when they saw three men run down Cherry Street and turn into Roosevelt, one of them stopping just long enough to turn about and fire three shots from a revolver at a man who was pursuing them. The pursuer stopped and grabbed his right hand where a bullet had nipped one of his fingers, and the policemen took up the chase of the three who ran ahead.

The men turned into Water Street from Roosevelt with the policemen close behind. Along this street they sped until they reached the tenement at 342. Two men turned into this while the third kept on, the policemen failing to notice into which house he finally disappeared.

Carmody, Jones, and McElligot followed the two who dodged into 342, Jones a step or two in advance. He had scarcely set foot inside the outer door than three shots whizzed past his head. They were fired at such close range that the powder from the revolver burned his face and one of the bullets glanced off the insignia on Jones's cap and ripped off the top of the cap.

The three policemen raced up the stairs after the men. Presently they heard the sound of a scuttle being moved, and they reached the roof to find that another scuttle—the one on the roof of 344—was only partly covering the opening beneath it. Down into this house the policemen ran, and into a flat on the second floor. Here they found Joseph Connelly, who says he is a laborer, 23 years old, snuggled beneath the bedclothes, although he was fully dressed.

They dragged him out and hurried him to the Oak Street Station whither presently came Emanuel Infanti, a bartender for Frank Dagarino at 14 Cherry Street. Infanti's hand was wounded from a bullet, and, according to the police, he identified Connelly as the man who had shot him in Roosevelt Street, and also as the man who twice within two hours had held him up, together with a roomful of customers, in the saloon.

Infanti said that Connelly and a companion played pool most of the afternoon in the rear of the saloon, and about 6 o'clock quit their game and came up to the bar for a drink. He had served them with a glass of beer apiece, and the men had been about to drink it when Connelly, the police say Infanti told them, suggested that every one in the room have a drink. There were fifteen or twenty men in the place, and Infanti inquired cautiously;

"Can you pay for all these drinks?"

"I'll pay for none of them," Infanti, according to the police, says Connelly replied. "Stick your hands up."

Infanti obeyed instantly, and, according to his story as the police repeat it, Connelly turned to the crowd and made them follow the bartender's example, immediately after they had done so, turning to his companion and ordering him to "get that gun from behind those cigar boxes on the bar." The friend got the revolver, and, according to Infanti's story, gave it to Connelly, who put it in his pocket, and, backing from the saloon, announced:

"If any one tries to follow me I'll shoot him."

Louis Di Primi of 18 Cherry Street tried to get out of the place and, according to the police, Infanti said that Connelly fired point blank at the man, afterward running from the place without waiting to note that his bullet had not taken effect. Concetta Infanti, a sister-in-law of Emanuel, descended to the saloon from the rooms above while the throng still stood, too frightened to move, and she ran to the Oak Street Station, returning presently with a policeman, who listened to the story of Infanti, but returned to the station without trying to trace the men.

Infanti, the police say, declared that he and the crowd in the saloon were busy talking over the occurrence, with no thought of again seeing Connelly or his companion, when, at 8 o'clock, Connelly entered and aimed a revolver at the crowd, ordering them to hold up their hands, and then sent his companions around the bar, where he took $18 from the cash register and two bottles of whisky.

Several men tried to run out a side door, but found an armed man waiting there for them, and once again, the police say Infanti said, Connelly and his companion left the place after threatening to kill any one who followed them. Infanti, by this time was so enraged, however, that he dashed into the street and began to shout for the police, while he ran in pursuit of Connelly and his two companions. It was he whom Carmody, Jones, and McElliget saw when they took up the chase.

The police say that Connelly has a criminal record, and that both his companions have had trouble with the police also. The police say they know who these two men are, and expect to arrest them shortly.

Later in the evening Tony Gabarini of 22 James Street reported to the police of the Oak Street Station that shortly before 8 o'clock three men, two of them armed with revolvers, had held him up in front of 32 Cherry Street, and robbed him of $4. From Gabarini's description of the men the police believe that they were Connelly and his two companions.

STOCK BROKER FAILS.

New York Central's President Named as a Creditor, but It's News to Him.

Sartell Prentice, a trader in stocks, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday, with liabilities of $105,675. President W. C. Brown of the New York Central and several other officials of the road are included in the list of creditors, but last night Mr. Brown said that if Mr. Prentice owes him any money he didn't know anything about it. The only Sartell Prentice he knew, he said, used to be a clerk in the New York Central office. The other New York Central men included among the creditors are A. H. Smith, F. H. Greene, and A. T. Hardin. The petition shows $500 due to Mr. Greene and $400 to Mr. Hardin, both for money borrowed.

The assets are described as nominal, and consist of cash $3, a fifteenth interest in 2,000 acres of land in Texas of unknown value, 200 shares of the Buffalo and Leamington Oil and Gas Company, a disputed claim of $5,750 against Charles B. Castle, and a suit against Frederick A. Russell for an accounting. Mr. Russell is also included among the creditors as having a disputed claim for $4,065.

A large part of Prentice's liabilities, it is said, were incurred with Mr. Russell on stock transactions. Kerr & Co. of 74 Broadway in December, 1909, obtained a judgment against both of them for $89,740 on stock transactions entered into in 1904. Another suit against them which is pending was brought by Charles F. Hickey, who has a disputed claim for $22,041 for commissions. Several Stock Exchange houses are named in the list of creditors, Post & Flagg for $9,427 and Thompson, Towle & Co. for $1,502, the latter being due on transactions in cotton.

Prentice has a life income, it is said, from the estate of Mary L. Prentice, but the amount is not named in the petition in bankruptcy.

The plans to this end were, he said, still tentative, but the Board of Directors was of opinion that great advantages would accrue to the association through an invasion of the American field.

Mr. Sharp said that when the proposal was carried out it would be on such lines as to insure success. There had been a considerable reduction in the dyeing business in the United States, due to the [illegible]

WHERE LUXURY BEGINS.

Woman's Conference Told That It Starts Where Necessity Ends.

Prof. Carl Kelsey of the University of Pennsylvania and Dr. Henry Moscowitz told the Woman's Conference of the Society of Ethical Culture something about the "Luxury Among the Wage-Earners" yesterday afternoon in their meeting house, Assembly Hall. Prof. Kelsey said luxury was the word we use for other people's expenditures above what we think they ought to spend.

"Luxury may be spending the surplus," said Dr. Moscowitz, "but what if there is no surplus? Then it is spending what is needed for necessities as though it was a surplus."

Dr. Moscowitz told of the delight the poor take in reading about the rich and how they devour the details of a fashionable wedding—"the marriage of Vivien Gould and a Lord whose name I do not remember." They are greatly stimulated by reading details of the trousseau of a wealthy bride, he said.

"I know girls who earn $5 and $7 a week," he continued, "and wear ostrich feathers in their hats which cost $13. They copy the coiffures of rich women and actresses and invest their money in rats and switches and puffs which are expensive. They copy rich dresses in cheap materials, which are not cheap for them. It is morally disintegrating. They have pianos in their parlors which they cannot afford. It is a form of conspicuous leisure which the poor exercise as the rich exercise their conspicuous leisure in doing good. I have seen new industries grow up in my neighborhood—a beauty parlor in the back of almost every barber's shop. A demand is stimulated for non-essentials at the expense of real necessities.

"The extravagance of the poor may be called the impulse of civilization. People sometimes see a poor woman give her child a penny for a lollypop, and they ask how she can give her child something that a child of rich parents would not have. I ask in return, 'Does your child have a nursery, a governess, books, and other pleasures?' The other child does not have any of these and the poor mother is trying to give it something above the margin.

"The whole problem of luxury among the poor is interwoven with the problem of luxury among the rich. What both need is education in the use of the surplus. A practical suggestion would be to teach young women the art of home-making and the value of simple things. Teach young people the art of living simply."

Prof. Kelsey said a great need in this country was trained labor and respect for labor with the hands, not to consider it as secondary to that of the individual who can sing, preach, or argue.

AIDS CONVICTED MEN.

E. T. Rosenheimer Employs Counsel for Two Prisoners Under Sentence.

Through the efforts of Edward T. Rosenheimer, acquitted some time ago on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Grace Hough, who was run down and killed by his automobile last August, steps have been taken to obtain new trials for Jonn Murphy, who is in the Tombs under sentence of not less than twenty years, or life, for murder in the second degree, and William Duffy, Murphy's partner, who was sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing for burglary.

Rosenheimer made the acquaintance of the two men while awaiting trial in the Tombs. The prisoners told him they were innocent of the crime charged against them, and since being liberated Rosenheimer, through his counsel, George W. Knobloch, has made an investigation into the case with the result that their cases will be appealed.

On Feb. 17, 1910, Thomas Devlin, a clerk in a lodging house at 9 Bowery, was shot and robbed of $9.50. Three months later Murphy and Duffy were arrested for the crime. Murphy was convicted of murder in the second degree, while Duffy, who was not directly involved in the shooting was convicted of robbery. The prisoners declared at their trials that they were innocent and that the police had simply fixed up a case against them. They have both remained in the Tombs pending an application for a stay of sentence.

Three weeks ago Murphy made a speech during the recess hour in the Tombs, in which he declared that he was an innocent man, and asked the other prisoners to help him. A collection was taken, and $100 was raised and given to him. Since that time some person has retained Francis O'Neil to take the case to the Appellate Division and make an effort to obtain a new trial for Murphy.

Mr. O'Neil refuses to say who gave him the money for this purpose, but it was said yesterday on good authority that Rosenheimer had retained him.

Mr. Knobloch served notice yesterday of an appeal in Duffy's behalf, saying that he had been retained by Rosenheimer to act for the prisoner.

Investigating Hotel Sudden Death.

Following a visit yesterday to the Coroner's office of George L. Horton, an official of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, it was announced by Coroners' Physician O'Hanlon that an investigation was being made of the death on last Feb. 17 of Albert Zoliniski in the North River Hotel, Barclay and West Streets. Dr. O'Hanlon said the man had been insured for $15,000 shortly before his death, and while there were indications at the autopsy that the man had had heart trouble there was reason to believe that he might have been asphyxiated.

WOMEN SHOW US HOW TO DODGE TAXES

Tall "Swearing Off" Exhibited at Mock Hearing of the Government Club.

COACHED BY LAWSON PURDY

Mrs. Milbank Found Him Charming, Quite English, and Kind to a Youth with "Lame Dog" Antique Furniture.

The Government Club—which according to the various members of the Federation of Women's Clubs who compose it is not at all the same thing as the Good Government Club—held an excited and voluble mock tax hearing at the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. J. Hungerford Milbank took the part of Tax Commissioner Lawson Purdy; Mrs. E. L. Hill of the Democratic Women's Peace Circle represented herself to be an insane woman possessed of many questionable diamonds, and Mrs. Stewart Hector impersonated the President of a corporation who had converted all his company's tangible property into first mortgage bonds and technically "removed" to another State. Mrs. T. W. Bendel tried to "swear off a definite income" by pretending to have given all her possessions to Princeton University, and Dr. Adelaide Wallerstein of the West End Women's Republican Club sought to get a reduction of the assessment on her private residence, in Fifty-seventh Street.

Other members had come prepared to enact other forms of tax dodging, but before their turn was reached their fellow-members got into an animated discussion of various subjects, ranging all the way from the unfairness of present-day Tax Department methods to the desirability of life on Eleventh Avenue and the fatal and inevitable subjection of the feminine sex.

The Government Club, which was organized by Mrs. Belle de Rivera, former President of the Federation of Women's Clubs, has been giving mock representations of the House of Representatives and other phases of present-day American government every week throughout the Winter, had made especial preparations for yesterday's tax hearing. Mrs. Milbank, in order to prepare herself to play the part of Tax Commissioner, had gone down to the offices of the Tax Department, and had a long talk with President Purdy on all the phases of the gentle tax-dodging art.

"Mr. Purdy is charming," Mrs. Milband told her fellow-Government Club members yesterday. "So full of English backbone. I know he is English because he pronounces 'z' 'zed' instead of 'zee.' And for me to pretend to be him this afternoon is going to be very difficult. First, I am going to appoint a Sheriff. The Sheriff isn't always down in the Assessors' office, of course. But he is right forninst him. The present Sheriff, by the way, is a nice, portly gentleman. Mrs. Bancker, I'm going to appoint you Sheriff."

"Oh, Mercy!" said Mrs. Gerard Bancker as she took the Sheriff's seat.

Mrs. Hill rose from her seat and stepped up before the table at the head of the room, behind which Tax Commissioner Milbank and Sheriff Bancker were seated.

"This office understands that you are insane," remarked Tax Commissioner Milbank.

"I'm not really insane; my friends just think I am because I want to pay my taxes," said Mrs. Bancker, with a flighty wave of the hand. "I have come to declare the extent of my personal property—a few jewels."

Amid cries of "Ah, Ah," from the audience Mrs. Charles Rosenfeld, playing the part of the "insane" woman's friend, whispered to the Tax Commissioner that Mrs. Hill's jewels were "only paste."

"If you want to be declared a lunatic you must see a Judge and get a proper commission in lunacy appointed," said Mrs. Milbank, inexorably. "Unless she is sane enough to get out of the State jurisdiction we will get all she has," she added to the Sheriff.

Mrs. Hector was the next person to step up before the Commissioner. "I wish to state that I and my company are exempt from the personal tax," said Mrs. Hector. "I represent the Wood and Cement Construction Company. We have removed to Jersey. We have no debts and no real estate in New York."

Mrs. Milbank remitted Mrs. Hector's tax with a despairing gesture.

"Mr. Purdy told me that this was the commonest and easiest way to dodge taxes," she explained in an animated aside to the audience. "It is so easy to turn one's property into a corporation composed of dummy bondholders, to issue a wholesale mortgage for the property by which the dummy bonds are technically secured, and to send the mortgages to a Jersey warehouse. That is all we have to do to keep from paying our taxes."

When Mrs. Bendel tried to make the Tax Commissioner believe that she had given all her property to Princeton University, and for that reason should be exempted, Mrs. Milbank asked if she could show an official acceptance or receipt.

"If you can't," said Mrs. Milbank, "Mr. Purdy says that excuse doesn't go. Mr. Purdy is such a remarkable man to find in such a high place. He is so sensitive to the higher things. He told me a story about a young married man whose relatives had given him a lot of 'lame dog' antique furniture when he married. The furniture wasn't worth anything; but the young man felt that it was valuable because his ancestors had dined off the tables and died in the chairs for hundreds of years. He felt he ought to pay a tax on it. So the Commissioner went through the formality of a little tax appraisal, so as not to hurt the young man's feelings."

In the general discussion Tax Commissioner Purdy came in for considerable praise and Tax Department methods came in for a great deal of adverse criticism.

"We New Yorkers are taxed according to the street we live on," said Mrs. Milbank, vigorously. "Every year, down in the city Tax Office, a City Directory is torn up and the parts are distributed—twenty pages to each man. If you happen to be Mrs. McCormick on Avenue A your name is ignored and you don't get any notice to come before the Tax Commissioner and tell him about your property. But if you are Mrs. Florizel of Madison Avenue, down you have to go."

One of the members expressed the opinion that "no one who had $1,000 would think of living on Avenue A, and for this reason she thought the Tax Department very sensible."

The meeting wound up with an expression of opinion on the part of another member that "taxation without representation is tyranny and that all women should refuse to pay taxes until they are allowed to vote."

At next Tuesday's meeting the members will take the part of Inspectors of Election and the meeting room will be turned into a polling place.

WAR DANCE BEFORE BATTLE.

Nevada Indians Made a Futile Stand Against Pursuing State Police.

RENO, Nev., Feb. 28.—Details of the fight between a party of Shoshone Indians and the Nevada State police, in which eight of the Indians and one of their opponents were killed, have reached this city from Tuscarora.

The squaws were armed with only bows and arrows. A steel-tipped arrow struck one deputy in the breast, inflicting a painful wound. It was probably the first time in many years that bows and arrows have figured in an Indian fight.

Led by "Skinny" Pascal, an Indian trailer, the pursuers sighted the Shoshones, moving in single file. Pascal was sent ahead to talk to the band. When within a hundred yards "Indian Mike," the leader, raised his rifle and fired. Pascal dropped from his horse unhurt and fired twice. "Indian Mike" fell and crawled to some bushes, where he was later found dead.

When they saw that their leader had fallen the remainder of the band fled two miles down the cañon. Then the Indians made a stand and executed a war dance. The officers dismounted and surrounded the Indians. Hegle, one of the State policemen, was killed as he left cover.

With only two Indians armed with rifles and two squaws and several children using bows and arrows against a score of white men, the fight was soon over.

Brockton Resident, Needing New Suit, Found to Have a Two-yard Waist.

Special to The New York Times.

BROCKTON, Mass., Feb. 28.—When Charles H. Jackson, 52 years old, of 876 Crescent Street, this city, went into a tailor shop to get a suit of clothes to-day, it was found that he measured exactly two yards around the waist. He weighs 518 pounds and wears a 24 collar. His chest measures 65 inches, his arm above the elbow 22 inches around, wrist 11½ inches, calf of leg 22 inches, and thigh 36 inches.

When Jackson was married in 1879 he weighed 176, and a year later 41 pounds more. He has been gaining steadily ever since. Mathematicians are trying to figure his weight when he reaches three score and ten. He has gained seven pounds in the last seven months. Jackson retired four years ago after a career in brass foundries. He has four children living, none of whom are above the average weight.

Jackson does not eat more than the ordinary person. He says his greatest trouble is in not being able to drape himself properly.

MOVING PICTURES IN COURT.

Proposed by "Jack" Binns's Counsel in Second Suit Against Vitagraph Co.

John D. Binns, better known as "Jack" Binns, the hero of the Florida-Republic steamship disaster, has brought a second suit for $50,000 against the "Vitagraph Company of America for selling moving picture films which purport to represent him in a moving picture drama, "Saved by Wireless." His counsel have asked Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum for permission to give a moving picture show for the benefit of the jury in the courtroom.

Binns declared in his complaint that he declined a good offer to go on the stage, and he objects to having the Vitagraph Company making capital out of what he declined to make capital out of himself on the ground that it belittles him.

$100,000 BAIL WON'T FREE HARRY LONDON

Chicago Saloon Keeper, Held for Deportation as Undesirable, Appeals to Secretary Nagel.

VOTED, BUT NOT A CITIZEN

Immigration Authorities Informed That His Trip to Russia Was a "White Slave" Mission.

Following the refusal of the immigration authorities to accept bail in the sum of $100,000 for the release of Harry London, the Chicago saloon keeper, who has been detained as an undesirable person at Ellis Island since his return from Russia on the Prinz Frederick Wilhelm on Jan. 27, an appeal has been taken by his counsel, Samuel Hoffman, of 120 Broadway, to Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

London bases his plea for admission on the argument that he is a citizen of the United States, having voted on his father's papers in Chicago for the last twenty-eight years. These papers, however, he says, are lost, and he does not know where they were originally issued and where a copy of them can be obtained. The immigration authorites, on the other hand, say the papers are nonexistent, that London is not a citizen, and that he is undesirable in that he figured in the notorious McCann investigation of the "white slave" traffic and maintenance of disorderly resorts in Chicago about a year ago.

London left this country to go to Russia in December. On Jan. 5 Acting Commissioner General of Immigration F. L. Larned sent to the Immigration Commissioners of this country a confidential note, warning them that London had been for many years a keeper of saloons and disorderly houses in Chicago, that he was not a citizen of the United States, that he had gone to Europe on a Russian passport borrowed from one S. Kassel, which he would probably try to use on his return.

The purpose of London's trip to Europe, the note said, was thought to be the recruiting of women for immoral purposes. His detention was therefore ordered as an undesirable person.

Though his counsel London filed a notice of appeal and won a stay of deportation until a board of special inquiry could try the case. At the special inquiry an attempt was made to prove that London was a citizen of the United States by the testimony of several witnesses from Chicago, including two Judges of Election in the precinct where London's saloon stands in West Lake Street, the witnesses testifying that they had known him to vote regularly for twenty-eight years and believed him to be a citizen.

London maintained that he had a citizen's rights by virtue of the citizenship of his father, who, he said, brought him to this country at the age of four years. The father, London said, died somewhere in Europe twenty-five years ago, and he himself had no means of getting the parental citizenship papers or discovering where they were issued. It was not necessary, he said, to produce the papers when he voted in Chicago.

The Board of Special Inquiry, however, held that the mere fact of voting in some State was not sufficient evidence of citizenship in the United States, and London himself, according to Commissioner Williams, is shown by the record to have admitted that he is not a citizen.

The immigration authorities brought to the special inquiry several witnesses, including Mrs. Minnie Jacobs Berlin of the Juvenile Court of Chicago, who testified that London's saloon was a notorious dive and that he himself had been arrested for keeping a disorderly house several times. She said he went to Panama two years ago for the purpose of bringing back women for immoral purposes and that he had failed to support his own children.

It was further brought out that London was indicted at the time of the McCann investigation in Chicago a year ago on a charge of tampering with the State's witnesses against McCann at the time of the trial of charges of police graft derived from notorious resorts. According to London's lawyer, the charge of the indictment was later dismissed. London also denied all the charges of Mrs. Berlin, saying that he had gone to Panama only because ordered to do so by his physician, and insisting that he had not stopped in the country, but merely traveled through it. The Board of Special Inquiry, however, held that enough evidence had been adduced to warrant the deportation of London as an undesirable person, and sustained the findings of the lower court.

London's lawyer filed a further appeal with the Secretary of Commerce and Labor on Feb. 24 and will go to Washington to argue the appeal to-morrow. He said yesterday that even if the authorities should hold that London is not a citizen of the United States, he would carry the case to the United States Supreme Court on the ground that the law of March 26, 1910, in which Congress declared that an undesirable citizen in the United States might be deported, despite the fact that he had remained any length of time in the country, is itself unconstitutional.

Mr. Hoffman admitted that his client had traveled in Russia under a false passport belonging to S. Kassell, but said he had done this only because he wished to visit his mother at Bessarabia, Russia, and was prevented by the Russian law from entering the country on a passport in his own name. London, he said, made no attempt to enter this country under any name but his own. The lawyer denied also that London went to Russia to procure women for immoral purposes as charged by the immigration authorities, or that he at any time thrived on the proceeds of immoral traffic in Chicago or elsewhere. He said London was never arrested except on the indictment found at the time of the McCann investigation, but insisted that he could not be deported on account of those charges inasmuch as they were subsequently dismissed.

LAST FEDERAL TAX DAY.

Beginning To-day Corporations Failing to Make Returns Risk a Penalty.

This is the last day for filing Federal corporation tax returns without running the risk of a penalty of 50 per cent. of the tax. In case any return is made with false or fraudulent intent, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is authorized to add an additional 100 per cent. of the tax as a penalty.

Such returns must be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue in the district where the principal office of the corporation is located. In case of neglect, occasioned by the sickness or absence of an officer required to make the return, or for other sufficient reason, the Collector may allow further time, not exceeding thirty days. It is, however, expected that few corporations will fail to make their returns by the time designated, in view of the promptness with which such returns were made last year.

It had been expected that the Supreme Court of the United States would pass upon the constitutionality of the law under which the Federal corporation tax is imposed, but owing to the necessity of rearguing the question, on account of vacancies on the Supreme Court bench, the decision has been delayed. Corporation lawyers, therefore, are filing the reports, as they did last year, under protest.

LIEUT. FOODY DISMISSED.

Entertained a Friend in the Captain's Room—Cropsey Severe with Others.

Lieut. Thomas F. Foody of the Highbridge Station was dismissed from the force yesterday by Commissioner Cropsey. He was found on Feb. 10 in the Captain's room with a friend eating sandwiches and with two bottles of beer near him.

Foody was dismissed on Oct. 29, 1907, by Gen. Bingham, but in July, 1910, Commissioner Baker reinstated him. Foody lives at 2,349 Morris Avenue, the Bronx, and is a brother of the late Capt. Michael Foody.

For a false statement to Deputy Commissioner Driscoll and for a false entry in the blotter Sergt. Michael J. O'Laughlin of the Macdougal Street Station was reduced to the rank of patrolman. He joined the force in 1890, and for saving persons from the river he has a large number of medals.

Patrolman James T. Welsh of the West Forty-seventh Street Station was dismissed because he shot and killed Lucie Chabnat at 132 West Twenty-eighth Street. The girl was just leaving the house when, it is alleged, Welsh, who was engaged in a quarrel across the street, fired his revolver.

Many lesser offenses were charged against Thomas J. Fitzpatrick of the Liberty Avenue Station, Brooklyn, who also was dismissed.

SUBWAY NEGOTIATIONS GO ON

Conferrees Nearly Ready to Take Up Specific Modifications of Plan.

Another subway conference was held yesterday, President Shonts and Directors E. J. Berwind and Andrew Freedman of the Interborough meeting with the Public Service Commissioners and the McAneny committee of the Board of Estimate.

The conference lasted two hours, and when it was over the conferrees said that by the end of the next conference, which will be held either Thursday or Friday of this week, they would be through the discussion of the general ground and be ready to take up specifically the various modifications suggested to the Interborough plan.

After the conference Borough President McAneny denied a published report that the Interborough had turned the city down on several suggested modifications already and was on the point of breaking off negotiations. The conferences are expected to continue for another week, at least.

COMES TO BENEFIT CENTRAL PARK SOIL

Expert from the Bureau of Agriculture to Find Out What's the Matter with It.

MAY SAVE THE CITY MONEY

Part of Mount Morris Park Has Been Denuded—Resoiling Thought to be Necessary in Many Places.

G. B. Maynadier, an expert on soil, from the Department of Agriculture, will arrive in New York to-day to begin a series of investigations in Central Park. Mr. Maynadier has been engaged by Park Commissioner John B. Stover, and his work will keep him here until at least the middle of May. When he departs it is expected that the Park Commissioner will know all about what is wrong with the park soil, and be able to apply treatment which will greatly increase its fertility.

Commissioner Stover said yesterday that he had written Prof. Milton Whitney of the Bureau of Soils, in Washington, as early as last December, telling him of the poor condition of the park soil and asking for an expert who could find out what was the matter. He was told that it would be impossible to procure Mr. Maynadier's services before March 1.

"I wanted the best man I could find," said Commissioner Stover yesterday, "not only because I desired to know the truth about conditions, but because I had heard of various offers to sell the city $1,000,000 worth of humus, and I did not like the rumors of graft that were in the air. I am informed that if my report from Mr. Maynadier reaches the Board of Estimate by May 15, it will be in time to be considered in the present budget, so that the amount of money for resoiling I have asked for will be granted.

"In my correspondence with Mr. Maynadier he told me that any test would be incomplete unless it were carried on through enough of the Spring to allow the plant life to be in a state of growth and the earth to show the effect of the Spring warmth. To my mind, improvement and rehabilitation are quite as important in the other parks of the city as in Central Park. Many of them give evidence of great need. Take, for instance, Mount Morris Park. That is a peculiar instance, for this park has a splendid hill. Boys and girls playing games there have trodden away the soil and the grass and undergrowth that protects the soil until, in a number of cases, the bed rock shows through. Here also the work of resoiling is sadly needed.

"Then in the parks like City Hall Park and Bowling Green, the oldest of all our parks, the winds have deposited a layer of most deleterious dust, and caused a new problem to be presented. Many persons have asked me why I didn't allow the street sweepings around these smaller parks to be spread over the lawns rather than carted away. That policy is well enough in country places and small towns where these sweepings really contain a good deal of fertilizing material, but in a city like New York the dust and refuse has a considerable admixture of asphalt and other harmful and choking substances.

"The problem that we have to face in the use of the parks by the people to-day has arisen, one might say, within the past decade, and has increased in difficulty amazingly in the last five years. In the northeast corner of Central Park the dwellers from nearby congregate. Actually the paths cannot hold the people. The very benches are insufficient."

Samuel Parsons formerly landscape architect for Central Park, said yesterday that he was heartily in favor of the restoration work in the park.

"The effect of improper conditions, impoverished soil, and insufficient irrigation, such as we now have in Central Park, is cumulative, it simply builds up from year to year and finally brings us to a state of things like the present," he said. "Some of the things that are needed are in a state of semi-completion and are thus of little more use than if they never had been begun. This is true of the irrigation plant, about two-thirds of which have been constructed. The mains are nearly all laid, but there are a number of places in which the smaller extensions have not been carried out, and the various branchings of the system which the mains are supposed to feed are non existent, except for plans. In this way many sections of the lawns and meadows in the park are left without an adequate water supply, and when a season like last Summer comes along, the drought plays havoc with them and they become dried out, right down to the roots and even to the rock upon which the thin soil forms a blanket.

"Completion of this system of watering would be of great benefit to many parts of the park and would make the system upon which about $200,000 has been spent really effective."

CLEAR NASSAU TREASURER.

Grand Jurors Find That C. F. Lewis Knew Nothing of $40,000 Defalcation.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Feb., 28.—The Grand Jury, which has been in session all month, with Supreme Court Justice Scudder presiding, ended its deliberations which netted nineteen indictments, one for murder, this afternoon.

A presentment which was also handed up exonerates Charles F. Lewis, ex-County Treasurer of Nassau County, from blame in regard to the defalcation in his office when William Rapelyea, who is now serving a term in the county jail, and J. Frank Baukney swindled the county out of $40,000 by juggling the back tax bills.

The Grand Jury received a report from Mark Graves, chief examiner for the State Controller, that the losses were the result of collusion between the two men, and that no other person in the office could have had knowledge of the defalcations.

Politicians have said that, despite the Democratic victories all over the country, Nassau County would have gone Republican last Fall, but for the trouble in the Treasurer's office. Shortly before the shortage got out Baukney shot himself and two days later Rapelyea confessed to the thefts, and was let off with a sentence of one year, helping to straighten the matter out to the best of his ability. He also turned over to the County Treasurer property which paid for his half of the defalcation.

In Response to Appeals for the Poor.

THE TIMES has received $1 from "M. G." for the widow with five children on behalf of whom the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities appealed, in addition to $125 previously received. THE TIMES also received $1 from "A. J. R.," and $2 from "M. E. J.," to assist Mrs. Rachel Zussman in supporting her blind husband and their two children. Contributions previously received amount to $28.50, making a total $29.50 to date.

SAYS COLLEGE STARVES CATS

Woman's Charge of Ill-Treatment Is Denied by Wellesley Professor.

Special to The New York Times.

NATICK, Mass., Feb. 28.—Judge Mulligan said to-day that he would be prepared to hear to-morrow any new evidence the police had to offer regarding thefts of cats. Two more animals are reported missing, one a valuable Angora and the other a prise winning feline.

D. G. Allen repors to Police Chief Brown that Squires, the Wellesley College janitor who was fined for stealing a cat from Mrs. Bent, had offered him 50 cents for as many cats as he could supply him with. Squires stated, Allen said, that the college girls were crazy over cats as pets.

Mrs. Joseph Clark, sister of Mrs. Bent, to-day denounced conditions she says she found in the barn at Wellesley College, which she visited to identify her cat.

"In the barn were several cats, eight or nine," she said. "They were in small cages or boxes along the wall, and were crying pitifully. Squires let them out into the barn. They were very thin and apparently starving. When freed they rushed for an empty dish on the floor but finding nothing in it they began to fight with one another. There was no signs of food in the place."

Prof. Albert H. Morse of the department of zoology and physiology at the college denies that the cats are ill-treated, and that any of them have been stolen with their knowledge.

"We use about seventy-five cats a year," he said. "Never once in dissecting specimens were there indications of starvation."

CONGESTION BOARD ENDS ITS LONG TASK

Urges Many City Laws to Prevent the Overcrowding of Working Centres.

CONDITIONS GETTING WORSE

One-thirteenth of the Population of Manhattan Lives 600 to the Acre —Present Laws Ineffective.

Recommendations which if carried into effect would revolutionize factory and tenement-house building in Manhattan south of 181st Street were made to the Mayor and Aldermen yesterday by the Congestion Commission appointed by Mayor Gaynor last May. Though receiving no expense money from the city, the commission, of which ex-Borough President Jacob A. Cantor is Chairman, reported that it has conducted an exhaustive investigation of living and working conditions in this city. Twenty-one general meetings were held, with more than fifty meetings of sub-committees, at which 164 witnesses were examined.

The report itself will make a volume of several hundred pages, including more than 100 tables showing a variety of comparisons, from which deductions are drawn. It was divided into five parts—conditions of room crowding, the effects of such conditions of living on the morals, health, and mortality of the persons so huddled together; the causes of the overcrowding, and the methods adopted by European cities to prevent the same conditions. The final section of the report was given over to recommendations for relief, almost every recommendation being accompanied by a bill designed to carry it into effect if adopted by the Aldermen.

The commission attacked the present tenement house law, saying that it not only permits congestion, even though its provisions are rigidly carried out, but that under it congestion south of Fourteenth Street is actually increasing. The present law, allowing six-story tenements, permits, the commission asserted, a population of at least 1,300 to the acre.

Six years ago slightly more than one-sixth of the total population of the city was living in Manhattan below Fourteenth Street, on about one-eighty-seventh of the city's area. At the present time, while slightly under one-sixth of the population is below Fourteenth Street, owing to the rapid development of other sections, the population of the 2,717 acres below Fourteenth Street, has increased by 11.2 persons an acre. The total population in the territory has increased by 24,185.

Last year, it was said, one-thirteenth of the population were living more than 600 to the acre, while nearly one-fifth lived 25 to the acre. From 1905 to 1910, the density per acre in Manhattan increased 15.6; Bronx, 6.1; Brooklyn, 5.5; Queens, 0.4; Richmond, 0.8. The average for the city was 8.5.

The commission said that the fluctuation of density in blocks near together is not so important as the fact that throughout the city the congestion of the east side is being developed under the present tenement house laws. In 1905 there were in Manhattan 122 blocks with a population of 750 or more per acre. Of these 53 decreased in density from 1905 to 1910, while 65 increased, 6 of them by 300 or more per acre. The change in the remaining four blocks was negligable.

Very serious room overcrowding was found in the Bronx and Brooklyn, as well as Manhattan. Many rooms had from three to five occupants, while no systematic effort was made to prevent it. Three blocks in the Bronx had in 1910 a population of more than 600 to the acre, one a population of 633. In the Sixteenth Ward of Brooklyn in 1910 the average population of an acre in twenty-eight blocks was 401. One block had 540 and another of 495, while the average for the ward increased by 30, and was 278.8 per acre in 1910.

In spite of this the commission said it would be possible to house the present population of the city and its probable increase for several decades in three-family tenements and one and two family houses.

The main causes of congestion were stated to be poverty, which the commission defined as inability on the part of persons to maintain a reasonable standard of living; concentration of factories and offices, the consolidation of the five boroughs, intensive use of land and its high price, lack of control of aliens and citizens, long hours of work, cost of transit and the transit policy of the city, lack of a definite city plan, the present system of taxation, the failure to prepare land for housing purposes, the methods of public and private charities, particularly the latter; the failure of the city to adopt a policy to attract people to the outlying boroughs, and, finally, immigration and the failure to distribute and control immigrants.

To cure these causes, bringing about a readjustment of living and working conditions throughout the city, the commission made many recommendations. One of the most important was that no building erected hereafter in Manhattan south of 181st Street shall exceed the cubage or volume of 174 times the area of the lot, and that none shall be altered to exceed that cubage. With the exception of these in Manhattan, the commission would not allow any building in the city to exceed 120 times the cubage of the lot. The commission urges that every building more than four stories or 50 feet in height, to be used as factory, loft, or warehouse, shall be of fireproof construction, and that no such building shall exceed 132 times the cubage of the lot on which it stands.

The commission would require every factory and loft building hereafter erected to have in the rear a yard, open and unobstructed to the sky and extending across the entire width of the lot and of a depth equal to one-tenth of the height of the building. No tenement house will be allowed, if the commission has its way, to exceed in height the width of the widest street on which it stands, or shall be increased in height to greater than that width.

The commission would prohibit also all tenements of more than four stories anywhere in the city except in Manhattan south of 181st Street. This rule may be stretched to allow an additional story for 15 per cent. of the lot left vacant below the present regulation of maximum of occupancy, and a tenement house may be five stories high without being fireproof, provided it occupy 15 per cent. less of the lot than is now permissible.

The commission in this connection urged that tenements in the outlying districts shall not be more than three stories high, the Aldermen and the Board of Estimate determining the boundaries of these districts.

Measures were recommended to prevent room crowding. One was that no room in a tenement hereafter to be erected should be less than 9 by 10 feet floor measurement, and that every apartment in such a tenement house must have at least one room with superficial area of at least 150 square feet. The commission also urged that no apartment in a tenement house or two-family house shall be so crowded that there shall be less than 600 cubic feet of air space for each adult and 300 cubic feet of air space for each child under 12 years of age occupying it. It favored a fine, not to exceed $25, for each violation, and that the Tenement House and Health Departments placard apartments to show the number of occupants permitted. Lessees, it held, should secure a license from the respective departments before taking lodgers, and landlords must report cases of overcrowding.

The commission would have a Bureau of Occupancy created in the Department of Health, charged with the enforcement of the law against overcrowding in apartments of two-family houses.

Recommendations were also made to better the conditions of labor by having a Deputy Commissioner of Labor for this city, more Factory Inspectors, an Industrial Commission to investigate labor conditions here and the wages of both skilled and unskilled laborers, and to investigate all disputes, lockouts, or strikes.

The commission urged that immediate steps be taken to provide more playgrounds for the city, that the size of the school buildings be regulated, and that the Board of Education be requested to give more instruction in physiology and hygiene, and to impress on the children the evils of room overcrowding.

The commission, in closing, urged that the time limit on the Government's right to deport aliens for cause be abolished, and that streets in congested districts be closed during certain hours each day so that children of those districts may use [illegible] playgrounds.

NEW COURT HOUSE PROPOSAL

Bill at Albany Provides Site Covering City Hall Park and Other Land.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 28.—The present New York County Court House act is repealed and another proposed in a bill introduced to-day by Senator Stilwell.

Provision is made for the erection of a Court House either in City Hall Park or on a site including a portion of the park and other land. The question of whether or not the building shall be erected entirely within the park is left to a majority of the Justices of the Supreme Court in the First Judicial District. The Justices are also authorized to engage architects to prepare plans and may provide for competition in the submission of plans. The Commissioners of the sinking fund are to advertise for bids for the work. The Commissioners, however, may award the contracts for furnishings and equipment without public letting if the approval of the Justices be obtained.

In case the prosecution of the work should render necessary the disuse of the present County Court House, the Commissioners of the sinking fund are required to lease any other premises as the Justices may designate for the temporary use of the Supreme Court.

Several similar bills proposing City Hall Park as the site for a new County Court House have come to grief, and if the present one is passed it is sure to raise bitter opposition.

In May, 1909, the Legislature passed the Tompkins bill, by which the city was empowered to acquire the property between Chambers and Reade Streets and Broadway and Centre Street. On this site a structure to harmonize with the City Hall, with which it was to be connected by colonnades, was contemplated. Mayor McClellan, however, after much opposition to the plan, vetoed the bill.

After that many other sites were suggested, but nothing was done until Mayor Gaynor last year appointed a commission to select a site. The Mayor was in favor of retaining the site of the present small Court House, erected in Tweed's time, which has long since become too small and unsanitary.

Senator Grady then introduced a bill authorizing the present site, and it was passed by the Senate and signed by Gov. Hughes. Again opposition on the part of civic organizations and prominent citizens developed, and the Board of Estimate held up the matter. The New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, the Bar Association Site Committee, and the Republican Club were among those that opposed the plan. Last March the American Institute of Architects made public a proposal to take the property north of the City Hall for a site, thus saving City Hall Park, but no definite decision was arrived at.

WALLING DEFENSE BEGINS.

Witnesses Attack Anna Grunspan's Character—Crowd in Courtroom.

William English Walling's defense to the $100,000 breach-of-promise suit brought by Anna Berthe Grunspan began yesterday afternoon before Supreme Court Justice Giegerich and a jury. Only two witnesses were heard before court adjourned—Mrs. Annie Klehman, janitress of the tenement at 34½ St. Mark's Place, where Miss Grunspan once lived; and Morris Angel.

Mrs. Klehman said that Miss Grunspan and the Brewitz family, with whom she lived, had been asked by the landlord to leave on the ground that he "did not want such people in his place." Miss Klehman declared that Miss Grunspan had told her she was an actress.

Angel produced a photograph he said Miss Grunspan had given him which was inscribed, "To my friend." He said that he had met her at Fourteenth Street and Fourth Avenue about two months ago and related conversations with her which the defense considered substantiated their contention that Miss Grunspan had not told the truth about her occupation. Two jurors asked Angel questions which showed their interest in this aspect of Walling's defense. Angel answered readily and with no visible embarrassment.

Mrs. Grunspan, mother of the plaintiff, took the stand earlier in the day to tell her version of the "betrothal party" in Paris which followed her daughter's trip to Russia in Walling's company. Her story followed the same general line as the testimony given by the plaintiff and her brothers.

Mrs. Bessie Steinberg and her daughter, Rose Steinberg, testified that they had seen Miss Grunspan's rings and watch, which she had declared Walling gave her in Europe and she had lost in this country.

The trial will continue to-day, with sessions lasting till 6 o'clock in the evening. The courtroom is packed at every session, Justice Giegerich allowing the auditors to stand. Among those present yesterday was Clarence G. Darrow, the Socialist lawyer of Chicago.

WANTS TO BE A STAGE BABY.

Little Miss of Four Calls to See the Mayor and Get His Sanction.

Lieut. Kennel, the police officer in charge at the Mayor's office at City Hall, was at his desk yesterday when a diminutive blond youngster about thirty inches in height informed him that she "wanted to see the Mayor." His Honor was out at luncheon, and the gallant Lieutenant immediately ushered the young woman into Secretary Adamson's office. She appeared to be alone.

"Well, well, and what do you want to see the Mayor about?" Mr. Adamson asked.

"I want him to let me be an actress," was the reply in perfect enunciation.

"When you grow up?"

"No, right now. I want to be the baby in my auntie's opera, 'Madame Butterfly.' I've been it in other places, but they won't let me be it here unless the Mayor says so."

It then quickly developed that the aunt and father of the petitioner were in the immediate background, although the Aborn Opera Company's press agent kept discreetly out of sight. The child, Lois Ewell, a little more than four years old, and her guardians were directed by Mr. Adamson to the Children's Society, which has charge of such matters under the law.

TIHNKS $10,000 TOO MUCH

For Breach of Promise Verdict When Engagement Apparently Was Secret.

Supreme Court Justice Erlanger announced yesterday his disapproval of a ten-thousand-dollar verdict for breach of promise given Henrietta French of Pierre, S. D., against David H. Decker, Jr. Though refusing to grant a motion to set the verdict aside, he said he would consider briefs for its reduction.

"There was no proof," remarked Justice Erlanger, "that any person of the 20,000 inhabitants of the town in which this plaintiff lived knew of her engagement, and, in fact, not a single witness from the town or State in which she lived was called to prove that he or she ever had heard of the engagement."

Lawyer Leaves Jail to Plead His Case.

John Treadwell Richards, a lawyer, who is confined in Ludlow Street Jail for failure to pay alimony, got out on a writ of habeas corpus yesterday to argue his own case before Supreme Court Justice Guy. Richards, who has been locked up for five months, objects to a recommitment on the same charge. Decision was reserved.

MAYOR WOULD RUN THE CITY SCHOOLS

Will Seek a Charter Provision to Put the System Under Municipal Control.

CREELMAN QUITS THE BOARD

Tells the Mayor That the Present Management Has Put the Schools in a Deplorable State.

A definite declaration of Mayor Gaynor's ideas for the reformation of the administration of the Board of Education, at which he hinted some time ago, came yesterday in a letter written by him to James Creelman, accepting Mr. Creelman's resignation from the board.

The Mayor says he intends applying to the Legislature this year to change the administration of schools from the present voluntary board to a regular city department or a small paid board. He adds the comment that "this Senatorial contest at Albany is such a distraction that I do not know whether it is worth while to send any charter to the Legislature this year."

Mr. Creelman was appointed to the board by the Mayor only a few weeks ago. In his letter of resignation he says he believes that it will be impossible to remedy the "deplorable condition of the public school system" until some change is made in the administration of the board. He adds that he has found that the board as a whole handles in a "loose way" matters of curriculum and the millions which it has to spend each year. Here is his letter:

67 West Ninety-fourth Street,
New York City, Feb. 27, 1911.

My Dear Mr. Mayor:

I feel like apologizing to you for accepting the office of member of the Board of Education, which I herewith resign. In my judgment little or nothing can be done to remedy the deplorable condition of the public school system in New York until a small, efficient commission, whose whole time can be devoted to the work of education, takes the place of the present volunteer board, three-quarters of whose members have to vote in virtual ignorance of the matters brought before them twice a month.

As the Board of Education controls, or is supposed to control, more than $36,000,000 a year, and is responsible for the care of a teaching and supervising force of about 17,000 persons, and the education of nearly 700,000 children, it would seem that the authority to deal with such a vast and costly problem—made all the more difficult by the confusion of races and tongues in our city—should not be abandoned to citizens who can only devote to it, now and then, the slight time which they can spare from their private occupations.

As matters now stand, the school problem itself is scarcely ever mentioned in the meetings of the Board of Education. That is controlled absolutely by paid subordinates. The result is a single course of studies, applied with iron rigidity to the whole elementary school population, without regard to differences of race or language, although English is taught almost as a foreign tongue to scores of thousands of children. I invite your attention to this especially with respect to English and spelling.

I also invite your attention to the loose way in which the Board of Education votes on matters involving millions of dollars and to the fact that, although it spends $36,000,000 of the people's money in a year, its affairs, books, and matters of accountability, have never been thoroughly investigated, because the board has separate corporate powers and assumes to be independent of the regular budget-making and fiscal authorities of the city.

Faithfully yours,
JAMES CREELMAN.

Hon. William J. Gaynor, Mayor.

The Mayor's letter to Mr. Creelman read:

Office of the Mayor.
Feb. 28, 1911.

Dear Mr. Creelman:

I am very sorry to receive your letter of resignation, although I must admit that the reasons which you assign are solid. I am also of opinion that the Department of Education should be a city department, responsible to the Mayor, like the other departments, and not an outside corporation over which the city has little or no control. And I suppose that it should have a single head, like the other departments, with power to appoint deputies, or else be a board consisting of five or seven members, who should give their entire time to the work, and be paid an adequate salary.

I am having such a provision drawn in the proposed new charter, but whether it will be acceptable I do not know. And, then again, this Senatorial contest at Albany is such a distraction that I do not know whether it is worth while to send any charter to the Legislature this year.

Sincerely yours,
W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

James Creelman, Esq., 67 West Ninety-fourth Street, New York City.

A thorough investigation of the Board of Education was begun some time ago by a committee appointed by the Mayor, consisting of Controller Prendergast, President Mitchel of the Aldermen, and Borough President Miller of the Bronx. This investigation was authorized by the Board of Estimate following representations by last year's Budget Committee that it had been unable to obtain satisfactory answers to many of the questions which it put to the officers of the Board of Education while making up this year's budget.

Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr., President of the Board of Education, declined last night to comment on either Mr. Creelman's or the Mayor's letter.

FINDS HER HOME LOOTED.

Mrs. Sevilla Returns from a Shopping Trip to Discover a $3,000 Burglary.

Mrs. Margaret Sevilla, a widow, who lives on the second floor of Dallas Court, at 144th Street and Broadway, returned home at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon after having been shopping since shortly after noon. Her son, Haven Sevilla, a civil engineer, and her brother-in-law, William Heal, a manufacturer at Elizabeth, N. J., were at business, and she had let her maid go out before leaving the house.

Mrs. Sevilla was astonished, therefore, to find the shades drawn in her apartment and immediately started through the rooms, suspicious that burglars had been there. She noticed that pictures had been pulled from their places on the wall, and in the dining room and bedrooms she found that the drawers of sideboard and bureaus had been pulled open and their contents rummaged.

She called the Superintendent of the house and the bellboys, but none of them recalled having seen anybody enter Mrs. Sevilla's apartments. Investigation showed that jewelry and silver worth $3,000 had disappeared. The burglars, however, overlooked a coral necklace of considerable value and 1,000 shares of negotiable mining stocks. Among the articles stolen, Mrs. Sevilla said, were a diamond necklace, two diamond pins, two diamond cuff buttons, two diamond rings, a gold watch and chain, and a gold cigarette case.

Detectives from the West 125th Street Station were assigned to the case.

An American opera in English, on an American subject, "Natoma," by Victor Herbert and Joseph D. Redding, was produced by the Chicago Opera Company at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. The opera had its first performance in Philadelphia last Saturday. It has had an enormous amount of preliminary heralding and puffery in New York, and the public interest had been stimulated so that the Opera House was filled with a very large audience. There was much enthusiasm and abundant applause after certain of the airs and at the end of the acts, but at the end the audience seemed wearied and anxious to go. Singers, composer, librettist, conductor, manager, and others concerned in the production were repeatedly called out. They all had good reason to be pleased with the reception given the work by the first-night audience—so far as that goes.

A Fine Production.

The production of an American opera in English at the Metropolitan Opera House is still an incident of such rarity as to be noted as of special significance; although, if various promises and announcements are carried out that have been put forth, it bids fair to become speedily of less rarity. "Natoma" is the second of such operas to be heard at the Opera House; the first was Frederick S. Converse's "Pipe of Desire," which was produced last season.

There was every evidence that the management was very much in earnest in its production of "Natoma," and that it had done everything that could be done for the new opera. Mr. Campanini, who conducted it, had prepared it with much zeal and energy, with the advice and coöperation of the composer; many of the best and most popular singers of the company had been cast for the chief characters. Handsome and appropriate scenery had been provided for the setting, and the scenes, which are put in Southern California, give abundant opportunity for picturesque effects. This is specially true of the costumes, which were rich and varied and were said to be carefully studied from authentic models. The production was a fine one in almost every respect, that reflected credit on all those concerned in it, and it was evidently a sincere attempt to carry the work to sucof success and that many passages of the work are dull, disjointed, and uninteresting.

Inherited from Hammerstein.

The Chicago Opera Company came into possession of "Natoma" by inheritance from Mr. Hammerstein, as it did much else. He commissioned Mr. Herbert to write it, and expected to produce it in the season of 1909-10—or at least put it into his announcement for that season, which may not be the same thing. It has been looming vaguely upon the operatic horizon for a couple of years. Mr. Herbert has been for a good many years well known to New York as a most versatile musician, as an accomplished 'cellist, a conductor, a composer of talent and great facility, most widely known through his comic operas which have had great and deserved success; but also to a somewhat smaller circle through more serious music—orchestral suites and symphonic poems, concertos for his instrument, the violoncello, and a dramatic cantata, "The Captive," written for the Worcester festival of 1891. There was no reason to doubt that he would some day undertake also a "grand opera," nor that his skill and resource would fail him in that momentous undertaking, when the time should arrive for it. Nor have they.

"Natoma" is a work of many pleasing qualities that does credit in many respects to Mr. Herbert's musicianship, to his serious purpose and ambition. It gives frequent attestation of his adaptability and dexterity, to his skill in writing for the voice, to his ready command of choral effects, and of brilliant scoring for the orchestra. And this may be said with a full consciousness that in a larger sense his music has not reached a uniform level of success.

The public has not been allowed to remain in ignorance of the coming of "Natoma," of its story, the sources of its music, the objects of its librettist and composer. These have been heralded in innumerable columns of newspaper publicity. The event did not make its momentuousness unquestionable when it came. It may be doubted whether the great American opera has been found in "Natoma," or whether Mr. Herbert has founded a "school."

"Natoma" is, of course, an "American" opera, but the Americanism of its subject is not wholly unmixed. Its action takes place in California while it was still under Spanish rule. The heroine is an Indian maiden, whose Americanism is not to be gainsaid. The hero is an American naval officer who comes upon the scene as a foreigner, and is greeted as such, and the other principal characters are "a noble Spaniard," his daughter, a young Spaniard, a Spanish priest, and a half breed. The local color is given by music that is partly Indian, partly Spanish.

Not Convincing as a Drama.

"Natoma" was disclosed last evening to be an opera of uneven merit, not without pleasing and some highly effective pages, but not at all convincing as a drama expressed in music. Mr. Puccini's opera, "The Girl of the Golden West," has obviously owed a large part of its success not to his music, but to the striking and powerfully melodramatic libretto provided for it from Mr. Belasco's play. The reverse is true of this newest American opera. The degree of success that is destined for "Natoma" will be due chiefly to Mr. Herbert's music and will be in spite of its libretto. This is an amateurisn production, both in style and diction, and also in its construction. It is written in prose, with the interspersion of numerous lyrics. The prose is bald and conventional and the lyrics are of the most hopeless operatic type, of the bad old kind, constructed on Voltaire's theory that what is too foolish to be said is appropriate to be sung.

This libretto shows certain improbabilities in the development of the story and not a little inexperience in the requirements of the stage. The audience is asked to believe much that its reason must balk at. Would "a noble Spaniard of the old régime," for instance, such as Don Francisco is represented to be, have allowed his daughter to meet a strange foreign officer alone, at the very entrance of his own house, to converse with him without a duenna, and make violent love to him? And is it likely that there should be such easy immunity for an Indian girl—member of a subject race whom, in her own words, they "ignore like so much carrion"—who should deliberately stab to death a young Spaniard of distinguished family at a festal gathering, with plenty of able-bodied and athletic men standing about? Yet when Natoma, at the most frenzied moment of the barbaric "dagger dance," in the second act, has accomplished her well-timed thrust at Alvarado, whose impending abduction of Barbara nobody else is supposed to have seen, the crowd cries "Kill her!" but it falls back obediently when Lieut. Paul Merrill calls the soldiers to her rescue and opens a very convenient, broad pathway before her, along which she proceeds tranquilly to the church door and the opportune protection of the priest.

Nor does the situation seem to be finally settled by the conversion of Natoma under the persuasion of Father Peralta in the mission church and her reception into the convent, in the presence of a large congregation that has assembled at the psychological moment, as though by some intuition of Natoma's change of faith. All these things give various opportunities to the composer, but they involve such a surrender by the listener of all sense of the realities as only the most conventional of operatic devices require.

The first act is mostly occupied with preliminaries and with the very sudden and expeditious love making of Liuet. Paul Merrill and Barbara, fresh from her convent school. The second act is evidently intended to carry the burden of the opera and to mark the climax of its effectiveness. Here everything has been piled up: gay and animated gatherings of the townspeople of Santa Barbara, in bright and picturesque costumes for the "fiesta," and boisterous welcomes for "vacheros" and "rancheros," for the alcalde, arriving in state, for Don Francisco and his daughter on horseback, and finally for Lieut. Merrill and a detachment of his American sailors. There are lively chaffing choruses by the young men and women, sentimental love singing to the music of guitar and mandolin; a lusty bronco buster's song; dancing—the habañera, the minuet, the pañuelo, and the barbaric "Dagger Dance"; and finally Natoma's quick stroke that kills Don Alvarado as he is in the act of abducting Barbara. Composer and librettist have exhausted their ingenuity in filling the scene with movement and with music. But its effect is catchy and lacking in continuity. The third act offers a strong contrast in its dim and churchly quiet, in the ecclesiastical music intoned by friars and nuns, and the song of Natoma and her solemn interview with the padre.

Music Filled with "Local Color."

Mr. Herbert has undertaken to fill his music with "local color" and to make it pointedly and strongly dramatic. He has made a large use of "representative themes"—it would be difficult to imagine an opera written at the present day without some sort of use of such themes—but he has not used them in the thoroughgoing Wagnerian manner, in which the orchestral part is a tissue of such motives, interwoven, combined, and developed. His orchestral part is more freely written with the introduction of leading motives at certain moments, either as a suggestion or in more comprehensive development as the occasion requires. Mr. Herbert is a facile inventor of tunes, and he is not at a loss for any tunes of his own. But he has made a great point of using themes derived in whole or in part from Indian melodies, in order to gain in the fullest measure what he regards as the local color for the time and place.

How far such a local color is really to be gained in this way is a debatable question. Indian tunes do not fall upon the ears of Americans as anything familiar or in any way belonging to themselves, as do the folktunes of England, France, Germany, Italy, Bohemia, Poland, Russia, or Norway to the natives of those countries, even those most sophisticated in modern musical art. Indian tunes are to us exotic, the strange utterance of an alien race, and form no sort of substratum for our musical feelings. They are for the most part hard and uncouth in outline, difficult and intractable material. Mr. Herbert's method has been to use portions of Indian themes as rhythmic and melodic elements, modifying and developing them to suit his purpose, and of course harmonizing them in accordance with his own feeling and taste—for Indian music in its wild state is a stranger to harmony.

Only in two cases has he introduced Indian songs in their original form: In the savage "Dagger Dance" in the second act and the "Hawk Song" that Natoma sings in the third. Mr. Herbert has been ingenious in his use of these Indian elements, to make their rhythmic and melodic characteristics count for their utmost. It may be that they count for too much. There is undoubtedly a monotony in their frequent reptition. Most of them have two salient features that bring them aggressively to the fore when they are heard. They are in the pentatonic scale, (the scale that lacks the fourth and seventh degrees, such as is obtained by playing the black keys of the piano,) and they have that rhythmic peculiarity known as the "snap" when it occurs in Scotch music and more familiar in "rag-time" songs that have vulgarized it. Both of these features are characteristic in different degrees of the folk songs of several different peoples; but they are most familiar to us in Scottish music. It will not be surprising, therefore, if to many the music of "Natoma" shall suggest the Scotch before it does the Indian.

The most effective use that is made of these Indian themes is of the two that are connected with Natoma, both of which are first developed in the first act and are frequently used later. Natoma's narrative of her ancestors in that act; her regretful song, "Together we might have wandered," and her prayer to Manitou in the second act, and her "Hawk Song" in the third, are the most conspicuous examples of the use of Indian motives or suggestions in solo airs. But they are more or less disappointing in either musical beauty or dramatic effectiveness. The "Dagger Dance" has a savage vigor, but its value is chiefly rhythmical.

The Spanish half of Mr. Herbert's Spanish-American local color is more unmistakable, and, on the whole, more successful. The habañera, the pañuelo, the Spanish bronco song sung by Pico, and its accompanying chorus, all in the second act, are written in excellent Spanish, and it was significant how immediate was their appeal to the audience.

Flavor of Comic Opera.

In some of his music written in neither Indian nor Spanish idioms Mr. Herbert is less fortunate. Some of them have slipped too easily from his pen, and there is the flavor of comic opera about them. Lieut. Merrill's song to Natoma early in the first act, "Gentle maiden, tell me," belongs clearly to the sentimental section of a comic opera; so does Barbara's long air, for which a full stage is made to wait in the second act, especially that part which begins "I list the trill in golden throat." Lieut. Merrill sings an impassioned tribute to Columbus, also in this second act, which is likewise a fine specimen of the Broadway style—though the verses would have doubtful acceptance even in that.

Mr. Herbert writes with skill for the orchestra; his orchestration is brilliant and sonorous. It is sometimes overladen, and he has an undue fondness for explosive effects. He is more successful in sustained passages than in those of dramatic movement or excitement; for in these he loses hold of the broad line and sweep, and his style becomes spasmodic and disjointed. His orchestral preludes to the second and third acts are interesting and well written symphonic movements.

The choruses are full of vigor and frequently of good part-writing. It is a pretty effect where the choruses sing behind the scenes as Alvarado makes his declaration of love to Barbara in the first act. There is ingenuity in some of those that contribute to the picturesqueness of the second act; others are commonplace. The use of churchly effects in the last act has been carried out with skill, and the result is truly impressive.

Miss Garden's Striking Impersonation.

Miss Garden has made a new and striking impersonation as the heroine of this opera. She has conceived the Indian maiden as a very intense and serious young person. She is lithe and stealthily active in her movements, and even in her passion for the American officer and her devotion to Barbara—a devotion that leads her to the last verge of self-sacrifice—there is much of the savage. She executes the "Dagger Dance" with feline grace and celerity. She has sacrificed remorselessly everything to the make-up of the Indian, and in mask and coiffure, as well as in costume, she has put herself entirely into the character. The music lies very well for her voice, and she sings it as well as she does any music.

Mr. John McCormack sings the music of the American naval officer admirably and he makes an earnest effort to embody the part, in which his lack of dramatic temperament and skill stands somewhat in his way. Mr. Sammarco does some really beautiful singing as Alvarado, though the music appears to lie somewhat lower than the best ranges of his voice. So does Mr. Huberdeau as Don Francisco, a very intelligent interpretation. Mr. Preisch is a member of the company not hitherto known in New York, but he was remarkably successful in the by no means insignificant part of Castro, the halfbreed. He made of it a very characteristic figure. Mr. Dufranne was wholly successful as Padre Peralta, singing the music nobly, and embodying the very appearance of the priest. The part of Barbara was taken by Miss Lillian Grenville, who had appeared but once before in New York, in the recent performance of Offenbach's "Contes d'Hoffmann," under unfavorable circumstances. She did not make a highly faverable impression through her singing, nor did she show great talent in acting, in a part that is not in itself very grateful.

The fact that "Natoma" was performed in English, the language in which the libretto was written, might have had more significance if the libretto had been written in better English. As it was, though the style of the libretto had probably little to do with it, much of the performance was as unintelligible as if it had been in Italian. Miss Garden made herself understood, largely through her conception of the Indian maiden's natural enunciation as something particularly slow, distinct, and impressive on all occasions.

Mr. McCormack was less easily intelligible, and the foreign contingent struggled bravely, and with more or less lack of success, to project a comprehensible English over the footlights. Mr. Priesch was one of the most successful of all the singers who took part in the opera, in this feature of his work.

RECEPTION IN GRAND FOYER.

Clarence H. Mackay's Guests—Elaborate Floral Decorations.

The walls and ceilings of the grand foyer, where a reception was given by Clarence H. Mackay after the opera, were trellised and hung with Southern smilax, which was broken by pink and white azaleas and studded with electric lights, shaded with pink.

Over the entrance leading from the small foyer to the grand foyer were draped the State flags of California and New York on either side of the Stars and Stripes. Beneath the State flag of California were placed a large bunch of California poppies.

The buffet table in the grand foyer almost entirely encircled the room, and this was decorated with tall vases filled with American Beauty roses. There were also fifteen tables seating ten each, and in the centre of each table was a basket of Spring flowers.

The columns of the grand foyer were hung with green, with trailing festoons of tiger lilies, lilacs, azaleas, and topped with forsythia.

The entrance to the foyer from the grand staircase was decorated with smilax and large bay trees. One corner of the small foyer was used for Nahan Franko's orchestra of fifty pieces, which played during the reception.

Among those asked to the reception were Mayor and Mrs. Gaynor, Major Gen. Frederick D. Grant and Mrs. Grant, Rear Admiral H. C. Leutze and Mrs. Leutze, the Senators and Representatives from California, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler and Mrs. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Damrosch, Prince Paul Troubetzkoy, Prof. and Mrs. Brander Matthews, Edward Robinson, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art; William H. The artists and company of the Metropolitan Opera Company and heads of departments, as well as the artists and company of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, were present at the reception, the Directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and all of the founders of The New Theatre.

A GALA PERFORMANCE.

Many Curtain Calls and the Performers Deluged with Flowers.

The performance of "Natoma" at the Metropolitan last night developed the fact that the libretto vendors do not as yet understand the principle of American opera. In the corridors before the performance they were calling: "Librettos, correct translations!"

Inside the house presented as gay an aspect as it has any time this season, and the house has already seen the first performance anywhere of new operas by Humperdinck and Puccini.

The boxes were draped with flags, and at the back in the centre were banners bearing the arms of California and New York. The programmes were souvenirs, and the first page bore portraits of Victor Herbert, Joseph D. Redding, Andreas Dippel, and Cleofonte Campanini.

The performance started at 8:10, and the first curtain fell a little after 9. There were nine curtain calls. The first four were shared by the principal singers who had appeared in the act. When Miss Garden appeared alone to take the fifth call there was immense applause. She also took the sixth and seventh calls, and in the two last she dragged out her comrades with her.

The finale of the second act with its sensational dagger dance was the signal for renewed applause. There were fourteen calls after this act. For several of the first calls the entire curtain was raised, disclosing the full stage. After the principals had bowed several times Miss Garden made a dive into the wings and presently returned with Mr. Herbert and Mr. Redding. Subsequently Mr. Dippel appeared, and Mr. Campanini and Mr. Almanz, the stage director.

All of these were deluged with flowers and wreaths. The stage attendants dumped quantities of sent pieces on the stage near the footlights. An occupant of a grand tier box threw a bunch of violets and orchids to Miss Garden.

The speculators did very well on the sidewalk. They were selling balcony seats for $5 after the performance had commenced.

CLEMENT'S RECITAL.

Large Audience Hears Tenor in Carnegie Hall.

Edmond Clément, the French tenor, appeared for the second time this season in a song recital yesterday afternoon, in Carnegie Hall. The audience was large and enthusiastic and the indications are that Mr. Clément might profitably become a fixture in this field of musical endeavor.

What Mr. Clément does in his song recitals belongs to the very small things in art, but is none the less exquisite. The carved tracery in a Gothic church is often as beautiful in its way as the church itself, and Mr. Clément's singing may be compared to this tracery. His singing of the song of the "Maisonette" from "Manon," for instance, is so exquisitely planned and executed that it would be very difficult for any other artist to equal, let alone excel, it. This song probably marked the climax of the afternoon's enjoyment, and was repeated.

Bernard's "Ca fait peur aux Oiseaux" was another exquisite combination of perfect understanding of the mood of the song joined with beautiful phrasing and faultless diction.

One fault may be found with Mr. Clément's style of singing and his programmes; they are in a sense monotonous. Yesterday this fault was minimized both by the shortness of the programme and the inclusion of certain songs in slightly more robust style, which, to be sure, Mr. Clément does not sing so well as the others. Three songs in English were included in the scheme of the afternoon, and it may be said that Mr. Clément's diction in this language does not as yet completely pass muster.

The Courtly Age Of Louis XV.

HARDLY need one call on the imagination to picture a social gathering in the days when Louis XV. held Court at Versailles.

Gone, beyond recall, are the haughty women with their powder and their patches, and the men with their jewelled snuff-boxes. But, thanks to our careful Reproductions, there may still be seen the tapestried Bergères, with carved and gilded frames, in which they sat, the inlaid Tables at which they played their Lansquenet or Piquet, or the Chaises Longues on which they reclined.

By these, too, may be brought into our own rooms a breath of the urbanity of that courtly age.

CHASE LEADS YANKEE INVASION OF SOUTH

Veteran Players Going to Hot Springs, Va., to Engage in Preliminary Training.

2 WEEKS OF WORK AND PLAY

Then All Hands Will Hike to Athens, Ga., Where Baseball Practice Will Be Held Daily Until March 25.

Manager Hal Chase of the Yankees, with Jack Knight, Bert Daniels, and Ray Fisher, started yesterday for Hot Springs, Va., where they will be joined this afternoon by several other members of the team for two weeks of out-door jollification before assembling at the team's regular training camp at Athens, Ga. Hot baths, plenty of tramping over the mountains, golf, and gymnasium work, will take up the time of the athletes for the next couple of weeks. Not a baseball or bat will be taken, for regular work on the diamond will not begin until the entire squad reports at Athens on March 15.

The other players who are due at Hot Springs to-day will come from various places where they have been spending the Winter. Ed Sweeney will report from Chicago, Roy Hartzell, recently acquired by trade from St. Louis, will come from Golden, Col.; Walter Blair from Lewisburg, Penn.; Russell Ford from Minneapolis, Jack Quinn from Pottsville, Penn.; Jack Warhop from Freeport, Ill.; Jim Vaughn from Weathersford, Texas; Ray Caldwell from Tidioute, Penn.; Otis Johnson from Eaton, Ind.; Birdie Cree from Khedive, Penn.; Charley Hemphill from Youngstown, Ohio; Earl Gardner from Sparta, Ill., and Gene Elliott from Grove City, Penn.

Elliott and Caldwell are the only youngsters going to Hot Springs. Otis Johnson was with the team on the Southern trip last season, but has had a year of seasoning with Jersey City. Manager Chase expects great things of these three players. Scout Irwin, who recommends Elliott, believes that he will make good. This player was the sensational third baseman of the Ohio-Pennsylvania League last season and in that organization was a .290 batsman and a valuable run getter.

On Saturday "Duke" Farrell, the Yankee coach, with Scout Irwin, will take a squad of a dozen youngsters from here to Athens. The players who will go direct to Athens are pitchers Robert Revelle of Portsmouth, Penn.; Harry Abeles of Terrell, Texas; Larry McClure, the former Amherst twirler; Harry McGainer of Athen, Ohio, and Ernest Burbank of Hampton, Va. Catchers—Joe Walsh of Waterbury, Conn.; Bob Williams of Hopedale, Ohio, and Harvey Russell of Hampton, Va.; infielder Louis Litschi of Reading, Penn., and outfielders Harry Bailey of Shawnee, Ohio; Al Jube of Brooklyn, and Benny Kauff of Pomeroy, Ohio.

"BASEBALL IS SAFE"—LYNCH.

President of National League Scoffs at Betting Plans of Poolroom Men.

President Thomas J. Lynch of the National League yesterday branded as absurd the new poolroom syndicate of Newport, Ky., which is trying to institute pool selling on the results of the pennant races in the National and American Leagues and the American Association.

"I do not take this thing seriously," said President Lynch, "and I think any baseball fan who takes the time to read over the prospectus of odds and quotations will see that it is another one of those 'sure-thing, quick-touch' affairs and will toss the paper into the waste basket and think no more about it.

"The baseball public to-day knows a lot more about the game than it did twenty years ago," continued President Lynch, "and realizes that it is perfectly on the level. I want to say emphatically that I think it is absolutely impossible to make baseball crooked. The fame itself is straight, and the least suspicion of underhanded work could be detected. Why, a player to-day wouldn't dare to be anything but on the level; the penalty would be too great. He would be barred for life, and what gambler could offer a player inducement enough to make him take a chance that would mean the loss of his livelihood? The mere intimation that any gamblers could undermine the great National game in its present prosperous, sound condition is a joke.

"By merely looking over the odds this syndicate offers," Mr. Lynch said, "shows that they know little of the mental make-up of the baseball fan. I wonder if they think that any one would be foolish enough to let them have the use of any of his money for six months without the least bit of security? It seems to me that this point will kill the thing right there. Who is going to send his money to Kentucky with no assurance that he will ever see it again? They must believe that folks are becoming feeble-minded if they think that any one would give them money to be used for any purpose they see fit without any security. This scheme will not even appeal to betting people, because no one is going to wager on a chance that takes all season to materialize. You could distribute 20,000 of those quotations in New York to-morrow and I don't believe you would receive fifty responses.

"These bookmakers do not seem to realize that the game of baseball is different from horse racing. In the racing game the competition alone isn't the thing that appeals to the patrons; it's the strong desire to wager something on the result. In baseball it is entirely different; the game has taken its hold on the American public for the thrills, interest, and excitement of the contest itself rather than merely the result. The game is great enough to carry itself along without any artificial stimulus such as betting. Baseball is perfectly safe from the poolroom forces. I don't think there's enough money in the whole country to make the game crooked," Mr. Lynch concluded.

GIANT REGULARS AT MARLIN.

Secretary Gray and Fifteen Players Join Manager McGraw at Camp.

Special to The New York Times.

MARLIN, Texas, Feb. 28.—When the Giants arose for breakfast to-day they found a rainstorm was on for the day and practice at the ball park was out of the question, as it continued to rain all day. Most of the boys were glad to get the rest, and spent the day in the hotel.

The morning trains brought into camp from San Antonio Billy Gray, the Secretary of the Giants, and soon after his arrival another train brought Pitcher Louis Drucke. He came in smiling and looking in the pink of condition.

The 4:20 P. M. train rolled in with a big bunch of regulars as follows: Christy Mathewson, J. T. Meyers, George Schlei, L. K. Ames, Josh Devore, A. H. Bridwell, Larry Doyle, Arthur Fletcher, George Wiltse, Otis Crandall, J. Murray, Fred Merkle, Rube Marquard, and Arthur Devlin. Mathewson and Wiltse were accompanied by their wives. Shafer and Snodgrass are expected to arrive from California to-morrow. ### Yankee Player Reinstated.

WINNERS WITH THE CUE.

George Moore, the holder of the record high run of fifteen at three-cushion carrom billiards, who is practicing at McGraw's Billiard Academy, Thirty-fifth Street and Sixth Avenue, for his coming championship match with John Daly, the holder of the title, played two games yesterday and won both matches. In the afternoon the challenger defeated Al. Stevens by the score of 40 to 11, in twenty-six innings, being decided in twenty-seven minutes. Moore's high run was 5, and Stevens made 3. In the evening game the challenger defeated G. F. Smith by the score of 40 to 31, in fifty-five innings. Moore's high run was 5 and Smith's was 4.

Alfred De Oro, the pool champion, made two runaway wins of his practice games yesterday afternoon and evening at Doyle's, when he defeated Sam. Livingstone by 100 to 25, and Dr. William Howe 100 to 49. This afternoon he will play W. A. Tilt of the New York Athletic Club, and in the evening his opponent will be Seymour Felix. This work is in anticipation of his match for the championship against Thomas Hueston.

Beginning to-morrow night the Chicago team will cross cues with the local experts in the three-cushion series. The Chicago trio will be Dr. Harris, Charles Moran, and Fred. Wheeler. The local team will be chosen from Sam. Lazarus, John Manahan, Joe Stone, William Croll, and Fred. Garfunkle. The standing of the teams is as follows: St. Louis—Won 27, lost 12, percentage .692; Pittsburg—17, 10, .629; Kansas City, 24, 15, .615; Chicago, 16, 12, .571; Philadelphia, 12, 13, .480; Brooklyn, 17, 19, .472; New York, 18, 23, .361; Boston, 7, 29, .194.

In last night's game of the annual amateur handicap 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at Keeney's Knickerbocker Billiard Academy, in Brooklyn, F. A. Boyd, handicapped at 215 points, defeated W. B. Seale (200 points) by the score of 215 to 150 in sixty-two innings. The winner made high runs of 15 and 13, with an average of 3 29-62. Seale made the high run of 10 twice, with an average of 2 26-62.

At the Riverside Billiard Academy, 125th Street and Seventh Avenue, where the tournament for the Harlem Class A amateur pool championship is being decided, Robert Enright, playing at scratch, 100 points, defeated Jack Fitzwater (70 points) last night by the score of 100 to 52. The winner made a high run of 27. By securing a victory over Fitzwater last night, Enright places himself in a tie with Rud Walker and Mike Hand for first place in the tournament.

Campbell Wins Over Shea.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—William Campbell of this city defeated James Shea of Chicago in a National amateur three-cushion billiard game to-night by 50 to 31 in seventy-six innings. Campbell's high run was 5 and Shea's 4.

CLIFFSIDE HOCKEY TEAM DEFEATED

New York A. C., Through "Doc" Mills's Fine Defense at Goal, Downs Canadians.

The New York Athletic Club hockey team defeated the Cliffside Athletic Club of Ottawa at St. Nicholas Rink last night by a score of 4 to 3. The Winged Footers surprised the Canadians at every stage of the game and played a defense that raised havoc with their opponents' combination plays. The Cliffsides showed plenty of speed, and handled their sticks as well as the other Canadian teams that have played here, but they relied too much on individual runs and did not figure on the stone wall defense which "Doc" Mills put up at the New York net. Simms and Mallen were on the New York wings, and did some passing which puzzled the Cliffsides, and the latter made the spectacular runs of the game and caged the disk twice. Denesha, at centre for the home team, was in every scrimmage, and had the Canadians on the run following him.

The Cliffsides did not show the vim and dash of the other teams from over the border. While at times their skating was swift and spectacular and their runs down the ice dazzling, the seven showed little team work, and were decidedly outclassed in this phase of the game. Much was expected of Dion, the Cliffside rover, for a big reputation had preceded him here. Only occasionally last night did he show any speed. He dodged cleverly and carried the puck with sureness, but not once did any of his swift shots land in the cage. Broadbent, the Cliffside right wing, and Smith, the centre, did most of the playing for the visitors. They peppered Mills with shots often enough, but very few of them squeezed by the Winged Foot goal guardian.

The Canadians started off as if they expected an easy time with the New Yorks. They carried the puck to the New York goal and playfully ran around the cage with it several times. The Canadian rooters among the spectators burst into loud applause every time one of the Cliffside skaters stole the puck. Dion zig-zagged his way down the rink, but his marksmanship was bad when he shot at Mills. The puck was brought from behind the net to the centre of the rink, where Broadbent made a long, hard drive and sent the rubber in for the first score. After 10:02 minutes of play, Mallen, on a pretty run, caged the rubber alone and tied the score. The Cliffsides scored another two minutes after, when Smith caught Broadbent's rebound and shot it past Mills. Simms tied the score for the New York Athletic Club in 13:54, when he swashed the rubber into the cage on a long shot. The rubber hit McKinley's shinguards and carromed into the cage. Denesha brought the crowd to its feet on another long shot from the side of the rink in 15:31, putting New York in the lead.

In the second period the New Yorks made a bold attempt to win the game. The play centred about the New York cage and at times the players were so mixed up in the scrimmage that it was impossible to follow the puck. Most of the time it was lost in the maze of scrambling skates. Both teams did more defensive playing than anything else and all attempt at team work was thrust aside. The Canadians slowed up considerably and lost the speed that they showed early in the fray.

Mallen again broke loose on a mad run with the rubber, and after dodging by all the Canadians who tried to check him, sent the rubber in from a difficult angle in 6:52. The playing lagged at times after that until a few minutes before the end of the game, when Broadbent scored a goal from scrimmage.

Another Canadian team, the Shamrocks of Montreal, will play the Crescents on Saturday night.

HARVARD FENCERS BEST.

Yale One Bout Behind Crimson Team—Princeton Outclassed.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 28.—Harvard's fencing team won the annual three-cornered tournament with Yale and Princeton, held at the Hemenway gymnasium to-night, defeating Yale by a single bout and completely outclassing Princeton. The Crimson fencers scored deciding thrusts in 13 out of 27 bouts, while Yale won 12 and Princeton, 2.

Capt. J. A. McLaughlin of the Harvard team, was mainly responsible for his team's victory, winning all of the six bouts in which he participated. Ross of Yale, however, was generally conceded to have shown the best technical form of the evening. Princeton's brace of wins was the work alone of Gardner, who won a bout each against Harvard and Yale swordsmen.

American Power Boat Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the American Power Biat Association, held last night at the Waldorf-Astoria, the President of the organization, H. T. Koerner, in his annual report, said that during the past year the membership had increased from 11,000 to about 25,000 members. There are now 114 clubs in good standing, as compared to 68 clubs a year ago.

About sixty members of the association, representing many individual members, attended the session last night.

Th efollowing officers weer unanimously elected: President—H. T. Koerner of the Buffalo Launch Club; Secretary—M. M. Whitaker of the Crescent Yacht Club of Watertown; Treasurer—J. N. Oliphant of the Thousand Island Yacht Club; Measurer—Henry J. Gislow of the Atlantic Yacht Club of Sea Gate, L. I.

Queal Defeats Ljungstrom in Race.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 28.—In a seven-mile race, thirty-one laps to the mile, at Alexandria Bay to-night, Bill Queal, the Alexandria Bay runner, who has made a creditable showing upon the New York tracks this Winter, defeated Ltungstrom, the Swedish Marathoner, by eight laps. Queal gained a lap nearly every mile, taking on three in the fourth mile. The time was 36:34.

BASKET BALL MUDDLE ENDS.

High Schools Championship Declared Void Owing to Many Irregularities.

At the regular meeting of the High Schools Games Committee, held yesterday in the High School of Commerce, it was decided to declare the recent P. S. A. L. tournament, which was intended to determine the basket ball championship for season of 1910-11, for the high schools void. This determination was reached because of the seemingly never-ending list of protests, disqualifications, and the acknowledged professionalism existing. As nearly every team in the league would be under the ban if an investigation was started and the general summing-up would finally award the championship to the team now at the tail-end, if it were carried out.

The numerous protests received took up the entire time of the committee, and resulted in the disqualification of several well-known players, among whom were Goldberg of Commerce, Friedland of Stuyvesant, Umbach of Flushing, and Cohen of the Eastern District. These players were all found guilty of playing under assumed names in outside games, which is against the ruling of the committee, and in addition to this the entire team of the Newton High School were threatened with the same penalty, although the matter was postponed until the next meeting.

It was also made clear by the officials of the committee that they intended to handle all the affairs and competitions of the high schools themselves rather than let it go on in the regular way under the P. S. A. L., when they announced the change of date for the High Schools Swimming Champoinship, to be held at the City College on March 10. These swimming championships will be entirely managed by the High School Games Committee, and this body will do all the work in conjunction with them which was formerly done by the P. S. A. L.

Columbia Beats Yale, 20 to 10.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 28.—The Columbia basketball five outplayed Yale at all points in the Yale gymnasium to-night and won, 20 to 10. The score at the end of the half was 10 to 6 in favor of the visitors. Finnessy, Yale's Captain, was unable to play because of an injured leg. The losing of to-night's game will probably keep Yale from getting second place in the intercollegiate league, of which Columbia has already won the championship. The line-up:

| Yale. | Positions. | Columbia |
|---|---|---|
| Hurlburt | Left forward | Kiendl |
| Reilly | Right forward | Mahon |
| Brinsmaid, Carson | Centre | Alexander |
| Murfey | Left guard | Benson |
| Hayes, Wild, Tommers | Right guard | Mendelsohn |

Goals from floor—Kiendl, (3,) Mahion, (2,) Alexander, (2,) Reilly, Hurlburt, (2.) Goals from foul—Reilly, (4,) Kiendl, (6.) Referee—Mr. Cartwright, Swarthmore. Umpire—Mr. Thorpe, Columbia. Time of halves—Twenty minutes each.

Manhattan Outclasses Cushing.

Completely outplaying their opponents on all sides the Manhattan College basket ball quintet defeated the five from Cushing College, Mass., last night on the court of the Irish-American Athletic Club by the score of 35 to 16. Although the visitors tried hard and played a fairly good game, they were unable to combat the fast work of the New Yorkers both at guarding and passing, and as soon as the whistle for play blew, Suarez, the crack forward of Manhattan, started the scoring by a clever goal, and never ceased his fast work until the final whistle, making 17 of the total tallies for the home five. The line-up:

| Manhattan. | Positions. | Cushing College |
| Suarez | Right forward | Stanton |
| Cavarello | Left forward | Gallagher |
| Leonard | Centre | Butler |
| Flynn | Left guard | May |
| Donahue | Right guard | Hill |

Goals from field—Suarez, 7; Cavarello, 3; May, 3; Leonard, 2; Donahue, 2; Flynn, 2; Stanton, 2; Gallagher, and Butler. Goals from foul—Suarez, 3; May, 2. Referee—H. Miller. Time of halves—Twenty minutes.

HASTINGS IS COMMODORE.

Seawanhaka Corinthian Yachtsmen Dine and Elect Officers.

At the adjourned annual meeting of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club held last night at the New York Club, 20 West Fortieth Street, these officers were elected for 1911: Commodore, Frank F. Hastings, Ketch Peggy; Vice Commodore, Edward F. Whitney, steamer Arrow; Rear Commodore, Daniel Bacon, sloop Avenger; Secretary, Everett Dominick; Treasurer, Colgate Hoyt, Jr.; Measurer, John Hyslop; Trustees, class of 1914—F. G. Stewart, Clinton MacKenzie, and James A. Blair, Jr. The other trustees now in office continue.

The meeting was preceded by a dinner, at which it was announced that the new "P" Class sloop, being built by the Herreshoffs by a syndicate of club members for the purpose of racing for the Manhasset Bay Challenge Cup, will be ready for delivery early in May.

A special Race Committee, composed of Eliot Tuckerman and George Nichols of Harvard and Thomas Boardman of Yale, have completed arrangements for a race from New London to Oyster Bay on the day following the Yale-Harvard boat race in June.

The reports of the Secretary, Treasurer, and Chairman of the regatta committees show the club to be in a flourishing condition.

It was decided that the race from New London to Oyster Bay will be open to graduates and undergraduates of Yale and Harvard Universities who own boats or whose fathers own boats which they may borrow. The race is to be started as soon as practicable after the last rowing race on the Thames, and the yachts that take part in it will also be eligible to sail in the annual race of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club off Oyster Bay. An entertainment at the clubhouse at Oyster Bay will take place after the race.

Commodore Hastings made these appointments on his staff last night:

George E. Roosevelt, Fleet Captain; the Rev. Robert Davis, Fleet Chaplain; Dr. Homer Gibney, Fleet Surgeon; Eliot Tuckerman, Signal Officer.

HARVARD SHELLS CRUSHED.

English Racing Boats Damaged by Rough Seas on Voyage to Boston.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 28.—Harvard crews have suffered a handicap by the loss of two new racing shells recently shipped from London, which were ruined in a rough passage across the Atlantic. The shells were lashed to the main deck of the steamer and were battered in by heavy seas.

The development of the Crimson crews this year has also been retarded by the ice embargo. The Charles River still remains frozen and open water is not expected for some time.

CUP DEFENDER FOR HARMSWORTH PRIZE

Albert E. Smith Orders Fast Motor Boat to Keep International Cup Here.

Another race for the British International or Harmsworth trophy in American waters next season is assured. It transpired yesterday at the Motor Boat Show that Albert E. Smith of New York, a member of the Board of Governors of the Motor Boat Club of America, has commissioned Henry R. Sutphen, Vice President of the Electric Launch Company of Bayonne, N. J., to build for him a high-speed motor boat, with which he intends to defend the cup next August. The boat will be an Elco-Plane, the design and construction of which the company has devoted a great deal of attention in the way of extensive experiments carried on in the model basin of the Navy Yard, Washington, D. C. The new defender will be equipped with two 300-horsepower, 6-cylinder, air-starting and reversing standard gasoline marine engines of special design, which will be designed and built by the Standard Motor Construction Company of Jersey City, N. J.

Mr. Smith has been an enthusiastic yachtsman for a number of years, and last season successfully raced the Edith II., a 24-foot Elco express tender, which won all the important racing events in her class, including the International Championship trophy, and the New York to Poughkeepsie long distance race, 132 miles, in the fastest time ever made over the course, Mr. Smith steering and handling the boat himself. It is the intention of Mr. Sutphen and E. A. Riotte, who will give his personal attention to the installation of the power equipment, to have the boat running in the water by May 1, so that Mr. Smith and his operators can get the greatest amount of experience in handling the boat before the International race takes place.

By comparison with the attendance greater interest seems to be taken in the show now in progress than any other industrial exhibition ever held in Madison Square Garden. Up to the closing hour last night over 100,000 people had passed through the gates. Interest in the various exhibits seems to be unabated, and all day yesterday crowds of interested spectators viewed the boats and models where the demonstrators extolled the merits of their exhibits. That the lectures are productive of profit as well as interest was indicated by the fact that many of the boats and engines now being shown have been sold for delivery after the show closes, and the manufacturers' claim that they are so swamped with orders now that deliveries cannot be made until long after the date specified.

Many sales were reported yesterday by the Charles L. Seabury Company of Morris Heights, N. Y. Edward S. Woodward ordered a 30-foot motor boat of the runabout type, for service at his Summer place at Ardsley-on-Hudson, and John C. Eaton of Toronto, Ontario, ordered a 32-foot boat, with a 6-cylinder speedway motor, for service on Muskoka Lakes, Canada. Carl G. Fischer, owner of the 40-foot mahogany speedway racer, now at the show in connection with the Gas Engine and Power Company's exhibit, intends shipping his boat to Palm Beach to participate in the races there, beginning March 14.

Among the prominent visitors to the show yesterday were Dr. E. M. Stires, F. G. C. Lyon, New York Yacht Club; George G. McCracken; Harold S. Vanderbilt; Howard S. Borden; Woodbury Kane; Isaac Guggenheim; Charles F. Fletcher; John C. King; William Campbell; August Heckscher; Commodore H. H. Mellville; Charles A. Mather, Philadelphia; E. Walter Clark; Commodore Godfrey S. Mahn; Herbert Bromley; Al. P. Swoyer; Commodore Greene of the Frontenac Yacht Club; Ralph Slaven; H. H. Bashor of Baltimore, and Robert C. Kammerer of the New York Athletic Club.

Capt. J. A. H. Dressel, the manager of the show, has invited the pupils of the Hebrew Technical School to visit the show to-day. They will number about seventy-five, and will be under the direction of a master and two teachers.

BIG BENEFIT IN ARMORY.

Twenty-second Regiment to Aid Cause, with Athletics as a Medium.

Athletes of the metropolitan district will gather in force Saturday night in the armory of the Twenty-second Regiment in response to a call for competitors at a benefit to be tendered the family of Patrick Kirwin, a former employe of "Defendam." The committee in charge of the benefit announces the acceptance of invitations by all of the stars of the district, and promise an interesting set of sports as the result.

Among those who will appear in the 300-yard and 880-yard events are Mel Sheppard and Jim McEntee. Jack and Bob Eller, record holders over the hurdles, will be on hand to make amends for their defeat in the 65-yard low hurdle race at the Fordham games last Saturday night, and expect to break the record established by Walter Bursch, who has also been invited.

In the bicycle race Vandendries, Nerent, Goodwin, Fisher, Buckingham, and riders of that class will furnish an interesting contest. The Greek American A. C. has tendered the services of three pairs of champion wrestlers, who will give exhibitions at 115 poounds, 135 pounds, and 158 pounds. The regimental band will furnish music.

Longwood Club to Give Up Courts.

BOSTON, Feb. 28.—The Longwood Cricket Club, the first club in the United States to be devoted to lawn tennis, and known to tennis players the world over, is to give up its grounds on Longwood Avenue and consolidate with the Chestnut Hill Club in West Newton. The Longwood Club has no lease of its present grounds. The land is owned by the Sears family and the rental paid by the club is much less than the tax imposed by the city. The land has greatly increased in value in recent years, and demands of business representatives make it impracticable for the club to continue in its present home. While arrangement with the Chestnut Hill Club will be closed immediately, the Longwood Club plans to remain at its present location during the present season.

MR. MURPHY'S VIEWS.

In any argument with Charles F. Murphy definitions are of the first importance. He continually confounds the terms party and Murphy, and majority and Murphy, as though they were synonymous. Therefore when he argues that Mr. Sheehan is "the candidate of the party in the State" truth requires that his phrase be amended to read that Mr. Sheehan is the candidate of Murphy. So, too, when he speaks of the caucus he means Murphy, and the majority of the caucus is merely Murphy, and nothing but Murphy.

The boodle Aldermen of this city in 1884, when they granted the Broadway franchise to Mr. Jacob Sharp, of generous and accelerating memory, felt as Mr. Murphy feels, that they were the majority. They looked upon Hugh Grant, who refused to yield to the allurements of Sharp, as an obstructionist, just as Murphy now looks on the insurgents as obstructionists. In their long hours of sorrow and suffering in Sing Sing these boodle Aldermen had an opportunity to reflect upon their mistake in assuming that a mere numerical majority in a given undertaking is not the same thing as a majority which commands the support of public opinion. John Y. McKane believed himself to be, and in 1888 he actually was, a "majority" of the voters of Gravesend. He, too, went into prolonged retirement at Sing Sing, and doubtless indulged in bitter thoughts on the transitory nature of majorities. The public prosecutor convinced the boodle Aldermen of the error in their conception of the word "majority," and William J. Gaynor and Edward M. Shepard took an active and a successful part in the disillusionment of John Y. McKane. Let Charles F. Murphy profit by their example. We mean this not in the sense of Patrick Henry's admonition to George III., but as a word of friendly advice to Mr. Murphy concerning the emendation of his epistolary style.

Mr. Murphy is almost pathetic in his allusion to the abuse which Tammany Hall had to undergo during the recent campaign when it was made the target of all the attacks of "Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. Hearst, and their allies against the Democracy of the State." Tammany Hall was the target of Republican attack because it was the weakest point in the Democratic line. The most effective assault made upon the candidacy of Mr. Dix was in the charge that he had been nominated by Murphy, and that he would be Murphy's man. The sincere well-wishers of Mr. Dix and his independent supporters were more concerned over this charge than over anything else said in the campaign. They repelled it, because they did not believe it to be true. They do not now believe it to be true, and they are hoping, sometimes almost against hope, that Mr. Dix will do nothing, or, at least nothing more, to confirm the suspicion that Mr. Murphy has too much influence in the Executive Chamber.

It is, of course, true that if Mr. Murphy had given his support to Mr. Shepard in the Senatorial contest his services would not have been rejected. No candidate for office ever throws away support. Mr. Tilden and Mr. Cleveland accepted the support and the votes of Tammany, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Tilden was chiefly instrumental in getting a former chief of Tammany Hall into jail, and that Mr. Cleveland thoroughly detested the political methods that in his time, and in later times, have been characteristic of Tammany Hall leaders. No argument would suffice to convince Mr. Murphy that there is a great difference between his support of Mr. Sheehan given as he has given it, and his support of Mr. Shepard had he chosen to promote that gentleman's candidacy. Here again the primary necessity of correct definition arises. Mr. Murphy permits himself to say that "there was no real demand for the election of Mr. Shepard" outside of a few personally interested busybodies. Of course, every well-informed and candid man knows that this statement is flagrantly untrue. Evidence of popular support for Mr. Shepard has come from all over the State. It has been furnished by the Democratic press, by the thousands of letters and telegrams personally addressed to members of the Legislature. In respect to Mr. Sheehan there has been no such evidence. As his canvass has been managed popular support would have been superfluous. He needed only to be "appointed to his candidacy" by Mr. Murphy, and to have Mr. Murphy cast for him every legislative day at noon the votes he controls. But this distinction is lost on Murphy. It is not lost on Sheehan, but in his plans the Murphy majority bulks larger than the party majority. It is the only one on which he can rely.

It is really very good of Mr. Murphy to admit that he cannot bring himself to "believe that it is the deliberate desire of Mr. Shepard and his friends to now wreck the party and to prevent it from holding control of the State and contributing its share to Democratic victory in 1912." If Mr. Murphy should inadvertently fall into that belief, he would find himself opposed to the opinion of every intelligent Democrat in the Union whose opinion is worth consulting in a matter of this kind. The election of Mr. Shepard, like the election of Gov. Wilson in New Jersey, would have been a larger contribution to Democratic success in 1912 than any which this State could have made in any other way. The election of Mr. Sheehan would almost certainly give this State to the Republicans in 1912. Indeed, had it been known during the campaign that Mr. William F. Sheehan was to be the Senatorial candidate of Murphy's caucus, Mr. Murphy would have spent the Winter in Fourteenth Street instead of in the rigorous climate of Albany, for in that case the State would have elected a Republican Legislature.

THE MARCH DISBURSEMENTS.

Interest and dividends to a total exceeding $100,000,000 will be disbursed to-day, according to a compilation of The Journal of Commerce. Calamity hunters are invited to consider both the ample total and the fact that it exceeds the figures of the previous month or of March last year by an ample margin. In previous times of unsettlement it was a reduction of income which caused alarm about the principal. Now we are feeling or affecting alarm about the principal, although the income account is constantly enlarging, despite some quietness of trade.

Analysis of the details brings out curious facts. It is well known that the feeling about railways is less optimistic than regarding industrials. Yet industrial dividends are smaller than a year ago, and railway dividends are larger. The decrease in industrial dividends is largely explained by the reduced distribution of the leading corporation, for which there is no corresponding reduction of comparable importance in the railway list. Yet the Steel Corporation ranges high, while the railway list "looks down." It may be that this contrast exists because the railways "have got theirs," while retribution still awaits the industrial trusts. However that may be, the contrast between the actualities of trade and the disturbance of sentiment illustrates the fact that cash and confidence are both necessary for any real boom. Perhaps we are better without any boom, and shall do all the better for a period of quiet pending the critical conditions which must continue until nine men at Washington make up their minds on the conundrums set for them by the statutes enacted for the good of the people.

Many more are competent to form a judgment of the business outlook than can read the minds of the Supreme Court or the Inter-State Commerce Commission. It is this which holds prosperity in check, not any intrinsic unsoundness. We are actually doing exceptionally well in the way of trade, and there is no reason why we should not do better, as soon as the handicaps of law and politics are removed or reduced by the substitution of the known for the unknown. It matters less what the decisions may be than that they shall be rendered. Nobody can play a game without knowing the rules, or with rules subject to alteration during the progress of the game.

MR. GOMPERS'S MODEST DEMANDS.

Mr. Gompers issues his requisition for a new political party and a half million dollars. Both are to be devoted to the promotion of freedom as Mr. Gompers understands it. Mr. Gompers does not tell us what is the matter with the Federation of Labor for his purposes, but he does tell us why the old parties are not fit leaders for labor in its search for humanity and uplift, as expressed in shorter hours and more pay. The Republican Party represents wealth, and the Democratic Party is under suspicion of the same disability to lead the people out of bondage. There must be a change.

> Discontent must find expression in a broader and more humane party than either of the old parties as they stand at this time.
> The middle class, the business man, and the humble toilers are willing to fight to come into their own, but we believe in evolution, not revolution.

We might almost enlist with Mr. Gompers ourselves were it not for the light which he throws upon this admirable programme in his circular to all labor organizations asking their contributions toward his half million > for the purpose of aiding our fellow-workingmen in Los Angeles to maintain their rights and liberties as men of organized labor.

We recognize no right or liberty maliciously to cause a dynamite explosion as shocking and fatal as that which happened here the other day. The Los Angeles explosion has not been fastened upon any body by legal evidence, but the facts point unmistakably to the union's desire to wreak revenge upon those who are conducting lawfully their defense against the conspiracy in restraint of trade for which Mr. Gompers asks a new party and a half million dollars. If Mr. Gompers would take the money he asks for and go away somewhere far enough the resulting quiet and benefit to workingmen would warrant giving it to him. The idea of making over our political parties and subsidizing him to continue his activities in defiance of our laws and courts cannot be characterized in a polite manner.

CURRENCY AND THE COST OF LIVING

The Treasury asks authority to issue 3 per cent. bonds, without authorizing inflation of the currency, to the total cost of the Panama Canal. The statement reads:

> The issue of National banknotes has increased since 1900 from $300,000,000 to more than $700,000,000. Treasury officials hold that that, coupled with the great increase in the stock of gold from $600,000,000 in 1896 to $1,600,000,000 in 1910, has been one of the factors in the general increase in prices. The per capita wealth of the Nation, increasing 65 per cent. in the last fifteen years, is regarded as indicating a plethora of currency. To issue more bonds on the old basis, Secretary MacVeagh feels, would be to add artificially to the supply of currency and augment the general rise in prices.

We have more than once remarked that the volume of currency is unmanageable, rising when it should fall and falling when it should rise. An ounce of practice is worth a pound of theory, and it is worth while to place on record that last week the National banknote circulation increased $810,883 and the bank clearings decreased $226,000,000.

There is also a decrease in bank clearings when comparison is made with the previous year, as well as with the previous week. But the banknotes keep on rising in a manner which ought to rejoice the hearts of the Monetary Commission. Its arguments, deduced from the experience of the world, are strengthened by the current operation of the system which the commission seeks to revise into something like agreement with the civilized practice of commercial nations.

RATES AND PROFITS.

It is to be remarked how easily the question regarding the reasonableness of rates has slipped into a discussion of the reasonableness of profits. On the one point the Inter-State Commerce Commission has statutory authority, and on the other it neither has, nor should, nor can, have any voice. The reasonableness of profits is a matter concerning only the investor, and he has slipped out of the Commission's control already. The very act of limiting railway dividends without guaranteeing them has created a discrimination against railway investments which it is impossible to prevent any individual investor from appraising for himself.

On the long view it is easy to perceive that this may be a good thing for those disregarding the discrimination and taking the risk of regulation. In 1890 there were more inhabitants per mile of railway than there are now. In other words, railway construction has not kept pace with population, although in the years immediately succeeding 1890 construction outpaced population. The country cannot go without more and more railways, and cannot have them without paying for them, whatever any authority may decide. Any regulation which makes the provision of this facility of commerce more speculative will make it more costly to shippers, and more profitable to those who take the right risks. Wall Street cannot be beaten at this game, for it is Wall Street's own.

Nor will the railways suffer in the end, although some may disappear into receptive maws. Those who will be fooled are they who thought regulation of rates meant reduction of rates. Never again will rates fall at the rate they did before this restrictive regulation was devised in the interests of the people nominally, but really in the interests of those railways which survive and those investors who fail to take fright and profit by their opportunities.

YALE'S NEW GROUPS OF STUDIES.

Fathers of sons contemplating entrance at college this year, and the sons themselves, will examine carefully the changes in the course of studies announced in Yale's catalogue for the year 1911-12. They are radical changes. Callow freshmen and wise-foolish second-year boys who have hitherto begun a narrow specialization in courses unrelated to studies pursued in the preparatory schools, and juniors and seniors who, under the old elective system, divagated into the most various byways of "snap" courses, are taught the principle of a reasonable continuity in the groups of studies there set forth. The preparatory work finds its fruition in the required studies of the first two college years. Students who have entered with the more modern requirements, such as French, German, history, and science, cannot at first elect still other new courses very freely: Although requiring every student to study both Greek and Latin is not attempted, everything is done to encourage substantial work in the classics. During the first two years the men are required to concentrate their attention, with the advantages of superior teaching, upon the studies with which they are already familiar.

The broad fundamentals being assured, the work of the junior and senior years is grouped to encourage that specializing tendency which in the younger years would be premature. Every upper classman is required to devote [illegible] one-half of his time and attention to a single department of work and some correlated department. Suppose he elects as his specialty the study of English literature. Work requiring nine hours' recitation weekly is necessary in that department, with five or six hours in the literature of some other language closely affiliated with it—preferably Greek. If his specialty is chemistry, he devotes eight or nine hours to the advanced chemical courses and six to courses in physics or in biology. The other half of his work in junior and senior years may be discursive over fields suited to his inclination.

It is by the efforts of Profs. Dana, Day, Tinker, Fairchild, and Mardell, who make up the committee on revision of courses at Yale, that this simple solution of a vexed and complex problem has been devised. It is not the substitution exactly of the "group" for the "elective" system; it offers the advantages of an elastic system of electives within certain groups that assure unity to the entire college course.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Judge Lindsey Favors Children on the Stage.

The appearance of Judge Lindsey of the Juvenile Court of Denver on the stage at the Metropolitan Opera House to commend the purpose of the benefit for stage children, at which $15,000 was received to fight the State laws classing child actors with factory workers, puts the puritanical agitators in this State on notice that those who know most about the social environment of children do not sanction their efforts.

In Massachusetts, Illinois, and Louisiana the factory laws forbid the artistic training of children for stage performances. The ostensible reason for this prohibition is that children are made to "work" at night. Mr. Augustus Thomas and Mr. Francis Wilson, notably, have shown that the health of stage children is hedged with every safeguard; their salaries, compared with the wages of factory children, are princely, and the few minutes required in the evening for their speaking parts are most pleasurable to them and to their audiences. Mr. Wilson has presented lists of hundreds of actors—practically all the famous actors of history and of the present time—whose training for the stage commenced before the so-called awkward age in children, and who grew up in the ennobling atmosphere of the stage. Puritanic laws, like those which obtain in Massachusetts, are not needed. The law of this State places the children who appear in stage performances under the care of the Gerry Society. Their moral and physical welfare is thus doubly safeguarded by the conditions that inhere in their employment and by the guardianship of this society.

Dr. Hornaday's Good Work.

Dr. William T. Hornaday, who directs in the Bronx the finest zoological garden in the United States and one of the most complete in the world, radiates his influence in behalf of animal life to the remote corners of this continent. Dr. Hornaday and his friends in Miles City, Mon., have just scored a victory in the quick making of a game preserve of ninety-six square miles of magnificent "badlands" in "the Snow Creek and Hell Creek country" of Montana. This preserve will at once be stocked with antelope, male deer, and the fast-disappearing mountain sheep. The bill went through the Montana Legislature like a whirlwind, Dr. Hornaday's friends say, but Dr. Hornaday sowed the breezes for this beneficent whirlwind in an article which appeared in Scribner's Magazine for July, 1908.

Dr. Hornaday is interested in quelling the pelagic sealers of Behring Sea and in stopping the "kills" on shore for a period of years until the seal herd, now nearly exterminated, shall be completely restored to its original strength of millions. The Fur-Seal treaty between the United States and Great Britain, now before the Senate for ratification, provides precisely these things. It is the treaty, familiarly known as the Hay-Durand-Elliott treaty, that the Campfire Club—Dr. Hornaday is Chairman of its Committee on Game Protective Legislation and Preserves—two years ago requested Secretary Knox to revive and bring forward.

Fifth Avenue's Architecture.

What has become of that plan, recommended by the committee of eminent architects of which Arnold W. Brunner is the head, to extend by legislative act the powers of the Borough President in approving or disapproving the designs of new buildings, and alteration of existing buildings, along Fifth Avenue from Twenty-third Street to 110th Street, and to establish such rules as may be necessary with a view to promoting the harmony and beauty of this rich thoroughfare? To extend his powers requires legislative sanction. Has the Fifth Avenue Association drawn its bill, and is the measure before the Legislature?

Fifth Avenue is tawdry. The vacant lots in its upper stretches are unkempt, they are depositories of city refuse, they are fronted with paths, not sidewalks, that are disgracefully kept. Where the blocks are filled in, there is no true subordination of buildings, style, harmony of design, materials, color scheme, height, treatment of horizontal lines, and of exposed sides; no proper proportions of façades to the size of lots; inharmonious signs, awnings, projections, and marquees; and there are faults to be found with the street's illumination, width, and character of sidewalks, paving, and tree planting. The owners of Fifth Avenue's properties are wealthy enough. Hitherto they have manifested little public spirit in making this avenue what it should be, the finest street in the New World. A certain degree of sacrifice of individual interest in bringing this about would conduce to the best interest of all the owners and of the city. The first step is to obtain an enabling decree from the Legislature.

Was He a Barber's Victim?

It is not known, it was only conjectured, that Mr. John Henry Taylor died of blood poisoning from the scratch of a barber's razor. The doctors in charge of his case of oedema of the glottis would not vouch for such a diagnosis. The hundreds of thousands of men who are daily depilated—depeilated, too, in a measure—by barbers may be assured that the process is safe if the operator have a clean instrument and keep it sterilized.

Under the microscope the edge of the sharpest razor is seen to be rough and jagged, with interstices in which bacteriologists have discovered germs of the sort that ordinarily float in air and lodge upon hands and clothing. These are usually quite harmless. The more harmful sorts are not present in numbers sufficient to menace a healthy constitution possessed of the normal powers of resistance. But inasmuch as the barber's razor removes both hair and cuticle, and glances closely along the vascular tissue of the cutis, sometimes biting into it, the instrument may at times become contaminated with the germs of skin or blood diseases. Lather is itself a disinfectant, however, and every conscientious barber employs other antiseptic agents than soap and water. It is well to know one's barber.

A FAMILY OF NINE CHILDREN.

A History for the Believers in Large Families.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It has probably been remarked that Prof. Charles W. Eliot, Col. Roosevelt, and other prominent men, strong in advocacy of individual parentage of large families, are in comfortable financial circumstances and in possession of earning powers promising to last to the end of their lives. All of us are not so favorably conditioned. It is to be proved that an enlarged birth rate or immigration is favorable to the Republic until economic, social, and industrial science can find labor for the unemployed at wages sufficient to maintain them in comfort before they assume marital responsibilities. We need a guide toward equal opportunities for those to be classed in various grades of ability. Until then it remains to be established beyond doubt that life is a blessing either to the holder, his associates, or the world. There are so many defectives, mental, moral, and physical, that they may be considered as born only to die, without sign or works, even though some are welcomed to what is called "the best society." The writer cannot recall any large family so reared as to be pronounced upon in favorable terms. There seems always a skeleton of discord or some form of waywardness of one or more members to occasion painful concern to parents.

Of many city families only a small percentage can afford to maintain servants, and when the wife is the mother of six to eight, as proposed by Roosevelt, Eliot & Co., her duties and burdens are so onerous as to preclude the proper physical and character care of her offspring, while the financiering of the household must often be reduced to an exacting economical science. If her duty is conscientiously performed, she is enslaved beyond relaxation until the maturity of the children, and then begins concern and anxiety for their futures.

Permit presentation of a large family having counterparts or in slight variation. The writer was the ninth and youngest child. Eight reached adult years without illness, except those of juvenile expectancy. The father, a working tailor, acquired, in time, a small business of his own, which decayed incidental with ill-health, which began and continued for three years, culminating in death during the civil war. During this period the oldest son, of 22 years, died, he being the main support of the family. The following year another son, of 21 years, was drafted into military service, and borrowed money to procure a substitute. All of the six brothers as they reached the age of 12 were withdrawn from school and hurled into business for pittances obtainable.

The mother, a woman of tremendous and well-directed energy, nursing all her babes, making all the children's clothing, unable to afford household help, for thirty years of her married life was the veriest slave, without an interest beyond home and family, a stranger to all relaxation. Throughout the civil war and its attendant high prices, as those for several years thereafter, the barest necessities were only procurable, and genteel poverty, free from squalid surroundings, a poverty too proud to owe or borrow, and unremitting exertion in labor and prudence conquered circumstances.

There are many similar experiences current in this city to-day, but may not have such favorable conclusions unless all the members involved address themselves with determination toward improvement. The advocate of large families, irrespective of character of parents and financial means, seems heedless of the fact that the unexpected is always imminent.

The House of a Royal Governor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, "Perth," speaks for preservation of the residence of the last of the Royal Governors at Perth Amboy, and asks, Where, in the thirteen original colonies, is there in existence another Colonial Governor's residence? The Wentworth Mansion in Portsmouth, N. H., still a possession, I believe, in the family descended from a Royal Governor, offers a fine example of architecture of a pure type, much original decoration and furnishings, and a fine store of family traditions and historical associations, the narrative of which could be had by visitors up to the recent past, with quaint flavors of ancient forms of courtesy, from the presiding hostess of its faded glories.

For Simple, Strong Words.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It appears that newspaper writers, business correspondents, and many others, in increasing numbers, eschew the verb "to buy" in favor of the lumbering "purchase." We shall soon hear of purchasing a pint of peanuts or a pair of shoestrings. Has not this poor foppery of speech already killed enough good, strong words only because they were short and simple?

THE ROOT AMENDMENT

Would Increase Likelihood of Deadlocks, Says J. H. Dougherty.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While approving Senator Root's opposition to the Borah resolution for popular election of Senators, I cannot approve his proposed amendment to the act of Congress of July 26, 1866, regulating the time and manner of holding elections for Senators, and while not imputing to the Senator unfamiliarity with the events that led to the passage of that law, it seems to me that he could not have had them in mind when he presented his bill. The bill is pregnant with evil. The act of 1866, in which Congress for the first time in its history undertook to control the election of Senators, has stood unchanged for almost forty-five years, and although it has not the sanctity of the organic law, should not lightly be altered. Certainly it should not be changed if the amendment would be likely to give rise to some of the evils which the statute was intended to prevent.

The act of Congress prescribes that the person having a majority of all the votes of the legislative joint assembly, a majority of all the members elected to both houses being present and voting, shall be declared duly elected. Senator Root's amendment proposes that in case the election of a Senator shall not have been had before March 1 in any year immediately preceding the expiration of a Senatorial term, a plurality shall be adequate to elect. After March 1 he would substitute the word "plurality" in lieu of the word "majority."

The Root amendment would enable a minority party after a given date to elect its own candidate, and—what is worse—a mere faction of a party might choose a Senator if it were law. While it was the purpose of Congress in 1866 to provide a uniform method for the election of Senators, and to put an end to the many objectionable devices that had often been employed by State Legislatures almost equally divided between political parties, the immediate occasion for the enactment was the election of John P. Stockton to the Senate by the Legislature of New Jersey under a joint resolution that could not have passed the two houses separately, declaring that any candidate receiving a plurality of the votes of the members present at the joint session should be declared elected. The protest from New Jersey to the Senate of the United States, in condemning the resolution under which Stockton was chosen, forcibly argued that it would permit a person to become Senator who had two votes, if every other legislator voted for a different candidate. Can it be, said the protest, that the recipient of two votes, if that should be a plurality, would become Senator? The Senate unseated Stockton on the ground that under the Constitution of the United States, in the absence of a Federal law, it was the business of the Legislature and not the joint convention to prescribe how a Senator should be chosen.

Senator Root's bill, if enacted into law, would engraft such a vicious method of election upon the Federal statute; it would be a long step backward and ought to be defeated. It would increase the likelihood of deadlocks, it would not prevent them. Intrigue would succeed intrigue to postpone election until after March 1. Of course, the text of the bill may not have been reported accurately, but I assume it is, for there is an allusion to the plan in the Senator's speech against the Borah resolution, and it is one of the few flaws in an otherwise splendid and statesmanlike address.

MISS KELLEY AND THE COURTS

A Reply Dwells Upon Woman's Inhumanity to Woman.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Miss Florence Kelley writes in to-day's Times: "It is certainly of great importance to women employes in manufacture in this State that they should have a voice in the election of Judges, whose decisions thus affect their liberty and pursuit of happiness."

What I cannot understand in the attitude of suffragists—earnest reformers like Miss Kelley, and others of her standard—is their faith that women will vote to better the conditions of women employes. Women have had the vote in domestic matters so long—they have held undisputed sway in their own homes, and mere man has not presumed to dictate to them—yet what conditions do we find? Have the women employers of women given them fair hours? Have they given them fixed hours? Have they given them a normal opportunity to meet members of the other sex?

What is there in the magic of the vote that is going to change the character of women? Why will the woman who is unreasonable, prejudiced, and unfair to the women who are within her gates suddenly, miraculously, become a guardian angel to those women who are working in the factories? No one supposes that only working women are going to have the vote. Ask the heads of the large stores who it is that prevent them from permitting their saleswomen to remain seated. They will tell you the women customers do not like to be served by seated saleswomen. The unselfish men are doing all they can to better conditions. They are hampered at the polls by selfish men. Granted. But how splendidly these unselfish men are helped and encouraged by the unselfish women who can speak, write, and act with them, crystallizing public opinion until all the selfish men and women are won over.

We find that even the particular law Miss Kelley refers to was passed in Oregon and Illinois, where women do not vote, and even in New York, where women do not vote, it was passed as a law only to be turned down by Judge Grey. Judge Grey merely is a logician—as I see it—he does not see how women can ask both for equality and privilege. If the principle of protection to women is carried out with remorseless logic, there will be no ten-hour nor eight-hour day law passed, there will be no work day at all of the kind that hampers motherhood, destroys home-keeping, and brings into the world both unhealthy children and mothers ignorant of the laws of caring for them. To bring logic into this situation is to clip the dog's tail off close to the ears!

THE GRAVE OF BOOTH.

Recalls the Incidents Described in The Sunday Times.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The interesting article in to-day's (Sunday, Feb. 26) Times in regard to the grave of J. Wilkes Booth recalls to my memory some of the scenes of those days.

At the time of the assassination of President Lincoln the monitor Mahopac, on which I was serving, lay alongside the dock at the navy yard in Washington, and was used as a landing place by several other vessels lying out in the stream, among them being the monitor Montauk.

On the night of April 27, 1865, Booth's body was brought on the deck of the Mahopac wrapped in a blanket, and it soon become known to all hands, who were ordered to move our vessel out from the dock. While preparations were being made to do this the order was countermanded, and Booth's body was taken in one of our boats to the Montauk, which lay a few hundred feet out, and there placed on a carpenter's bench standing on the deck astern, and not, as the writer says, "in the carpenter's bunk of the turret."

The next day the surgeon from our vessel went over to the Montauk and held an autopsy on Booth's body.

On their return from the autopsy each surgeon carried a small parcel, and having occasion to enter the cabin shortly after I saw our surgeons exhibiting to some of our officers a portion of a human body, which was taken when the autopsy was held. As each surgeon had also taken a portion I was quite convinced that the remaining portion was not very large.

After the autopsy I saw what was left of Booth's body placed in one of the boats of the Montauk and with two officers and two sailors rowed down toward the Potomac. What was done with his body was told me the next day, substantially as told in to-day's Times, by one of the sailors who assisted in its burial.

On the Mahopac at the time was a sailor who had previous to his enlistment in the navy been an actor, had often played with Booth, and knew him intimately. He examined Booth's features carefully and said he was sure it was Booth, but to make doubly sure he told our surgeon that Booth had a peculiar scar or mark on his body, which if found at the autopsy would prove it without a doubt to be the body of J. Wilkes Booth. On examination the mark was found as described.

FRICK'S VELASQUEZ A WONDERFUL WORK

PAINTED IN FRAGA IN 1644

Masterpiece, Executed in a Rickety Lodging in Three Days, Shows King in His Military Costume.

Henry C. Frick has acquired in his new Velasquez an indisputably wonderful example of the art of that great master of portraiture, and one of the most important pictures in existence. It is a portrait of Philip IV., and is known as the "Parma Velasquez" because it came from the ducal palace at Parma, whither it had been taken, if tradition is correct, from the royal palace at Madrid when Ferdinand VI. took the throne of Spain after the death of Philip V. In 1859 it left the ducal palace, the States being that year incorporated with the Kingdom of Italy, and was taken to Wartegg Castle, in Switzerland, by the mother of the Duke Robert, who was the last of the reigning Dukes of Parma. It was taken by him to Schwartzau Castle, in Austria, and was inherited (in 1907) by Prince Elias of Bourbon, who sold it to Messrs. Agnew & Sons of London. From the Agnews it passed to the firm of Scott & Fowles of this city, and was bought by Mr. Frick from Messrs. Knoedler of this city, who owned a share in it with Scott & Fowles.

All this documentation well befits a canvas of such royal quality as the Parma Velasquez, even judging from the testimony of photographs. It was painted by Velasquez at Fraga in 1644, and shows the King in his military costume, three-quarter length, his left hand holding a large black hat with feathers of crimson, wearing a leather jerkin upon which appears the insignia of the Golden Fleece, a jacket with white silk sleeves and a lace collar. The time was propitious for a portrait that should display the King's most manly characteristics. He had dismissed his Minister, the Count Duke of Olivares, the year before, and had taken the affairs of the kingdom into his own hands, seeking to restore it to the condition from which it had been dragged by twenty-two years of ruinous policy carried on by Olivares. The King took command of his army at Fraga, and it was while he was tasting the joy of the popular favor his presence there created that he thought of having his portrait painted in the uniform of a soldier and sent to his Queen, who had urged him to get rid of his Minister and to take the command.

The accounts kept by the Treasurer of the palace and preserved in the royal archives show how the work on the picture progressed. A stand had to be constructed, and two windows had to be arranged in "the place for his Majesty whilst his portrait was being taken"; moreover, a window must be put in the lodging of Diego Velasquez at Fraga, so that he might work and paint, and the lodging was without a door and in bad condition and must be repaired, and the little room in which the portrait was executed was in bad condition, without floors and falling to pieces, "since the whole lodging was the lower part of a chimney; and the whole work for propping it, wood frames, cement, and the opening of a window, cost 24 reales." Thus was a glorious work of art brought into being, and "it took three days at different times to make the portrait, every day a load of reed for the floor." Finally, a wooden box was made in order to put in it "the portrait which his Majesty (God save him!) had had made for our Lady the Queen," and it was sent forth, enveloped in two wrappers, to Madrid, where the Queen was ruling in her husband's place. She did not enjoy it long, as she died in October of that year before the King's return.

In the Dulwich Gallery, England, is a copy of the portrait which by many eminent critics has been taken for the original. Señor Beruete, from whose account of the portrait we have freely quoted, was the first to see in the Parma picture the true original, and he arrived at his conclusion by his recognition of the superior spirit and power of the execution, sustaining his impression gained from this by items of detail that permit no doubt of the relation of the two pictures. Probably the Dulwich version is a very early copy, as the portrait was promptly accepted as a great success and copies almost immediately began to be made of it. One detail pointing to this conclusion is the fact that in the Parma picture Señor Beruete found the canvas so doubled outside the wooden frame as to conceal a portion of one of the fingers. In the Dulwich picture this finger is shown complete and it is presumably true that when the copy was made the original had not been as yet doubled over and nailed to the stretcher.

We already have published in part Claude Phillips's eulogy of this masterpiece, and it should be added that before the discovery of the Parma original he had described the Dulwich version as a fine work of Mazo the son-in-law of Velasquez, thus arriving independently at Señor Beruete's opinion.

It is of comparatively small consequence in comparison with the glory of having a superb Velasquez in our country that the price of the picture is reported to be the highest as yet paid for any masterpiece, but it proves that our collectors are making the necessary sacrifices to fill America with such treasures as have never before been brought together.

HOE ENAMELS AND ARMS SOLD

A Limoges Ewer Brings $500 and a Model of Bronze Horse with Rider $375.

The twelfth afternoon of the Hoe sale at the American Art Galleries yesterday brought $10,882 for Limoges and Champlevé enamels and arms and armor.

A Limoges enamel ewer brought the highest price of the sale yesterday. It was 10½ inches high by 3¾ inches in diameter, nude figures in the design and decorations in gold on a black ground, a sixteenth century piece, which went to J. Goldschmidt for $500. Frank Partridge paid $420 for a Limoges enamel oval medallion, the Queen of Sheba visiting Solomon, in translucent enamels, green, red, and blue predominating. It was signed S. C., (Susanne Courtois.) A quadrilateral Champlevé enamel reliquary, with the scene of the murder of Thomas à Becket on the front, went to a buyer giving the name of White for $400. Another reliquary of the same period and general design, with the decoration in full-length figures of saints and angels, went to Benton for $290, and a third, having a representation of the Christ as Salvator Mundi between two saints, went to the same buyer for $210.

In the collection of arms and armor, Edward H. Litchfield of Brooklyn paid $300 for a sixteenth-century crossbow—iron, ivory, and wood. An interesting piece, a small model of a bronze horse with rider and a full set of Maximilian armor, engraved with arabesques and scrolls and applique coats of arms, went to O. G. Jennings for $375. A full set of fluted armor of the Maximilian style went to Benton for $220, and another set of armor, sixteenth century, went to the same buyer for $200. Thomas Barlow paid $200 for a Japanese eighteenth-century repeating flintlock gun of a very rare type, with three revolving barrels, carved and inlaid with various metals, and Bonaventure $210 for a pair of German sixteenth-century wheel-lock pistols, with ivory inlays in the stock.

European bronzes, old clocks, armor, and other things will be sold this afternoon. There will be only two more days of the sale, which concludes Friday afternoon.

Would Accept Neither the Senatorship Nor Any Public Office, He Writes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your kindness this morning in suggesting my name as one of those suitable for consideration for United States Senator permits me to say (upon the violent assumption that some one else might be of your agreeable disposition) that under no conceivable condition would I accept an election to this or to any other public office.

Thank you for your courtesy.

THRONG AT NUPTIALS OF MISS DORIS DICK

BEAUTIFUL FLORAL DISPLAY

Bride Wears a String of Solitaire Diamonds, the Bridegroom's Gift—Wedding Attendants and Costumes.

The wedding of Miss Doris A. Dick, the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Dick, and Horace Havemeyer, son of Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer and the late Mr. Havemeyer, took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Incarnation, Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street.

The church was beautifully decorated, the chancel being made over into a bower of Spring flowers. Two large trees covered with pink almond blossoms formed a sort of gateway to the chancel, while the nave was bordered with white stock, the old-fashioned English flower, in straw baskets, which hung from every third pew.

A large cross of ascension lilies formed the background of the altar, and the chancel rails were banked with white tulips, genesta, white lilacs, white daisies, with towering palms and forsythia shrubs, with here and there groups of pink azaleas and peach blossoms.

The musical programme, which was rendered by the vested male choir and organ, began at 3:30. At this time the church was well filled. There was also a good-sized crowd outside the church. By 4 o'clock the edifice was filled to overflowing, and there were many standing in the side aisles.

The ushers who seated the guests were J. Watson Webb, Harry T. Peters, Joseph W. Burden, William K. Dick, a brother of the bride; Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen, Charles Jackson, and Elliot Cross.

Boy Choir Precedes Bridal Cortege.

A few minutes past the appointed hour the boy choir marched down the north aisle of the church, and then preceded the bridal cortège up the nave. The ushers came first, and then Mrs. J. Watson Webb, who acted as matron of honor. The bridesmaids followed the matron of honor, and then walked the bride's sister, Miss Julia A. Dick, who was maid of honor. Miss Dick followed with her father.

The bride wore a long gown of soft ivory satin, the bodice and sleeves being of rose point lace. Trails of orange blossoms ran from the bodice to the end of the train. Her veil of point lace was held by orange blossoms, and she wore around her neck a string of solitaire diamonds, the bridegroom's gift. Her bouquet was lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Webb, who is a sister of the bridegroom, wore embroidered rose colored chiffon over rose red satin. It had a high stock and yoke of white lace. She carried yellow and brown orchids, and her large light brown hat was faced with black velvet and trimmed with rose red satin ribbons and roses of different colors.

The maid of honor, Miss Julia Dick, a débutante of this season, was in a short-skirted pink chiffon frock, embroidered in rose color and topped by a small brown straw hat, faced with velvet and trimmed with small roses of different colors, and rose red ribbons. She carried a basket of flowers.

The bridesmaids, who were the Misses Lisa Stillman, Elizabeth Bacon, Ruth Adams, Alice Dickson, Harriet Ferry, and Eleanor Hastings, all wore trailing rose red satin gowns with embroidered red chiffon. Their hats were like those of the matron of honor, and they all carried clusters of brown and yellow orchids and farleyance ferns.

Mrs. Dick, the mother of the bride, wore gray satin with an overdress of black net beaded in jet over mustard colored chiffon, topped by a gray hat with shaded gray plumes.

Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer, the mother of the bridegroom, was in a black satin costume, opening over white satin, and having Directoire revers of white satin braided in white, and a white waistcoat effect. Her white hat was faced with black velvet and trimmed with a stiff aigrette effect of white and black.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Philip Cook, vicar of the Incarnation Chapel, and a lifelong friend of the bride's.

The Reception.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, 20 East Fifty-third Street. The bridal couple received the congratulations of their friends in the Louis Seize room on the second floor, under a bower of Spring blossoms.

The reception hall, and the rooms opening off from the hall, were decorated with trailing Southern smilax, broken by sprays of peach blossoms. Van Baar's orchestra played in the balcony in the hall. A buffet supper was served in the dining room.

There was a large representation of the Havemeyer family and the Dick and Mollenhauer connections at the wedding. Seated with Mrs. Dick and her young son, Adolph, at the church were William Dick, the bride's grandfather, and Mrs. John Mollenhauer of Brooklyn. In the next pew were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mollenhauer, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Mollenhauer, and Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Mollenhauer.

Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer and Mrs. P. H. B. Frelinghuysen were in another pew, and William Havemeyer and family in another pew. Others seen at the church included Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Havemeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Weekes, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Adams, Dr. and Mrs. Gorham Bacon, Joseph B. Dickson and family, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Stillman, Mrs. Chauncey Marshall, and Miss Marshall, Mrs. Spencer A. Jennings, the Misses Jennings, Miss Althea Gibb, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Harriman, Miss Miriam Harriman, Harry Dodge, and Miss Dodge, William P. Smith and family, Frederick B. Richardson, and Mr. and Mrs. James Warren Lane and family.

There were also the Misses Pyle, Miss Rosalie Elliman, W. Kingsland Macy, Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Cook, Dr. and Mrs. Hermann Biggs, Miss Katherine Biggs, Mr. and Mrs. Ira A. Place, Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Motley, the Misses Motley, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hunter Brown, Miss Ursula Brown, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Post, Miss Post, Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Meyer, Mrs. Rufus Sibley, Miss Sibley, Miss Marie E. Page, the Misses Burton, Mr. and Mrs. George Meyer, and Mr. and Mrs. Tilney.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. George Watson, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Peters, Schuyler Parsons, Jr., H. K. Knapp, Mrs. Munn, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch, Gen. and Mrs. Frederick D. Grant, Bishop Greer, Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Parsons, and Mrs. Cornelius H. Tangeman.

THE ORATORIO SOCIETY

Sings Cesar Franck's "The Beatitudes" and a Psalm of Saint-Saëns.

The Oratorio Society ascended musical heights last evening and gave a performance—the second in this city and the first in English—of César Franck's oratorio, "Les Beatitudes." This work, which it took Franck the ten years following 1870 to compose, was not sung even in Paris until one year after his death, which occurred in 1890.

As the title suggests, the work is founded on Christ's Sermon on the Mount. The arrangement of the text was made by Mme. Colomb, the wife of a professor at the Lycée at Versailles. As Vincent d'Indy says in his book on Cesar Franck, each section of the poem resembles a triptych, in which two wings face and complete each other by contrast, while the central panel is occupied by the figure of Christ.

The first performance of the work in New York was given in German by the Liederkranz in Carnegie Hall on March 25, 1900, and there has not been a complete performance here since then, and a performance in French is still to follow.

There are reasons for reticence in regard to this work on the part of our choirs. Its difficulties are very great and the music is of that lofty character which does not make so immediate appeal as that of some oratorios which are easier to learn.

Last night's performance of the work was not a complete one. Several of the sections were omitted, at least two of which are highly praised in Vincent d'Indy's book.

The choirs of the Oratorio Society gave a generally good performance of the work last night, one notable for the body of tone, if not always for good intonation. The choirs and the Symphony Society of New York, which played the orchestral portion of the work, were under the direction of Frank Damrosch, who conducted as if he loved what he was doing, and this spirit manifested itself in the performance.

Mr. Emilio de Gogorza sang the music allotted to the voice of Christ with good effect. The other soloists were Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Mrs. Cara Sapin, mezzo-soprano; H. Evan Williams, tenor; William Wheeler, tenor, and Reinold Werrenrath, baritone. Mr. Williams should be especially praised for his singing in the fourth Beatitude.

The first American performance of Saint-Saëns's Setting of the 150th Psalm followed "Les Beatitudes." This work is a souvenir of the venerable composer's visit to America in 1906. It is dedicated to Whitney Warren of New York.

IRISH FUN AT THE COMEDY.

Wm. Collier Interpolates Speeches for "Mulligan Guards" of Lambs Club.

William Collier and his fellow-Irishmen of the Lambs Club had a Hibernian time at the Comedy Theatre yesterday afternoon, when "The Mulligan Guards" attended a performance of "I'll Be Hanged if I Do." The theatre was decorated with Irish and American flags, the orchestra played Irish airs, and the actors, as far as possible, wore green neckties. Even the programmes were tinged with green.

Considerable liberty was taken with the text of the play. All reasonable and many unreasonable allusions were made to the Irish and to the Lambs, and at the end of the third act, after Mr. Collier had completely demoralized the technique of his entire company by interpolating speeches, the star was obliged to make a speech. He said that he appreciated the presence of the Mulligan Guards, but he could not understand how George V. Hobart happened to be among them.

DR. DANIEL M. BURGESS DEAD.

Health Inspector at Havana for 32 Years and Authority on Yellow Fever.

Dr. Daniel Maynard Burgess, for thirty-two years Health Inspector for the United States Government at Havana, and widely known as an authority on yellow fever, died yesterday at his apartments at the San Remo Hotel, in Central Park West, of pneumonia.

Dr. Burgess was born Dec. 21, 1828, at Richfield, N. Y. He was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of this city in the early 'sixties and shortly afterward, at great personal risk, accepted an appointment to the Bellevue Hospital staff during a cholera epidemic. After leaving the hospital he traveled extensively, continuing his studies in the hospitals and institutions abroad. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war Dr. Burgess returned to this country.

Dr. Burgess, during his long service for the Government, won the intimate friendship of several Presidents of the United States and others prominent in the Government of the country. He was frequently called into consultation by Surgeon General George M. Sternberg, now retired, of Washington when there was danger of yellow fever epidemics in this country.

SOON TO HAVE A CHANCELLOR

New York University Tired of Being Headless, Says the Treasurer.

William M. Kingsley, Treasurer of the New York University Council, in a speech made at the annual dinner of the Alumni Association at the Waldorf last night, said a new Chancellor would be chosen shortly.

"We are working night and day," said Mr. Kingsley, "to put a Chancellor in place of a question mark in the President's chair. We find it hard, however, to get a man we all want and who wants us. We are working it out by process of elimination, and I can assure you that we have got down to a few men and hope to make the choice soon."

Other speakers of the evening were Alexander S. Lyman, general counsel for the New York Central Railroad; O. H. Cheney, State Superintendent of Banks, and Cyrus C. Miller, President of the Bronx.

A letter of regret from Henry Van Schaick, '43, of 23 West Thirty-seventh Street, was read. Mr. Van Schaick is one of the two living members of his class, which once numbered thirty-three, and is one of the oldest living graduates of the university.

SMITH WINS HARD BOUT AT FAIRMONT

Mickey McDonough, Brooklyn Heavyweight, Badly Punished, but Lasts Ten Rounds.

Mickey McDonough, a Brooklyn heavyweight, with no science but with all kinds of strength and a Joe Grim ability to take punishment, took a hard beating at the Fairmont A. C. last night in his ten-round bout with Jim Smith, the Bronx middleweight. In the early rounds McDonough was able to deliver some terrific wallops, and twice he put the Bronx boy to the canvas, but he had to take far more punishment in the closing chapters.

Smith handed out enough punishment to put an ordinary fighter down several times, but the Brooklyn fighter took it all without once going to the canvas. He spent most of the closing rounds against the ropes trying in vain to escape the shower of blows, and at the final bell his face was covered with cuts and bruises.

The bout was a sort of elimination trial to secure an opponent for Hugo Kelly, the Chicago middleweight, at the club next Tuesday night, and at the finish it was rumored that Smith would oppose Kelly.

Smith began to force matters as soon as the first bell had sounded. McDonough had the advantage of at least twenty pounds over his opponent, but seemed to carry much surplus weight. Smith was in much better condition and forced McDonough around the ring, landing often with a left jab. McDonough was content to clinch after being rushed to the ropes. In the last minute of the round McDonough floored Smith with a right hook after staggering him with a left swing. Just before the bell McDonough again staggered Smith. The round was even.

In the second round there was plenty of action, with Smith doing more of the aggressive work. He had McDonough backing up against the ropes and clinching to avoid punishment. McDonough was strong and landed some hard wallops, but Smith was doing all the forcing and was entitled to the round. The third round was a repetition of the second.

In the fourth round it was another session of Smith's aggressiveness against McDonough's strength, and the tide was continually turning. At one time Smith would have McDonough apparently helpless on the ropes, clinching to avoid punishment, and the next minute would show McDonough handing out a stiff left with force enough to make Smith back up.

McDonough's great strength helped him considerably in this round, which belonged to Smith.

The fifth round showed McDonough to better advantage, but the best he could get was an even break. At one time, while apparently helpless against the ropes, McDonough shot out a hard left and put Smith down on one knee. But he was up in an instant, and continued to force the fighting. McDonough was covered with blood from the stiff punishment he was receiving.

The sixth round belonged to Smith all the way. He went after McDonough as soon as the bell rang and had the latter against the ropes the greater part of the time, driving hard punches to both head and body. McDonough still showed wonderful strength, and took all kinds of punishment without going down. His face was covered with blood.

It was the same story in the seventh round. Smith handed out enough punishment to knock out an ordinary man, and it seemed on three or four occasions that one more punch would turn the trick, but McDonough took all the punishment, and hopped lightly to his corner at the bell.

In the eighth round McDonough landed only one hard blow, for which he took wallops by the dozen. Smith rushed him to the ropes and pounded away, but was unable to score anything approaching a knock-down. Judicious clinching and McDonough's strength prevented a knockout.

In the ninth round McDonough handed out some hard lefts as Smith rushed in, and once had the latter against the ropes, but he had to take all kinds of punishment, and Smith had the round by a big margin.

Smith tried hard for a knockout in the last round, but McDonough was too strong.

The semi-final number brought together Smoke Jones and Young Cutch for ten rounds, but the bout was stopped by Referee Billy Joh in the ninth round, when Cutch was in a bad way.

Jones gained a big lead in the opening round, and Cutch came back strong enough in the second round to even matters. From that time until the bout was stopped Jones had the advantage almost all the time, and would undoubtedly have put his man away if the bout had gone further. Cutch uncorked a few short rallies which made the crowd enthuse, but did not follow up his advantages, and Jones, after taking a few hard wallops, always came back strong and handed out more punishment. Cutch was badly beaten, his face being much cut up and bruised.

Walter McGir, the former Pastime A. C. amateur, outpointed Bobby Reynolds in the opening preliminary, which went four rounds. The second preliminary, with Eddie Collins and Joe Seba as principals, was stopped by Referee Joh in the second round, as Seba was not strong enough for his opponent. In the third preliminary Young Lundy shaded Young Frank in four rounds.

Pal Moore to Box Maloney.

Knockout Malaria put another crimp in the aspirations of Tommy Murphy yesterday, and as a result the Pride of Harlem will not be able to keep his engagement with Tommy Maloney before the Olympic A. C. to-night. A few weeks ago Murphy fell victim to malaria while training for his bout with Knockout Brown and he had to call it off, Bert Keyes being substituted to go against Danny Morgan's boy. Yesterday Tommy had to again call off his training and announce that he could not fight Maloney. The management of the Olympic A. C. immediately got into communication with Jimmy De Forest, Manager of Pal Moore, and the Philadelphia boy will take Murphy's place in to-night's bout with Maloney. Moore has been keeping shape since his recent bout with Bert Keyes, and Jimmy De Forest predicts that Pal will score a knockout. According to Murphy's physician it will be at least two months before the Flatbush boy will be able to enter the ring.

Hugo Kelly Claims Ketchel's Title.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Hugo Kelly, a local pugilist, through his manager, has claimed the middleweight championship of the world. Kelly broke his hand in New York some time ago, when he was getting a good start toward the title, and has been in no position to force his claim. Now that he is ready to fight again, his manager said Kelly would be matched with any boxer disputing his superiority. Since the death of Stanley Ketchel, middleweight champion, four months ago, at least three men have claimed the championship.

Quill Outpoints Paddy Lavin.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 28.—Tommy Quill of Brockton defeated Paddy Lavin of Buffalo in a twelve-round bout at the Armory Athletic Association to-night on points. A draw decision would not have been out of place, but to give Quill the victory was something altogether unlooked for. Lavin simply made a punching bag out of Quill for the first part of the contest, and his cleverness and fine judgment of distance made it easy for him to score repeatedly without return on the part of Quill. At side stepping and ducking blows Lavin was a wonder.

Mike Sullivan to Fight in England.

BOSTON, Feb. 28.—Mike (Twin) Sullivan, the Cambridge welterweight, to-night cabled to Floyd McFarland in England his acceptance of offers for two bouts during April. Sullivan will meet Johnny Summers in London, and also the winner of the Harry Lewis-Willie Lewis battle of April 15 in Paris. He will receive $3,500 for the two bouts.

Ahearn Outpoints Griffin.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 28.—In a fast ten-round bout to-night Young Ahern of New York outpointed Charlie Griffin of Australia. He had a lead in all but one round. In the final round, after a lively mix-up, Ahearn had his opponent in a bad way.

Henderson Easy for Gotch.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Frank Gotch, world's champion wrestler, toyed with "Mort" Henderson here to-night, gaining two straight falls in 15 and 4 minutes respectively.

Zbyszko Wins from Paul Schmidt.

MERIDEN, Conn., Feb. 28.—Zybszko, the Pole, won in straight falls here to-night from Paul Schmidt, the German, getting the first in 17 and the second in 6 minutes.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS.

The Metropolitan A. C. of the Bronx offers as its star bout at Thursday evening's entertainment Johnny Harvey and Sailor Stevens. The former lives in Harlem and Stevens is well known in the Bronx. The semi-final of six rounds will bring together Billy Williams and Young Leachie. Three four-round bouts will serve as preliminaries.

Thirty-two rounds of boxing have been arranged for the next entertainment of the New Polo A. A., to be held on Friday evening, March 3. The main bout of ten rounds will bring together two heavyweights, Fighting Kennedy and George Sanders. The semi-final of ten rounds will be between Frankie Flemming, the bantam champion of Canada, and Eddie Sherman. Three four-round bouts will also be put on.

The Hamilton A. C. will hold a stag Thursday night at their clubrooms, 82 Cherry Street. Among the boxers will be Willie Adams vs. Kid Rose, Jimmie Curran vs. Young Pierce, Ralph Rose vs. Mike Cashman, Bull Williams vs. Young Ghetto, Mike Clifford vs. Mike McGlynn, and Tim Buckley vs. Red Riley.

Young Stoney, the promising local featherweight, who has fought, among others, Frankie Burns, Young Wagner, Johnny Moran, Harry Winters, and George Dennis, a Chicago boy who gave Coulon a tough battle recently, will box Joe Allen, a Harlem favorite, ten rounds in one of two star events at the Wendover Athletic Club in the Claremont Casino, Park and Wendover Avenues, in the Bronx, to-night. In the other main bout Battling Reddy and Philly Carmine, 105-pounders, will box. There will be four preliminaries and a battle royal between five heavyweight negroes.

Declaring that he will beat Johnny Daly and then force Johnny Coulon into a match for the bantam title, Young Wagner arrived in town yesterday morning from his training quarters at Allenhurst, N. J., in condition for his ten-round tilt with Daly, at the Whirlwind Athletic Club in the Clermont Rink, Brooklyn, to-morrow night.

Harry Stone, the Ghetto lightweight, will clash with the newsboy champion, Jack Goodney, in the main event of ten rounds before the Long Acre A. C., to-morrow night. Goodney has been developing fast, and recently defeated Harry Greenhouse in seven rounds before this club. Last Tuesday night he boxed a draw with Dave Deshler at the Knickerbocker A. C. in Albany. In the semi-final Andy Cortes, the former 125-pound amateur champion, will take on Frankie Yale. Three four-round bouts complete the programme.

Joe Hirst, who holds a decision over Young Sammy Smith, will be seen in action against Jack Smith of Brooklyn to-morrow night at the bouts of the Brooklyn Beach Athletic Club. Hirst is built along good lines, and is said to be as clever as Smith. He is said to have a good wallop with either hand, and is anxious to make good in this locality. In his opponent to-morrow night Hirst will find a tough customer, who has held his own with such men as Harry Stone, Paddy Lavin, Frankie Madden, Paddy Sullivan, and men of that calibre.

New Men in Cornell 'Varsity Crew.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Coach Courtney has reorganized the Cornell 'Varsity crew as the result of the various happenings of the last two weeks, by which three veteran oarsmen will not row this year. In place of Simson, Names, and Seagrave he has placed Lum, Small, and Ferguson in the 'Varsity eight, though the positions have been shifted about. Ferguson rowed in the 'Varsity four-oared crew last year, Lum in the freshman, while Small is a new candidate. The other five men are veterans. The first two crews are now rowing as follows:

'Varsity—Lum, bow; Day, 2; Wakely, 3; Aitchinson, 4; Sutton, 5; Small, 6; Ferguson, 7; Bowen, stroke; Kimball, coxswain.

Second—Carpenter, bow; Niccols, 2; Pfeiffer, 3; Gavett, 4; Stimson, 5; Kruse, 6; Lafferty, 7; Distler, stroke; Merz, coxswain.

TRACK AND OTHER SPORTS.

George W. Moore, the holder of the high run record at three-cushion billiards, has challenged John W. Daly, the champion, who has accepted, and the match will be played in McGraw's the last week in March. Moore will put in his practice work against the best players available, and will play afternoon and evening games.

The Riverview Military Academy basket ball team will play to-day the five from Pawling on the latter's court. Each has a pretty good record, and a fast game is promised.

The following were elected officers of the Dyker Meadow Golf Club for the ensuing year: Daniel Chauncey, President; Horace C. Du Val, Vice President; Frederick J. Phillips, Secretary; John B. Holland, Treasurer; Thomas Hovenden, Captain. The Board of Governors is made up as follows: Edwin E. Belcher, Charles A. Boody, Daniel Chauncey, Horace C. Du Val, Thomas Hovenden, Edward F. Hunt, David B. Hutton, John B. Holland, John Lee, Frederick J. Phillips, Samuel K. Probasco, William H. Thurston, Frederick H. Webster, and Howard F. Whitney.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

A Comma Cannot Throw Imported Raincoats Into Cotton Schedule.

In denying contentions raised by R. H. Macy & Co., the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday construed the provision in the Aldrich-Payne Tariff act dealing with wearing apparel composed in part of wool to be more specific than Paragraph 324 for articles of wearing apparel composed in chief value of cotton and not otherwise specially provided for.

When the issue was before the board for hearing, the United States Examiner appeared as a witness. His testimony was to the effect that two of the items probably contained more cotton than wool, and were in chief value of cotton. The other items would have to be analyzed to show the component material of chief value, but inasmuch as they contained a percentage of wool, the Examiner said he advised the Government assessing duty on the merchandise, which consists of raincoats, at the rate of 44 cents a pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem as wearing apparel in chief value of wool.

"Were the Tariff act of 1897 still in force," says General Appraiser Chamberlain in his decision for the board, "there would be no doubt in our minds but that the assessment of duty at 44 cents a pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem would be correct, as it has been judicially determined that wearing apparel in part of wool, though in chief value of cotton, is properly dutiable as wearing apparel in part of wool. We are, therefore, confronted with the question: Has the present Tariff act changed in any material manner the paragraph covering wool wearing apparel?

"A careful perusal of Paragraph 370 of the Tariff act of 1897 and Paragraph 382 of the present act would seem to answer the question in the negative. It is true that whereas Paragraph 370 does not contain a comma between 'felts not woven' and 'and not specially provided for in this act,' the act of 1909 does so contain the comma between the phrases above mentioned. Hence the query, does the 'not specially provided for' provision apply only to 'felts not woven' or does it apply to all the articles enumerated in the first part of the paragraph?

"It is our opinion that the same principle of law laid down in Stone v. Heineman is applicable to the question here at issue. The insertion of the comma can in no way change the plain and unambiguous meaning of the paragraph, nor do we think that it was the intention of Congress to make any change when we consider the fact that with the exception of the change in the proviso to Paragraph 380 of the act of 1909, no other material change occurs in the whole wool schedule."

STOCKHOLDERS GAIN IN PRUDENTIAL FIGHT

Vice Chancellor Allows Their Claim of $2,500,000 Fund, but Nothing More.

POLICY HOLDERS' SURPLUS

Court Decides the Proposed Division of $20,000,000 Among Them Is Proper—Company to Appeal.

A decision was handed down yesterday by Vice Chancellor Howell in the New Jersey Chancery Court in the suit brought by Leon F. Blanchard and other dissatisfied stockholders against the Prudential Insurance Company of America, in which the court rules that the stockholders are entitled to a distribution of a fund of $2,500,000, assigned to them as shareholders, but withheld and placed in the "contingency surplus," while, on the other hand, the proposed division of a $20,000,000 surplus among the deferred dividend policy holders is held to be entirely valid as against the stockholders.

With regard to so much of the surplus as was assigned by the Directors at various periods to stockholders, but withheld as a "contingency surplus," the Vice Chancellor says in his opinion:

"I do not see why the surplus cannot be divided among the stockholders to the extent of $2,500,000. A distribution of this amount would not, in my opinion, injuriously affect the company's actual assets or its credit as a sound financial institution nor its current business."

The company's capital stock is $2,000,000, and if Vice Chancellor Howell's decision is affirmed it will mean a dividend of 125 per cent. in addition to the usual annual dividend of 10 per cent.

The court also says on the subject of the $20,000,000 to be distributed to policy holders in the form of increased benefits in accordance with a resolution passed by the Board of Directors on June 14, 1909:

"I have no hesitation in saying that it is entirely competent for the company, acting through its Board of Directors, at any time to reduce its rates of premium for future business, and that its discretion therein is controlled, except that it would not be permitted to reduce the rates so low as to endanger the whole enterprise.

"If, after long experience, the company finds that its rates are excessive it is not only its right but its duty to reduce them to a reasonable basis. And this may be done either by an actual reduction of the whole table of rates of premium or by increasing the amount of insurance which the old rates will thereafter purchase.

"The new rates, or increased amount of insurance, so far as this class of policies (those issued after July 5, 1909) is concerned would operate to the extent to which the benefit is conferred as a reduction in the premium rates."

Upon learning of Vice Chancellor Howell's decision, President John F. Dryden of the Prudential announced that the company would take an appeal in the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals. Mr Ddyden also issued a statement, in which he said in part:

"All the charges of illegality, fraud, mismanagement, breach of trust, and the giving to policy holders of moneys belonging to stockholders are found by the learned Vice Chancellor in favor of the company. The Vice Chancellor concludes, however, that the surplus retained by the company is larger than is necessary for the protection of its obligations and the extension of its business, and that to the extent of the money apportioned to the stockholders from the earnings on deferred dividend policies, (some $2,500,000,) such surplus should now be distributed to the stockholders.

"The learned Vice Chancellor appears to regard the apportionment to the stockholders above referred to as controlling. This apportionment, however, was made in obedience to the statute of 1907, and was only made as between the policyholders and the stockholders for the purpose of definitely fixing the amount of the earnings that should ultimately be paid to the policy holders.

"The stockholders have already had enormous dividends from the company amounting to over 120 per cent. per year upon their cash contributions. The management is not opposed to the payment of still further dividends when they can safely be declared with due regard to the needs of the company in the protection of its policies (aggregating nearly two billions of dollars) and the reasonable and normal extension of its business."

NASSAU A NATIONAL BANK.

Old Clearing House Member Begins Operations To-day Under New Charter.

The Nassau Bank, one of the charter members of the Clearing House, and one of the old-time commercial banks downtown, will operate under a National charter after to-day and will henceforth be known as the National Nassau Bank of New York.

Its last report, made to the State Superintendent of Banking on Nov. 10, showed deposits of $9,400,000. It has today over $10,500,000, which is a measure of growth seldom equaled. There will be no change in the officers or organization of the bank by reason of the change from a State to a National bank.

President Edward Earl has been connected with the Nassau Bank for twenty-four years. He was elected President in November, 1908, succeeding W. H. Rogers, and was practically the head of this institution during the panic of 1907. The bank deposits at that time were about $4,000,000. This amount has, since Mr. Earl's incumbency, multiplied two and one-half times.

Nominating Committee for the Curb.

In the organization of the curb market under the new constitution, which was recently adopted, E. S. Mendels, curb agent, sent out yesterday to those assenting to the plan of organization, the names of five members, to act as a nominating committee. This committee will select a Board of Representatives to consist of fifteen members, who will have powers approximately those of the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange. The brokers named by Mr. Mendels are J. M. Williams, W. C. Moore, L. I. Teichman, A. H. Timpson, and George S. Dates, Jr.

Telephone Earnings Net $10,619,165.

The report of the New York Telephone Company for the year ended Dec. 31 shows telephone revenue of $36,353,899, and expenses, including depreciation and taxes, amounting to $25,734,733, which left net telephone earnings of $10,619,165. Dividends and interest earnings amounted to $3,840,604, and miscellaneous earnings to $36,944. These brought total net earnings up to $14,496,714. Interest charges of $2,150,714 and dividends of $8,712,488 were paid, leaving a surplus of $3,633,512.

Associated Merchants' Co. Report.

The six-months' report of the Associated Merchants' company for the period ended Jan. 31, 1911, shows net profits of $813,265, compared with $810,058 in the same period last year. After payment of dividends on the first and second preferred and common stocks there remained a balance of $281,463, against $302,980 in the previous year. The payment of extra dividends of $123,762 left a surplus of $157,701, against $171,762 in the previous year. The total surplus is $1,166,428.

Offer Chicago & Terre Haute Bonds.

F. J. Lisman & Co. have purchased from the Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern Railway $3,100,000 first and refunding fifty-year 5 per cent. bonds, and are offering them to investors at 98 and accrued interest. The subscription list will be opened at 10 o'clock on March 3. The road issuing these bonds was formed through the merger last year of the properties of the Chicago Southern and the Southern Indiana.

STUDEBAKER STOCK TAKEN.

Oversubscription Here and in London, Where $13,500,000 Preferred Was Offered.

Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Lehman Brothers announced yesterday that the issue of $13,500,000 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock of the Studebaker Corporation had been oversubscribed both here and in London, where Kleinwort, Sons & Co. were the associates of the New York bankers. The stock appeared on the curb yesterday at 100¼, a premium of one-quarter of 1 per cent.

J. M. Studebaker, President of the corporation, estimates the net profits of the corporation for 1911 at $3,500,000 as a minimum. He states that the Studebaker Brothers' Manufacturing Company of South Bend, Ind., which, together with the Everitt-Metzger-Flanders Company of Detroit, was taken over by the new company, shipped in 1910 from South Bend 107,000 vehicle, along with about $500,000 worth of harness. If the concern had the manufacturing facilities it could have shipped 20,000 more horse-drawn vehicles, he says.

The South Bend factory, he says, employs about 4,000 hands, and is the largest vehicle plant in the world, selling products on every continent through approximately 10,000 agents.

In 1907 the Studebaker Brothers' Manufacturing Company purchased and still retains 40 per cent. of the capital stock of the Garford Company, at Elyria, Ohio, which manufactures high-priced automobiles. In 1909 a third of the stock of the Everitt-Metzger-Flanders Company was acquired, and in 1910 all the balance.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Happenings of a Day in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Money was firm today. Discount rates continued weak on talk of an early reduction of the bank rate.

Consols and rubber shares were the features on the Stock Exchange. The former advanced a quarter of a point on purchases for the Sinking Fund, while an advance of a shilling at the crude rubber auctions stimulated the demand for rubber stocks. Mexican rails were in good request, but the other sections were dull.

American securities opened steady and about unchanged. During the forenoon the leading issues advanced on light buying. Only a few transactions were registered in the afternoon, and the market closed dull.

MORGAN & CO. BUY THE PERE MARQUETTE

Control Went with Purchase of 110,000 Shares from Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton.

ROAD TO BE BUILT UP NOW

$8,000,000 in Notes to be Issued at Once for Substantial Improvements —Better Business Expected.

Control of the Père Marquette Railroad has passed to J. P. Morgan & Co. Stock to the amount of $11,000,000, which was in the treasury of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton when the operation of the road was turned over to the Baltimore & Ohio by J. P. Morgan & Co. in 1909, has been purchased from the Dayton Road by Morgan & Co. This is virtually the controlling stock. Provision has been made for an $8,000,00 issue of notes by the Père Marquette to provide funds needed to increase its facilities for handling traffic. The majority stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton is still held by Morgan & Co., but is under option to the Baltimore & Ohio under the terms of a reorganization plan.

It was said yesterday that the sale of the Père Marquette stock to Morgan & Co. carried with it an arrangement for the purchase of the Dayton stock by the Baltimore & Ohio, but this was not admitted at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio, was elected yesterday President of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton to succeed William Cotter, who is to give all his time to the Père Marquette. This statement was issued from both the Morgan & Co. and the Baltimore & Ohio offices:

> The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company has sold to J. P. Morgan & Co. 110,000 shares of the common stock of the Pere Marquette Railroad Company.
>
> William Cutter has resigned as President of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company, and Daniel Willard has been elected in his place. George F. Randolph has been elected Vice President in charge of traffic.
>
> It is understood no other changes in the staff of either company will be made. Mr. Cotter will continue as President of the Pere Marquette Railroad Company, and will give his entire time and attention to the management and upbuilding of that property.
>
> The transaction includes arrangements for financing substantial improvements to the Pere Marquette Railroad, to be commenced at once. In that connection the Pere Marquette Railroad Company has authorized and will issue $8,000,000 of five-year 6 per cent. notes, under a collateral indenture, of which the Guaranty Trust Company is Trustee, the notes being secured by the deposit of $16,000,000 of fifty-year 5 per cent. bonds, issued under an improvement and refunding general mortgage to Bankers Trust Company, Trustee.

Morgan & Co., it is understood, paid cash for the Pere Marquette stock. The price was not announced. The proposed issue of notes also, it is expected, will be taken by Morgan & Co. The authorized amount of the new improvement and refunding general mortgage bond is to be $60,000,000. The deed of trust, it is said, will provide that no further issues under the existing refuding mortgage shall be made. The future financing which the road may need will therefore be done under this new mortgage instead of under the existing refunding mortgage.

The proceeds of the notes will go to pay off the floating debt, and provide for maturing obligations and additions and betterments, including more side tracks and equipment.

These expenditures will enable the Pere Marquette, according to its management, materially to lower the operating ratio and thereby substantially increase the net earnings, even without any increase in gross business.

It is said, however, that more business had been offered the road than it had been able to care for, and with increased facilities the Directors are counting on increases in gross as well as a much better showing in net. As matters now stand the road is not earning the full amount of its interest, due entirely, it is said, to the lack of sufficient facilities to handle available traffic.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Aside from the better tone to the city tractions, there was not much to be discussed in the local market movement. Cambria Steel hardened with United States Steel. There have been rather definite reports of late of a combination of the big independent steel companies to be announced as soon as the Supreme Court decisions in the anti-trust cases have been handed down. It is doubtful, however, if Cambria Steel will be included, as it is too valuable an adjunct to the Pennsylvania Railroad for that system to relinquish.

JUDGE GARY REPORTS STEEL BUSINESS GOOD

Effect of Rate Decision, He Says, Must Be Only Temporary, and All Must Make the Best of It.

BOOK ORDERS INCREASED

Mills Presumably Running at 65% of Capacity, the Highest Since Recession from Top Marks.

Judge Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, on his return from a month's vacation in Florida and Cuba yesterday talked on the general business situation, and particularly on present conditions in the steel trade. He viewed calmly the decision of the Inter-State Commerce Commission last week against the railroads' demands for higher rates.

"It is my opinion," he said, "that if the rate decision has a depressing effect upon business conditions it will be temporary. From my information it seems to me general business conditions are generally and materially improving.

"If this continues, as now seems probable, it necessarily follows that the business of the railroads will correspondingly increase, and in order to take care of their interests they must put and keep their tracks in good condition and largely increase their equipment.

"The different lines of business of the country are more or less tied together. It is time for all of us to take things as we find them, and make the best of them. In such a country as this where productive capacity is so great and increasing so rapidly we shall find great opportunities for success."

Still more important from the point of view of Wall Street was the Judge's elucidation of the situation in the steel trade during the past few weeks. While he would make no official statement of the percentage of capacity in operation at the plants of the corporation, he allowed it to be inferred that production was close to 65 per cent. of the maximum, which is the best showing the Steel Corporation has made since early last Summer, when a recession in business first became noticeable.

New business has increased materially this month for the Steel Corporation, as shown in Judge Gary's statement of bookings of new orders, of which he said:

"From present indications new steel bookings for February will average between 35,000 and 40,000 tons a day, which marks a substantial improvement over the average daily orders in the month of January."

In January the bookings up to the last few days in the month averaged 30,000 tons, and in the late Fall, November and December, they were 24,000 tons. The low point last year was reached in August, when the bookings were down to 20,000 tons daily. From that point they went to 21,000 in September, 22,750 in October, and 24,000 in November.

It is not likely that the material increase in business in February will show in the Feb. 28 report of steel orders on the books, which will be made public on March 10. As Judge Gary explained yesterday, operations at the mills have increased at a rate which would seem to indicate that unfilled tonnage at the end of February will not increase proportionately as in the preceding month, because the output of the mills in the first month of the year was at the low point.

At the monthly meeting of the Directors yesterday Percival Roberts was elected a member of the Finance Committee to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of William Ellis Corey, the former President of the corporation.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

BOSTON, Feb. 28.—There is little to be said of the local market to-day. Trading was light, especially in the copper share list, and fluctuations in these issues were confined within fractional limits. In the miscellaneous list American Agricultural Chemical was the feature.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market was dull but heavy. Slight further decline was made with new low levels reached in the American and Canadian markets, prices steadying a little at the close. The Chicago market was closed on account of the primary election. The news was generally bearish. There was an increase of 1,933,000 bushels in the world's visible against a decrease of 2,387,000 bushels the previous week and a decrease of 2,487,000 bushels last year. The European visible alone showed an increase of 2,500,000 bushels. The Canadian visible increased 428,000 bushels, but the American decreased 995,000 bushels. The weather was good in the Southwest and more snow was shown in Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma. The cables were weak, the English markets showing a sharp decline on favorable crop news and on free offerings of wheat. Reports from India, which is just about ready to harvest a new crop, were favorable. The Australian visible was very large. Attention was called to the fact that while the North American exports have this year been 28,000,000 bushels less than last year world's exports have been 47,000,000 bushels more, showing that other countries have supplied 75,000,000 bushels more wheat than last year, and the shipments continue on a large scale. Cash wheat was quiet, exporters reporting eight loads of Manitoba wheat. No. 2 red was quoted at 92¼c, free on board; No. 1 Northern, $1.07; No. 2 hard winter, $1; No. 1 Manitiba, $1.01½.

CORN was dull for spot, with the close rather steady. The Southwestern future markets were easy, but quiet. Chicago total stocks showed an increase for the week of 869,000 bushels and Bradstreet's visible showed an increase of 1,796,000 bushels against an increase of 732,000 bushels the previous week and an increase of 2,203,000 bushels last year. Recently the corn receipts have been decreasing at the interior, but this has not yet been influential on the supplies at points of accumulation. Spot corn was dull with No. 2 quoted 51c, free on board; No. 3, 51¼c; steamer, 50½c; No. 4, 48½c, all in elevator, export rate.

OATS were very quiet for cash property, with the tone only about steady. The demand for cash oats has been very quiet. The visible supply showed an increase of 319,000 bushels against a decrease the previous week of 388,000 bushels. The total visible is now 29,425,000 bushels, against 18,379,000 a year ago. Standard oats were quoted at 35c; No. 2 white, 35½c; No. 3 white, 34½c.

PROVISIONS.—The market was quiet and steady for spot product. Live hogs were slightly higher at the stock yards, and the Western hog market generally showed some improvement.

COTTON.

A resumption of Monday's covering movement was seen at the outset yesterday, with the market also receiving stimulus from Liverpool advices. While the demand was not so general as at the beginning of the week and there was more opposition encountered by locals who were not in sympathy with the advance, and also from interests who sold on the reaction theory, these sales were well absorbed with the close near the best of the day. Prices at one time showed a gain of approximately ⅜c per pound from the recent low for the old crop options. New crop months were inclined to lag, and it was thought that beneficial rains in Texas and parts of Oklahoma since Sunday were restricting outside demand.

Spot interests were good buyers during the day, although in the late trading some sales were credited to these sources, with the South and recent buyers also disposing of cotton. Sentiment seems to improve, however, and bears were more conservative in their views and operations, while there seemed to be a disposition to give more attention to the statistical position. One prominent concern gave figures showing that, allowing for a crop of 11,726,000 bales inclusive of linters, there would be a decided scarcity at the end of the season, and with a crop of 12,100,000 bales a deficiency of 176,000 bales would be seen, as compared with last year. It was also pointed out that exports to date aggregate to 6,210,000 bales, and if for the balance of the season they should continue at the same rate as for last season, total exports would amount to 7,891,000 bales.

In line with predictions recently made, New York stocks are decreasing at a fairly liberal rate. At present these aggregate to 240,000 bales in warehouse, against 281,000 the first of February. It is thought that freight room engagements since the first of February amount to from 70,000 to 80,000 bales, of which approximately 15,000 bales have already been shipped with the balance scheduled for March and early April departure.

There was less heard of the probable formation of a new bull pool, and although at the outset of the session the assertion was made that a large short interest had been gunned for Monday and had covered, the action of the market indicated that this process had not been fully completed, and stop loss orders caught on the short side of the market added to the rapidity of the upward movement. While some interests claimed that manipulation was resorted to in order to bring about the advance, it cannot be denied but that the efforts were successful, as late in the day May advanced 14.50. Southern spot markets were unchanged to ¼c advance, with New York spot cotton firm, 20 points advance from the previous close; middling uplands 14.45.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Liberal selling in the distant options, thought to be for the account of refining interests, accounted for the somewhat easier tone displayed during the day. For a time demand from shorts around the 7c level proved sufficient to stem the downward tendency, but as this buying exhausted itself the undertone again became heavy. Owing to the holiday at Chicago, trading was somewhat restricted, but, nevertheless, sentiment expressed by interests with Western connections was mainly bearish, chiefly because of the hog situation. Crude oil advices were very much mixed, with wide differences again reported in bid and asked prices, according to location.

COFFEE.

Coffee had an early decline of 11 to 22 points, but later was inactive and prices hardened a little, and the close was steady at a net loss of 10 to 17 points, with sales of 38,000 bags. Havre closed at noon with a net decline of 1@1¼ francs, while Hamburg closed 1 pfennig net lower. Rio was nominal, and Santos showed a decline of 100 reis. Private cables from Santos, received by way of Havre, said that rain has fallen in Southern Sao Paulo near the sea, but that damaging drought continues, particularly in Sao Paulo, Rio, and Minas. The complaints of drought from Brazil continued to be discredited here, since official weather reports from the first of the year have shown abundant rainfall in the sections covered. Cost and freight offers from Santos were generally unchanged at 13 cents for Rio No. 4.

Spot coffee, 12⅝c for Rio No. 7.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Quiet and Firm—Call Money Rates, 2@2¼ Per Cent.

MARKETS WATCH CONGRESS

Interest Keen in Question of Extra Session—Railroads' Course Regarding Decisions Unsettled.

The course of business on the Stock Exchange yesterday made it apparent that conservatism is still the word with the trading fraternity, whose operations are from day to day making up the bulk of the trading. As an immediate incentive to caution the position of affairs in Congress seems to have taken the place of the rate decisions, but the possibilities involved in the decisions have not entirely lost their influence, a fact amply testified to by the eagerness of the Stock Exchange community for definite word as to the next move of the railroads. Under the circumstances transactions were limited in point of volume and price changes were relatively narrow. There was an undertone of strength to the trading, however, with rather vigorous advances in the shares of industrial concerns removed from the sphere of influence of the rate cases, and in Union Pacific and United States Steel, which were naturally affected by the fact that substantial dividends accrue on them to-day. A short interest of fair proportions seems to exist and forms, of course, an important factor in the technical market position.

At the close of business it was still uncertain whether there is to be an extra session of Congress, but the efforts under way in Washington to obviate a special gathering were at least encouraging and may accomplish the result. Agreement appears to have been reached upon a number of matters, upon everything, in fact, save the acceptance of Mr. Taft's reciprocity measure, and if this, too, finds a place in the programme we may be spared a session which would have little to recommend it if reciprocity becomes an established fact. As for the attitude of the railroads toward the decisions, this is not yet definitely settled. There is a strong feeling that the law under which the commission acted should be tested in the courts, but there is no unanimity of opinion in this regard. It is insisted, nevertheless, that, contrary to reports, the Pennsylvania system has not officially bowed to the mandate of the commission and that its future course is still as much a matter of debate as that of the other roads. As a precautionary measure steps have been taken by a number of the roads to retrench wherever this was easiest of accomplishment, and the movement in this direction seems fairly general if press advices from different parts of the country are trustworthy. Judge Gary's cheerful interview, with the assertion that there had been no cancellation of orders upon the books of the Steel Corporation, is easily reconciled with the methods so far adopted by the roads to curtail and presumably the improvement in the steel business which Judge Gary mentions is to be attributed in considerable measure to the recent betterment in trade generally. Among the day's developments of interest and significance were the quick sale of $12,500,000 of Erie 6 per cent. notes and the oversubscription of the preferred stock offering of the Studebaker Corporation, the issue going to a premium in the outside market.

In spite of the necessary preparations for the financing of the heavy March interest and dividend disbursements, calling, according to various estimates, for about $100,000,000 as against $95,000,000 a year ago, money market conditions maintain their familiar ease. Call money failed to touch the minimum of 1 per cent. noted on Monday, but this is unimportant; a rate of 2 per cent. is in itself extremely low. For the first time in several weeks the banks have lost ground on their dealings with the Sub-Treasury, the adverse balance since Friday last amounting to $523,000. No changes of interest were reported from foreign money centres, and the foreign exchange market disclosed only a mild recession.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Tuesday.

Commission houses on the Consolidated Stock Exchange were again picking up the specialties in fractional lots, and in some quarters of the list the odd lot demand was quite a feature. So far as the general list was concerned the undertone was firm most of the day. Prices for the leading stocks quite generally displayed relative firmness compared with the New York Stock Exchange.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News of Railroad Retrenchments.

Reports are already coming to hand of steps by some of the railroads to reduce expenses, following the refusal of the Inter-State Commerce Commission to allow an increase in freight rates. It was surmised yesterday that where retrenchments are now under way, they were decided on before the decisions of the commission were made public last Thursday, but the Street is disposed to accept any current items of retrenchment as due entirely to the rate decisions, whether other considerations enter into the matter or not. One reason why this is so is that so much was heard within the last year or two of the railroads punishing the public for what the railroads regard as unfair treatment. There are a good many railroad men who have no sympathy with any such policy. The friends of the head of one of the large lines were quoting him yesterday as having said, after reading the full decision of the commission, that he was almost convinced that the commission was right. Not many railroad men go this far, but that the railroads should make any concerted effort to make the public feel discomfort on account of the rate decisions seems, at least, very improbable. This does not preclude the possible adoption of curtailment by the railroads from time to time. Indeed, some railroad men say that undoubtedly such curtailment is bound to come.

St. Paul Men Laid Off.

One specific instance of retrenchment brought to Wall Street's attention yesterday was the laying off of 700 shop men by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, reported in dispatches received from Milwaukee. This number of men was said to have been laid off at the St. Paul's shops at Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and other places. This follows a reduction in the working hours at these shops a fortnight ago. The St. Paul, however, it was pointed out yesterday, builds a considerable amount of its own equipment and the shops of the company have had, in the late past, a good deal of work to do for the road's new line to the Pacific Coast. A let up in this extra work offers possibly an explanation for the reduction in the number of men employed in the St. Paul's shops.

⁂

May Reorganize I. & G. N. Soon.

Upon the return of the Second Mortgage Bondholders' Committee of the International & Great Northern from a trip of inspection of that property, it was said yesterday that the committee, of which W. Emlen Roosevelt is Chairman, is hopeful of being able to lift the receivership of the road in the relatively near future. The International & Great Northern is one of the four Gould roads which went into receivership in 1908. One of these, the Western Maryland, has already been reorganized, but the others are still in receivership. One thing which is helpful in making possible the reorganization of the International & Great Northern is said to be a large reduction in the estimate of the amount of unsecured debt which, under a recent Texas law, will have to receive priority in the reorganization of the road. While in Texas the Bondholders' Committee talked with the Governor and the Railroad Commissioners of that State and outlined the general policy of the committee in respect to the reorganization of the International & Great Northern.

Erie Notes Quickly Taken.

All of the $12,500,000 Erie Railroad three-year collateral trust 6 per cent. notes offered for subscription at par at the opening of business yesterday by J. P. Morgan & Co., the First National Bank, and the National City Bank, were sold before noon. The ease with which the notes were placed afforded an interesting contrast to the troublous times encountered by the Erie Railroad in 1908 in connection with the obligations it had to meet at that time. The change in the times and in the financial position of the Erie, which has been very greatly improved in the last three years, made plain sailing yesterday for the refunding of the notes which were put out in the Spring of 1908. Announcement was also made yesterday of the closing of the subscription lists for the preferred stock of the Studebaker Corporation, all of the $13,500,000 issue having been sold, and, in fact, largely oversubscribed.

Authorities Hopeful.

Judge Elbert H. Gary and Frank A. Vanderlip each contributed yesterday opinions of the outlook in the light of the rate decision and both were "conservatively optimistic." Judge Gary's opinion that conditions were generally and materially improving supplemented with the bit of advice that "it is time for all of us to take things as we find them and make the best of them" was in line with the report from St. Louis quoting the President of the National City Bank as saying that "agricultural and mercantile prospects for 1911 are excellent, and capital is well disposed toward investment in industrial enterprises." Mr. Vanderlip qualified this by saying: "Unless unforseen and unexpected shocks disturb the situation, the general movement of trade and finance will be strong and voluminous."

Investment Returns Move Up.

The March totals of interest and dividend returns as figured by The Journal of Commerce are $100,458,334, against $90,685,352 in February and $95,101,522 in March of last year. Interest payments show an increase from $40,000,000 in March, 1910, to $43,200,000 this month and dividend disbursements increase from $55,101,522 to $57,258,334. In the dividend list, however, it is worth noting that while railroad disbursements have increased from $14,513,085 to $17,733,796, and Street railway dividends from $1,391,325 to $1,711,917, industrial returns in dividends have decreased from $39,197,112 to $37,812,621.

(As officially reported for the year ended December 31, 1910)

| | |
|---|---|
| Gross Earnings | $4,253,082.53 |
| Operating Expenses, including maintenance and taxes | 3,261,755.78 |
| Net Earnings | $991,326.75 |
| Annual interest charge on $10,000,000 Five Per Cent. Bonds | 500,000.00 |
| Surplus Earnings | $491,326.75 |

Since the organization of the Company in 1904 dividends of 6% have been paid on the preferred stock. Dividends have been paid on the common stock since 1908, the present dividend rate being 7%.

The Michigan State Telephone Company owns and operates a complete telephone system covering over 1,000 cities and towns in Michigan. On December 31, 1910, the Company had in operation 193 exchanges with 147,980 subscribers' telephones, and in addition, by reason of its toll line system throughout the State, connected a total of 204,214 subscribers' telephones of all classes.

The physical properties of the Michigan State Telephone Company have an actual replacement value, as officially estimated, in excess of $17,000,000. These figures do not take into consideration any allowance for good will or franchise value or contracts with the Bell System. It will be seen, therefore, that there is an unusually large equity in the property over and above the Company's bonded debt.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Northwest Corner of Broadway and 96th Street Sold for Immediate Improvement—Herbert Du Puy of Pittsburg the Buyer of Forrest Chambers —Bronx and Suburban Deals.

Several good deals on the upper west side characterized the realty market yesterday. Robert E. Dowling figured in an important sale by which he disposed of the valuable plot on the northwest corner of Broadway and Ninety-sixth Street, fronting 100 feet on Broadway and 200 feet on Ninety-sixth Street. The buyer is said to be a large estate, and a high-class improvement for that locality, which has shown great building activity recently, is contemplated in the near future. Mr. Dowling acquired the entire block front on the north side of Ninety-sixth Street, between Broadway and West End Avenue, in 1908 from Moritz Walter.

The rumor that the new twelve-story apartment house known as Forrest Chambers has been sold was confirmed yesterday by L. J. Phillips & Co., the brokers in the deal. It has been bought by Herbert Du Puy of Pittsburg from the owners and builders, George F. Johnson & Son. The structure occupies the greater part of the block on the west side of Broadway, between 113th and 114th Streets, a frontage of 176 feet. The building on the corner of 114th Street was purchased to protect the light of the apartment by the builders a year ago, and this has also been bought by Mr. Du Puy. The transaction involves, it is stated by the brokers, about $2,500,000.

Woolworth Gives $800,000 Mortgage.

Frank W. Woolworth, in the name of the Broadway-Park Place Company, took title yesterday from William Hamilton and other heirs to the northwest corner of Broadway and Barclay Street, a plot 46 by 140 and irregular. He gave back a mortgage of $800,000 on the property, to run five years, at 4½ per cent. This was the final parcel purchased by Mr. Woolworth, and its acquisition led him to alter his original building plans, and his towering office structure will cover the entire block front between Barclay Street and Park Place.

Sell Old Dwellings in Loft Zone.

Four more old dwellings in the midtown loft zone were disposed of yesterday, and it is understood that the property will be improved at once with a modern loft structure. The parcels, which were sold by Hedwig Glass, consist of 158 to 162 West Twenty-fifth Street, three four-story dwellings, on plot 55 by 98.9, and 157 West Twenty-fourth Street, a four-story dwelling, on lot 20.10 by 98.9. The property is about 130 feet east of Seventh Avenue. Several sales were reported on this block last week, and there are several building operations in progress.

$500,000 Lease on 6th Avenue Corner.

A twenty-one years' lease, aggregating $500,000, has just been taken by the United Cigar Stores Company on the old Alexander estate property on the northwest corner of Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street. The lease was made by Horace S. Ely & Co. for Anna A. Muntland, one of the heirs of the estate, who purchased the property at auction a short time ago for $450,000. On the opposite northeast corner the old Masonic Temple is about to give way to an eighteen-story loft and office building.

Big Lease in Auto District.

Another big automobile building improvement for the Broadway section in the neighborhood of Columbus Circle is forecast by the statement that the United States Tire Company has practically concluded negotiations for a long term lease on the Mary E. # GREAT SALE OF LAND IN THE ARGENTINE CHACO

On March 22nd there will be held in Buenos Ayres a great sale of land, situated in the Colony General Vedia. The amount of land to be offered is 42,442 hectares (a hectare is about 2½ acres.) It will be offered in easy lots and on favourable terms. It comprises some of the richest soil in the country, and is situated on the navigable rivers, Paraguay, Bermejo and Oro. It adjoins the town of Timbo, Puerto Bermejo, where under the direction of the engineer dredging operations for the deepening and cleansing of the bed of the Bermejo have for more than a year been going on. The Bermejo is a copious river running into the Chaco towards Salta and the North of the Republic. It is undoubtedly destined to be the great artery of communication with those flourishing regions.

The Argentine Chaco is the richest and most fertile region in the whole of this vast territory. The fertilizing substances contained in its thick mantle of vegetable soil are practically inexhaustible.

The district is plentifully supplied with streams, and its navigable rivers bring its most remote portions into touch with the world's markets by joining the Paraguay and Parana, whose abundant waters extend to La Plata, thereby facilitating navigation to vessels of oversea draught. This of course saves trans-shipment.

On the banks of these rivers the populous cities of the Argentine of the future will be erected.

The sub-tropical and favourable climate of this district is not subject to alternations of depressing cold or enervating heat. The wealth represented by its timber, which has simply to be carted, amounts to millions.

When the plough overturns the soil wherein nature has been depositing its wealth for thousands of years, and the seeds develop in the incomparable sub-tropical soil of the Chaco no stories of easily earned wealth will surpass the reality.

To establish means of transport connecting the agricultural and cattle raising districts with the ports and markets, there is no need to lay down rails or make roads, thereby involving heavy capital and months or years of labour.

The route is a moving one—namely, the navigable river.

The Paraguay flows to the Parana, and the latter to the Plata, and the strong current carries the produce into our harbour and docks or places it free on the high seas.

Yet as commercial activity is nowadays a pressing factor, steam lends its energy in transport, though at a ratio of minimum cost which the train can never reach.

Adjoining the land now advertised for sale on Wednesday, March 22nd, 1911, there are already a port, a town, and two colonies, and they are surrounded by important stock farms in active operation.

Such is briefly the nature of the business to be offered; a huge district divided up into lots of various dimensions, each of them containing the elements for making an immense fortune in the hands of a man of ordinary foresight and business ability. Plans, photographs, and full details of the plots will be published later.

Any information will be furnished on application to Adolfo Bullrich y Cia., Florida 269 and 278, Buenos Ayres, Argentine Republic. Telegraphic Address, Bullco. Codes, AI and A. B. C.

"If It's in The Times It's all Right"

An advertising solicitor representing a New York morning newspaper doubted the admissibility of an advertisement offered for publication in his newspaper by an advertising agent at whose office he called.

"Does The New York Times take it?" he asked the advertising agent.

"It has already been printed in The Times."

"Then it's all right," exclaimed the solicitor, accepting the order.

This incident serves to illustrate the broad influence of The New York Times' exclusion of fraudulent advertising.

For years The New York Times has exercised rigorous censorship over advertising submitted for publication in its columns.

This protection of readers has inspired confidence in the announcements appearing in The New York Times.

A reward of $100.00 is offered by The New York Times for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any one who may have obtained money under false pretenses through the medium of a misleading or fraudulent advertisement appearing in The New York Times.

AN OPPORTUNITY SEEKER, (AGE 30.)
For several weeks I've been advertising for a position "offering opportunities for advancement." Unfortunately, my ads heretofore haven't attracted those able to employ a $3,000 man willing to take less for the sake of an "Opportunity." I'm still looking for a position offering opportunities—but the opportunities I want are those of doing good, conscientious work.

As for my qualifications—I'm a member of the bar; also, I have brains and the ability to use them, (so my former employers say.) Incidentally, I'm an expert stenographer—it's fourteen years since I learned how. I have successfully held some fairly responsible positions; one in an executive-legal capacity, two as private secretary to prominent lawyers and financiers. Now I want an opportunity for greater service, a job worth while. If you think you can use me, address B 315 Times Downtown.

ROBIN JURY FILLED DESPITE MR. JEROME

Banker's Lawyer Continues His Objections in the Examination of Talesmen.

THE COURT OVERRULES HIM

Finally Takes a Hand in Selecting the Twelve Men When the Prisoner's Counsel Balks.

In the face of innumerable technical objections from Mr. Jerome, who used up all the peremptory challenges of the defense, the jury which is to try Joseph G. Robin on a charge of grand larceny in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, before Justice Seabury, was finally completed just before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

To select the twelve men 129 talesmen were examined, the court being forced to take an active part in their questioning, in order to safeguard the interests of the defendant. For the purpose of establishing certain technical points, Mr. Jerome refused to examine or challenge some of the panel, and Justice Seabury dismissed men to whom he made no objection.

Throughout the proceedings Robin appeared to be sunk in the same listless indifference that he had displayed on Monday. He seemed to be almost asleep, but sprang quickly to his feet as Clerk Brophy called on him to face each talesman as he was sworn in as a juror, and with disheveled hair and vacant smile looked around the court. At the recess for luncheon his sister, Dr. Louise Robinovitch, sought permission of Justice Seabury for him to remain in the County Court House, so as to avoid facing the throng waiting in City Hall Park to hoot him. He has shown himself very nervous in trips to and from the Tombs, and has seemed to be afraid that some one would attack him.

The permission was granted, and Dr. Robinovitch and Robins's counsel in his private bankruptcy proceedings, S. J. Goldsmith, had a conference with him. In the forenoon, while the clerk was calling the roll of the two new panels, which were in attendance, Dr. Robinovitch called across the table to her brother, but he paid no attention to her. He occupied himself with scribbling notes on a blotting pad and tearing them up.

The second talesman called to the stand after the opening of court, Benjamin Englander of 775 Beck Avenue, aroused Mr. Jerome by his remarks about the testimony of expert witnesses.

"I'd listen to them," said the talesman, "and judge of the weight of their evidence by my common sense."

"I challenge this man on the ground of mental incompetency," shouted Mr. Jerome.

"Challenge denied," replied the court, and Mr. Jerome had to use a peremptory challenge to be rid of the talesman.

Thomas J. McDermott, a truck contractor of 648 West Eighteenth Street, was accepted as the seventh juror, and then the first panel drawn was exhausted. When the eighth juror, John W. Magan of 1,084 Tinton Avenue, the Bronx, was about to be sworn, Mr. Jerome brought forward a technical objection on the ground that Robin could not advise with counsel, but he was overruled.

About half an hour before the recess it seemed as though both sides had made up their minds to fill the box before adjourning. George F. Garvin of 230 West Ninety-seventh Street and Jesse G. Edwards of 156 West 106th Street were accepted with hardly a question from either side, one after the other. But the next two men were unacceptable and recess was taken.

The second talesman examined after luncheon, George H. Palmer of 1,134 Bryant Avenue, took the eleventh place in the box, and then followed a rapid succession of men, who were in many cases rejected simply on the peremptory challenge of the defense. It soon became apparent that Mr. Jerome was using up his challenges as quickly as possible on men against whom no objection could be urged, though he was willing enough to see a talesman accepted if he showed signs of bias.

Thus, when the Court excused Milton Rosenbach on the ground of prejudice, Mr. Jerome excepted, and a little later he declined to challenge for cause George W. Ruddell of 146 West 122d Street, who had admitted that he was biased against the defendant. Justice Seabury called Mr. Jerome's attention to the matter and at once counsel began to explain his position.

"I am absolutely sincere, "Your Honor, in my course of action," he said. "My duty to my client I regard as a grave and responsible one."

"Your sincerity is not questioned," said the Court.

"I hope Your Honor will see that my duty constrains me to regard the entire proceeding as a legal error."

"We will have no more of this discussion," replied Justice Seabury. "Does the defence object to this talesman?"

Mr. Jerome refused to express an opinion, and District Attorney Whitman said that he did not wish to have a juror with an avowed prejudice, but he did not wish to use his peremptory challenges. The Court settled the difficulty by dismissing the talesman.

In two other cases the court took a hand, and, after examining the talesmen, dismissed them without urging from the defense, and when 120 of the panel had been under examination the last of Mr. Jerome's peremptory challenges was gone. As the next talesman was called, Mr. Jerome stated this fact and objected to the man being sworn. He was overruled.

Mr. Jerome next requested that the form of oath be so altered as to meet the peculiar circumstances of the case. He was again overruled. Then he raised a point he had already used in an earlier part of the proceedings, an objection to talesmen being examined orally in the presence of the other members of the panel. Once again he was overruled.

Whenever Mr. Jerome for these technical reasons seemed not to be examining as closely as he might into the qualifications of a talesman, Justice Seabury took up the questioning himself. Mr. Jerome pointed out to his Honor that this threw the responsibility of the selection on the court, and the court quietly remarked that it realized it and accepted it.

It was not till the one hundred and twenty-ninth talesman was summoned, William D. Grimshay of 456 West Twenty-second Street, that the remaining seat in the box was filled. It is stated that the sifting of so large a number of talesmen to complete a jury is almost without precedent in a grand larceny case. The jury is made up thus:

1. J. GOODWIN McDONALD, accountant, 1,829 Lexington Avenue.
2. ROBERT F. ELMER of the auditing department of the American Surety Company, 189 Lenox Avenue.
3. WILBUR H. THOMPSON, retired salesman, formerly employed by the Ansonia Brass and Copper Company, 104 West Seventeenth Street.
4. JOHN D. BUCHTEL, retired importer, 182 West Ninety-sixth Street.
5. HOWARD R. SHERMAN, a manufacturer of railway supplies, with an office in Jersey City, 186 West Eighty-seventh Street.
6. THEODORE S. CLARK, in the fur business at 134 Fifth Avenue, 74 West Eightieth Street.
7. THOMAS J. McDERMOTT, truck contractor, of 1 Broadway, living at 648 West Eighteenth Street.
8. JOHN W. MAGAN, department store employe, 1,084 Tinton Avenue, the Bronx.
9. GEORGE K. GARVIN, machine shop supplies, 230 West Ninety-seventh Street.
10. JESSE G. EDWARDS, buyer, 156 West 106th Street.
11. GEORGE H. PALMER, assistant tax agent, 1,134 Bryant Avenue.
12. WILLIAM D. GRIMSHAW, tilings and mantels, 456 West Twenty-second Street.

DRUMMOND PEARLS INSURED.

Policy for $100,000 Believed to Have Been Held on Jewels Stolen.

The report that the rope of pearls stolen from Mrs. Maldwin Drummond on the Hamburg-American liner Amerika on Sunday morning was insured in Lloyd's agency of London for $70,000 was confirmed yesterday, but whether the rest of the missing jewelry, the earrings, rings, and brooch were insured for another $30,000 could not be ascertained.

When asked at the Plaza if she intended to offer any reward, Mrs. Drummond replied that the Pinkerton agency, representing the London insurance agency, would arrange that matter. A TIMES reporter who inquired at the offices of the detective agency was informed that no instructions had so far been received regarding a reward. Instructions might come by cable at any time, and announcement would then be made through the newspapers.

Later in the day, after consultation with the detectives employed on the case, Mrs. Drummond suggested that a reward of $5,000 be offered for the recovery of the jewels. It is understood that the Pinkerton agency cabled to London for instructions regarding the offer of a reward.

The detectives are investigating a woman who was not on the passenger list of the Amerika, but evidently must have been there. She made out a declaration of nothing dutiable. Had the woman gone up to the desk to get an Inspector to examine her baggage the end voucher on the declaration would have been signed by the Inspector who accompanied her.

A woman not down on the passenger manifest of the ship was a maid traveling with a young couple and their baby, who had an inside cabin near 168, the one occupied by Mrs. Drummond. The detectives think it is possible, after discussing the case with officials at the Custom House, that the woman who had nothing to declare may have been this maid, and that her baggage was put on the declaration made out by the head of the family before the ship reached New York. These points will be clared up to-day, it was said. Finding the declaration paper in her room, she is thought to have filled it in, thinking that it was necessary for her to do so.

Strict guard is still being kept on the Amerika as she lies at her pier in Hoboken, and it will not be relaxed until the liner gets well outside Sandy Hook to-morrow morning on her way to Hamburg. She will sail at 10 A. M. and the purser expects to be busy putting valuables in the safety deposit boxes for some hours.

Detectives from the agency employed by Mrs. Drummond and the Pinkertons, acting for the insurance agency in London, were on board nearly all day and again searched the ship fore and aft, above and below decks, but no clue was obtained. One cabin was stripped down to the bare iron under the wood work to clear up one or two links in the meagre chain of evidence that the police have been trying vainly to solve since Sunday.

Orders have been given that no member of the crew shall be allowed to hold communication with strangers who go on board the ship while she is in port. Only visitors bearing proper business credentials will be allowed aboard the ship.

Rausch and Strumpelmeyer, the two bedroom stewards who had charge of the cabins on the Roosevelt deck near Mrs. Drummonds's section, were taken to Police Headquarters again yesterday for a search of the Rogues' Gallery to see if there may be any photographs there that they could suggest as passengers on the Amerika. They spent two hours at Headquarters, but were unable to identify any of the photographs.

DEMANDS A PUBLIC APOLOGY.

Mr. Goldel Wants Lawyer Myers to Make Reparation for Fish Market Charges.

Harry A. Goldel, President of the Federal Club, the Republican organization of the Sixth Assembly District, of which former Secretary of State Koenig is the leader, has called upon Saul S. Myers, a lawyer, for a public apology for charges he made before the Sinking Fund Commission to the effect that political influence was being used in the allotment of fish market stands under the Manhattan terminal of the Williamsburg Bridge, and implicating Mr. Goldel and others.

Mr. Goldel has written to Mr. Myers:

> On or about Jan. 25 last you made charges before the Sinking Fund Commission that the Federal Club of the Sixth Assembly District, Manhattan, coerced members and forced them to purchase tickets for its entertainments, to vote the Republican ticket, and to join and become members of that club. You also charged me, as President of that organization, with conniving and participating in an illegitimate allotment of the fish stands under the Williamsburg Bridge to favorite and friendly fish peddlers.
>
> I understand that Commissioner Fosdick, after an exhaustive and unlimited investigation, has dismissed those charges, and found them to be false. I, therefore, demand of you an apology and also that your apology be given as much publicity as were given to your charges made against me.

Sidney H. Goodacre, Superintendent of Markets in the Department of Finance, formerly Assistant Secretary of the Republican County Committee, and Marks Graff, an Inspector in the Auditing Division of the Department of Finance, and formerly chief attendant at the Republican County Headquarters, were also mentioned in Mr. Myers's charges. They also have been exonerated.

Nephew Contests Mrs. McGuire's Will.

Vincent Roberts, a grandnephew of Mrs. Mary A. McGuire, who died Jan. 26 leaving a will which failed to mention him, and made nine charitable bequests of $500 each, filed notice of a contest of her will yesterday. The will left a $1,000 legacy to a friend, and gave no bequest larger than $250 to a relative.

DUVEENS MUST FACE CRIMINAL CHARGES

Official Denial That They Have Offered $1,000,000 for Immunity from Prison Sentences.

MAY SETTLE CIVIL SUITS

Government Said to Have Demanded More Than a Million in Payment of Alleged Customs Frauds.

The report from Washington that an offer of $1,000,000 had been made to the Federal authorities by Duveen Brothers, the art importing firm of 302 Fifth Avenue, two members of which were arrested and indicted last October, charged with undervaluation frauds, in exchange for a promise that they would not be made to serve a prison sentence if convicted, was denied by attorneys of the firm yesterday and by United States Attorney Wise.

While it was said that there had been no effort on the part of the members of the art firm to procure immunity from a prison sentence in connection with the criminal end of the case, negotiations are under way by which a settlement of the civil suit is expected to be made without the defendants going to trial. The Duveen brothers, it was said, submitted a proposal to the Federal authorities several weeks ago by which they agreed to pay a large sum of money if the civil end of the case was dropped. The proposal was rejected on the ground that the amount was too small. Mr. Wise named another figure several times larger than the one submitted by the art dealers, and this is now being considered.

Just what amount the United States attorney demanded could not be learned, but it is thought to be greatly in excess of $1,000,000. The Duveens are said to be ready to accept the Government's terms, in which event the money will be paid over within two weeks.

"The report that my clients have offered the Government any sum of money in order to keep out of jail is absurd," said Walter T. Stern of the law firm of Corbitt & Stern, 60 Wall Street. "No such a proposal was made."

"If any such proposal had been submitted to the Government I think I would know about it," said Mr. Wise. "You can say absolutely that no such an offer has come to me, either from the Duveens directly or from their lawyers, or through Washington channels. Moreover, if such an offer was made it would be declined. The criminal proceedings against the Duveens will be pushed to the bitter end."

While negotiations for the settlement of the civil suit are going on and preparations for the criminal trial are under way, it was rumored yesterday that it is doubtful if Henry J. Duveen, who went to Europe last December, will return for several months. A friend of his said yesterday that he was ill and that there is little chance of his returning to New York for some time. No date for the criminal trial has been fixed, but it was said yesterday that it is likely to take place next October.

Mr. Duveen went to Europe early last December, sailing on the Mauretania with his wife, a valet, and a maid. When he was arrested in October he was released under $75,000 bail. Ill-health was given as the cause of his going abroad. It was said yesterday that his health had not improved since he went away. He is now in Paris, it was said, having spent the Winter on the Riviera. His nephew, Benjamin Duveen, who was arrested with him and also indicted, is still here attending to the business of the firm.

Ever since the arrest of the Duveens the United States Attorney's office has been busy trying to find out just how much of the Duveen property they can lay hands on in the event of their being held guilty of the charge of undervaluing art objects they have brought into this country. While these undervaluations will reach $5,000,000, according to one report. Mr. Wise and his assistants, it is said, have figured out that they will not be able to collect more than $1,000,000 in cash from persons who still owe the firm for pictures and art objects purchased, while at a forced sale the goods seized will bring about $250,000, although they are valued at $600,000. Therefore, the United States Attorney is said to be willing to accept $1,250,000 from the firm to settle the civil suit.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Evening Times here quoted Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis to-day as stating in regard to the alleged offer of the Duveens of New York to pay more than $1,000,000 in exchange for the promise that there would be no jail sentences in their case: "The policy of securing jail sentences for rich lawbreakers will be followed out to the last letter. The Government will accept no compromise offers that have a string tied to them. No matter how much money the Duveen firm, or any other firm that has violated the law, offers to pay back, the Government will proceed with criminal prosecutions just the same."

Weds a Chinese Laundryman.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 28.—Following a long acquaintanceship beginning in a Methodist Sunday school in Wilmington, Del., Miss Annie Bennett, an American girl, and Chung Hun, a Chinaman, were married in the parsonage of Trinity Methodist Church here to-day by the Rev. Ross Slack. Chung Hun is a laundryman.

WEDDING BREAKS UP FAMILY.

Broker Wilson Objected, Arranged Separation, and Wife Asks Divorce.

Mrs. Frances Mary Wilson, who is suing her husband, Harley P. Wilson, a banker and broker, of 25 Broad Street, for divorce, applied yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Page for $7,500 counsel fees and $3,500 a month alimony. She also asked that a separation agreement, under which Wilson is paying her $900 a month, be set aside on the ground of fraud. Justice Page decided that pending a decision on the separation agreement, he could not allow Mrs. Wilson more than the amount it specified.

From the allegations on both sides, it appears that the domestic crisis in the Wilson family was brought about by the hasty marriage of their daughter, Alice, last Fall, when she was less than 16 years old, to B. Gerson Oppenheim, Jr., a twenty-one-year-old law clerk. Mrs. Wilson declared that her husband was furious over the marriage, blamed her for permitting it, told her that her action gave him a valid ground for separation, and by threats and fraud induced her to sign the agreement. He told her at the time, she charges, that unless she signed the agreement he would abandon her and live abroad besides cutting off the children in his will.

Wilson declares in his affidavit that he gave her $3,000 worth of bonds, all the furniture in their apartment at the Hotel Woodward, a 85 horse power limousine automobile, and other valuable considerations for signing the agreement. She has a large income, he asserts, property near Golden Gate Park in San Francisco valued at $15,000, and various gifts he made her, including 100 shares of Western Pacific Railroad stock, $7,000 bonds in the South Western Power Company, $3,000 in cash, and $30,000 worth of jewelry.

Among Mrs. Wilson's allegations which he denies is that he is now living at the Central Park Studios, 15 West Sixty-seventh Street, under the name of C. A. Davis, and that his apartment is also occupied by a woman, whose real name is Lena Dyke, but who is known as "Mrs. Davis." She also charges that Wilson took Lena Dyke to London, Paris, and Vienna.

Wilson says that two years ago he and his wife disagreed over the education and care of his daughter and of his son, Holt Chaddock Wilson, who is now a student in the Groff School, Deal Beach, N. J. She insisted, he says, on living at hotels and permitting the children to remain away from school as they pleased, beside encouraging them to neglect their studies and engage in aimless amusements. Finally, he recites, he decided to leave his wife, so that the children should not see and hear their parents continually quarreling. At that time, two years ago, a verbal separation agreement was entered into, which would have remained in force, he says, but for his wife's connivance with his daughter's marriage.

Wilson says that in the Summer of 1910 he found that his daughter Alice was receiving calls from men, though she was under 16 years old, "a mere child, practically uneducated." He told his wife, he says, that it was "improper and cruel to rob her of her childhood" and asked the men who were calling on his daughter to discontinue their attentions, particularly objecting to Oppenheim.

On Sept. 22, 1910, just before he was about to leave for Pueblo, Col., on an eight-day business trip, Wilson says he telephoned his wife and adjured her to keep a close watch over Alice. His wife, he declares, promised faithfully to follow his wishes. On his return, Oct. 1, he found that his daughter had gone to Baltimore and married Oppenheim.

He was amazed, he declares, to find that his wife planned the marriage. In a replying affidavit Mrs. Wilson says that she thought an annulment action would ruin her daughter's future, and that while she had not approved of the marriage, she thought it was best to let it stand.

MELLEN PRAISES MORGAN,

But Denies He Dominates the New Haven Road's Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 28.—President Mellen of the New Haven Railroad denied before the Connecticut Legislature this afternoon that the road is dominated by any clique of capitalist, or that J. P. Morgan has any influence over the road except that which comes from his superior intelligence.

"The railroad is in politics is the cry," said Mr. Mellen. "Every one who is defeated is sure it is so. Every one who is elected knows it was his own personal popularity which made him victorious. The facts are, the railroad is not in politics, but only God and its offiicals know how it keeps out, and the latter are at times in great doubt.

"They are pulled and hauled so to get in and defeat this man and elect the other, the only excuse I have for that having one leg longer than the other is that the pull is about equal on both legs, which has enabled me to walk thus far without a cane, but I am frequently lame and have to take a vacation about election time.

"Much mis-statement has been made regarding the control of the New Haven Road, the dominance of Mr. Morgan and other prominent capitalists who are on its Board of Directors. Let me assure you there is no control in the interest of any clique of the capitalists or parties representing any other property.

"The New Haven Road is independent of all control in the interest of any other road or company, and is likely to remain so, much more so now than formerly.

"Mr. Morgan is a most potent factor in the councils of the company, but it is not because of any stock ownership. It is because of his energy, virility, and his ability so marked that it commands respect and begets confidence. His influence is rather in spite of his wealth than because of it. No Director gives more freely of his time to the affairs of the company."

DIPHTHERIA SPREADS BALTIMORE ALARMED

16 BLOCKS QUARANTINED

Twenty-one Medical Students and Three Nurses Among the Victims—City Authorities Aroused.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 28.—With houses in sixteen city blocks and others in Roland Park, a fashionable suburb, under strict quarantine, four hospitals closed to the public except for emergency cases, and seventy-six positive cases of diphtheria under the surveillance of the Health Department, the diphtheria epidemic in Baltimore, which originated a week ago in Johns Hopkins Hospital, takes on a serious aspect.

The Episcopal Church Home and Infirmary in Broadway, a few blocks from the hospital, is closed, with three nurses down with diphtheria, infected, probably, by nurses or doctors connected with the hospital, as they have visited the Church Home. The Hebrew Hospital, directly opposite Johns Hopkins Hospital, also closed to-day to protect its patients. St. Joseph's Hospital, a large Catholic institution, some blocks away, has also closed its doors to any other patients and visitors as a precautionary measure.

There are now fifty-two cases of diphtheria isolated in Johns Hopkins Hospital and twenty-one medical students quarantined in their homes with the malady.

Aside from the nurses ill there are eleven suspicious cases in the Church Home. One thousand of the cultures taken by representatives of the Health Department from students and attendants of Johns Hopkins Hospital were examined by Dr. William Royal Stokes and a corps of assistants. Among these the twenty-one positive cases of diphtheria were found. These students became infected at the hospital. They are now scattered throughout the city, and, although the houses in which they have been are quarantined, there is danger of contagion to the other occupants of these houses.

The people in the entire northeastern section, as well as other parts of the city, are alarmed over conditions, for which many hold the Hopkins Hospital authorities responsible. So far as known, no investigation has yet been made as to how the disease obtained such a hold in such a perfectly sanitarily equipped hospital, or if such an inquiry has been made the results have not been made public.

The City Health Department is doing everything possible to prevent further spread of the disease.
